THE FIGHT: HOW DEMPSEY WON

Harding Signs Declaration of Peace

Rules, and Not Pay, Found Big Issue.

The threatened tieup of the country's transportation facilities has been averted. There will be no strike of rail workers.

Railway union leaders who have been in session here since Friday will hold other conferences today and possibly tomorrow. But the strike issue already has been definitely disposed of.

It was learned that radicals in the ranks of the union chiefs were won to conservatism chiefly by a recent change in complexion of the issue involved.

Contrary to the popular impression, a union leader said, the issue is not and has not been one solely concerning the 12 per cent wage reduction given effect July 1, in accordance with a decision rendered by the United States railroad labor board. Working rules constitute a more important factor, he said, and when this became generally understood the peace sentiment gained rapidly.

Question to Go to Vote.

When the conferences are finally concluded the question that brought 1,500 railroad labor representatives to Chicago will be sent back to the membership of such organizations as have not already taken a referendum vote on it.

Indications are that the result of any further voting will be virtualy dictated by the advice of leaders who are convinced of the futility of a general walkout. It certainly will not favor a strike.

Information from an unimpeachable source supports these conclusions.

While the railroad board's order has been a source of serious dissatisfaction to the 1,500,000 railway employés of the country, union leaders evidently accepted it as inevitable. They believe wages will be increased again when transportation traffic picks up.

Will Fight on Working Rules.

But the rail unions are intrenched for a last ditch fight on working rules, union chiefs state. When in April the labor board issued an order directing that the national working agreements in force since the government took over the roads should terminate July 1, organized labor lost one of the hardest fought battles in its history.

It now develops that this order, and not the wage reduction decision, created the dissatisfaction that started strike talk.

But last week the railroad labor board issued an addendum to its order abrogating the national agreements. It ruled that inasmuch as no substitute code had been settled upon by the railways and their employés, the national rules, excepting those applying to pay for overtime, should remain in force for an indefinite period.

Thus the rail workers at least temporarily retrieved something of what they had lost. It was this fact that "changed the complexion" of the issue.

Wage Issue Easily Met.

"If it had been merely the wage question," said one of the railway labor chiefs last night, "the delegates to these conferences would have disposed of that with a formal protest at the most. In fact, I don't think there would have been occasion for conferences.

"But the working rules are another story. They represented thirty years of fighting by railway union labor. When the order that was to do away with them struck us, we were assured that the individual roads would meet us half way in negotiating satisfactory substitute rules. But they have not done so."

However, reliable reports indicate that, in view of the crisis just passed, railroad officials are showing inclination to negotiate on working agreements.

B. M. Jewell, spokesman for the chief executives of the sixteen leading rail unions, is expected to issue a formal statement today or tomorrow outlining the policy decided upon at the conferences.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis may confer today or tomorrow with the chief executives of the sixteen leading railway labor organizations. Secretary Davis was at Mooseheart yesterday, where he was installed as one of the officers of the Loyal Order of Moose. He told a delegation of rail labor men who waited upon him he would take part in the Chicago conferences if invited to do so.

No Ceremony as President 'Ends the War'

Raritan, N. J., July 2.—President Harding signed the resolution of congress declaring the war with Germany and Austria at an end, today at the country estate of Senator Frelinghuysen here. The President, who is a guest of the senator over the holidays, affixed his signature at 3:10 this afternoon.

The resolution passed the senate Friday, it having been accepted by the house.

So that there might be no unnecessary delay in consummation of peace, the resolution was brought here by special messenger from Washington. The messenger left for the capital again tonight to complete the formalities of the declaration by depositing the document in the archives of the state department.

Little of the Dramatic.

There was little of the dramatic in the actual ceremony of giving Presidential approval to the measure. Returning here from a luncheon and golf game at the Somerville Hill Country club, the President found the White House messenger, E. W. Smithers, waiting for him on the veranda of the Frelinghuysen house.

Mr. Harding immediately put on his nose glasses and, sitting in a porch swing, examined the official copy of the resolution minutely. The signing took place at a small mahogany table in the adjacent living room in the center of a distinguished group, which included the President, host and hostess, Speaker Gillett of the house of representatives; Senator Kellogg of Minnesota, a member of the senate foreign relations committee; Senator Hale of Maine, and other members of the week-end party.

As the President's pen scratched out the final letters of his name, one of the group remarked:

"And That's That."

"Well, that's that, Mr. President."

"Yes, that's it," replied Mr. Harding, with a broad smile, and the others responded with a quick burst of handclapping as if the historic significance of the occasion had been borne in upon them.

No formal statement was made by the President in connection with the affixing of his signature and the consummation of the first formal step in the announced peace program of the administration.

The President returned the peace resolution as soon as it had been signed.

In signing the resolution the President used a pen sent to him for this purpose by Representative Porter of Pennsylvania, chairman of the house foreign affairs committee, and joint author of the measure. The pen will be returned to Mr. Porter as a souvenir.

VON BERNSTORFF'S WIFE, AMERICAN, REGAINS FORTUNE

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Justice William Hitz in equity court today directed Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian, to turn over forthwith property, money, stocks, and bonds valued at more than $1,000,000 to the law firm of Peaslee & Compton of New York, as agents for Countess Johanna von Bernstorff, wife of the former ambassador to the United States from Germany.

The countess, who is the daughter of the late Edward Luckemeyer, a New York merchant, filed suit on Feb. 21 last to recover this property, which she claimed was unlawfully seized by the alien property custodian under the trading with the enemy act.

Justice Hitz decided that none of this property came either directly or indirectly from any subject of Germany or Austria, and was, therefore, not liable to seizure.

CONSUELO VANDERBILT, WHO DIVORCED DUKE, WEDS FRENCH OFFICER

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1921.]

LONDON, July 2.—Notice has been given at the Westminster registry office in Covent Garden of the marriage of Consuelo, Duchess of Marlborough, and Col. Jacques Balsan.

Louis Jacques Balson, who himself gave the notice, described himself as a lieutenant colonel in the French army, retired, and gives his age as 52, while the age of the bride-elect is given as 44.

He is well known in London, where he was a member of the French aeronautical mission during the war. He is possessed of considerable wealth and is a member of a firm which manufactures uniforms and blankets for the French army.

PRESS DELAYS KEEP WHISKY FROM THE SICK

Springfield, Ill., July 2.—Every Illinois physician who writes a prescription for whisky and every druggist who fills one is a technical violator of the new state prohibition act, according to Attorney General Brundage's office.

The new law provides that physicians and druggists must obtain permits from the attorney general. Gov. Small's approval of the dry bill only a few hours before it became effective, July 1, allowed no time for the preparation and printing of permits, Mr. Brundage's assistants said.

Hundreds of applicants have been told during the last two days that they must wait until the attorney general's office has permits before any can be issued.

Crane's Trip Across Russia Prevented by Soviet Order

PEKING, July 2.—[By the Associated Press.]—The plans of Charles R. Crane, retiring American minister to China, to traverse Russia on the way to the United States have miscarried and he is turning back from Chita, seat of the government of the far eastern republic of Siberia, for Vladivostok. It is understood the soviets refused permission to Mr. Crane to proceed across Russia.

Brothers Commit Suicide Together as Business Fails

Grand Haven, Mich., July 2.—[Special.]—Fred Scott and his brother, 35 and 40, of the Scott Vaporizing company, Grand Rapids, committed suicide on the beach at Grand Haven Saturday by drinking chloroform. They recently failed in business.

CARPENTERS GO TO WORK TUESDAY

Return Pending Vote on New Agreement.

Carpenters engaged in construction work will return to their jobs on Tuesday, thus ending the tieup in the building trades occasioned by their inactivity.

This decision was made last night at a meeting of the carpenters' district council at 505 South State street. The men will go back at their old wage—$1.25 an hour—pending a referendum vote to be taken within two weeks to decide whether the carpenters will accept the tentative agreement entered into between their district council and the Associated Builders.

Status of Carpenters.

The employers have asked that wages be reduced from $1.25 to $1 an hour. After walking out, the carpenters, governed by a rule of their international organization, which says no outside arbitrator shall be used to settle disputes in regard to pay or working conditions, refused to be party to the building trades arbitraton before Judge Landis.

Then the tentative agreement, which is now being put to referendum vote, was entered into. By this the carpenters are to receive as a minimum wage the maximum wage which Judge Landis shall determine for any of the basic trades. In addition, they agree to discard a rule which says no building materials shall be used by them which have been made by nonunion labor. A section was substituted excluding materials made by prison labor only.

New President Installed.

Last night's meeting saw the installation of Harry Jensen, who recently defeated William Brims for the presidency of the Carpenters' District council. A few days ago Jensen and the Associated Builders were informed by Judge Landis that he did not believe their tentative agreement was good because it gave the carpenters a preferential rate.

It is rumored that the federal jurist will hand down a differential rate for the building trades in his decision, which is expected next week. Through such a decision the wage cut of some trades would be greater than that of others.

Extra Police for Grain Strike.

Last night, at the request of Capt. Joseph Smith of the South Chicago station, additional policemen were assigned to his district for strike duty. About 300 employés of nine grain elevators in South Chicago walked out when a 20 per cent reduction became effective, and trouble is feared between them and the men who have been hired to take their places.

TALE OF ROMANCE WITH DEMPSEY IS DENIED BY GIRL

New York, July 2.—[Special.]—Silvia Jocelyn of Hollywood, Cal., denied tonight that she was engaged to Jack Dempsey. She had been quoted in an afternoon paper as saying she would be married to Dempsey after the fight, "win or lose."

"This is outrageous," she said. "I never spoke to any reporter until after this story was published. I have known Mr. Dempsey some time, but our relations have been merely friendly and not sentimental.

GROSS RECEIPTS ABOVE $1,600,000; CROWD, 90,000

New York, July 2.—Gross gate receipts of more than $1,600,000 for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight were announced by Tex Rickard tonight. Rickard said it probably would be several days before a final and accurate accounting could be made.

So far as could be judged tonight, the paid admissions were in excess of 80,000, which, combined with various free admissions, raised the total attendance to a trifle more than 90,000, or approximately the seating capacity of the huge arena.

Man vs. Superman; Lightning Wins.

BY EYE WITNESS.

Ringside, Jersey City, N. J., July 2:—[Special.]—Come, words, and make me pictures for the loved ones at home. Catch for me now the knife edged rigor of this epic tussle in its crimson climax and drive that instant into the records with some semblance of the certainty Dempsey now is driving it in on a man's integument.

A hundred and eighty thousand eyes are blazing. Ninety thousand throats are constricted to make a screaming sound. A hundred and eighty thousand hands are now clinched tight to plank seats and now are fumbling wildly at nothing.

One Roar of Excitement.

Round one is surging well into its second minute. Already Carpentier's face has taken on the aspect of uncooked meat. I am holding tight to my pine board desk with one hand and writing with the other the words "Carp red meat." The screaming that fills this pine bowl like the voices of angry gulls shades from unhallowed exultancy to purposeless rage. It means neither special joy nor specific rage. It is the voice of excitement that no more knows control than does the wind on a wild night in winter.

Bear vs. Serpent.

The second round tells you that if Dempsey is a bear Carpentier is a serpent. But the dart and the hiss of the serpent do not weigh against the impact of the bear.

Excitement grows less and less articulate. There are surges of it like infantile crying, coming from a thousand nurseries. Occasional words dart out of this maelstrom of squalling. Carey Orr is next to me and is saying over and over again, "This is a wonderful fight; this is a wonderful fight; this is a wonderful fight." It is the formula by which the creator of Col. Cootie is holding on to himself.

The Dance of Doom.

Round three is under way. Carpentier is dancing with pain and anxiety. The movement would be grotesque—would make you laugh—if the meaning of it were not so bitter. It is the dance of doom. A bear whose shoulders are working with the drive of a catapult is closing in upon him. This is Dempsey's in-fighting. It is astounding. It brings gasps of relish from the experts near by. Under ordinary conditions those would be smacks of relish. Now they are gasps. The body functions only in the ultimate in such moments as this.

The miracle of imperturbability amid this mania is Dempsey. Some will tell you some day that there was passion in his face. That is not true. It is a face of carved wood. If there is any expression in it it is the expression of burly intentness.

How a Fighter Falls.

Round Four—Ah, it is worth ten years of tired living to see that mad spring of Carpentier when the sound of nine fell from Ertle's lips. No serpent now is the Gaul. Something finer, grander. It is the panther's last, mad, glorious spring. Then collapse and merciful oblivion.

That upward spring, that last dash into more punishment, was an exultant thing that probably only the best men of this "school for humble heroes," as Doyle has called the prize ring, could master.

Thrills, Pride—and Pity!

Amid the thrills which this leap into the face of doom sends curdling over me I am both humble and proud. 'Tis the dare between the spiritual fiber of this man from Lens and mine that crushes humility in on me. It is the sheer taut glory of his deed that makes your shoulders straighten with pride. You become tremendously comprehensive in this instant. You are patting the whole human race on the back.

Then pity envelops you. There he lies who less than a quarter hour before was so brave and fine and debonair. I have seen them lying that way in the wheat fields between the Danube and Bucharest. Crumpled they lay, and with the head resting on the forearm—always with the head resting on the forearm, like children, very weary. How clearly it comes back.

But let us not sob the moments away. What makes the prize ring endurable is that the anguish there received is evanescent. In another quarter hour the man from Lens will be smiling again. It will be a wan smile, but a brave one.

A Dempsey of Bronze.

Dempsey wears triumph with decency. Thrice he waves his hands aloft. That is all.

It is still the countenance of carved mahogany—nay, of graven bronze.

What is the concluding note in this

GEORGES BREAKS RIGHT THUMB

NEW YORK, July 2.—Georges Carpentier broke his right thumb in two places and suffered a bad wrist sprain in the second round of his fight with Jack Dempsey in Jersey City this afternoon. This was reported by Dr. Joseph Connolly of Glen Cove, N. Y., who examined him at his training camp tonight. Carpentier's other external injuries were a slight cut under the left eye and a swollen nose.

Pierre Mallet, friend and adviser, said that Georges received the injury to his thumb eight days ago while working with a sparring partner. His manager did not care to say anything about it at the time, as he felt the announcement might be taken as preparing the groundwork for an excuse.

When told tonight Carpentier had broken a thumb, Jack Dempsey said he had not heard of it.

"If that is so, I am very sorry it happened," he said.

Why Crush a Gallant Youth?—Hammond

BY PERCY HAMMOND.

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—Now that Peace again sends its gentle rays upon a shivering and discommoded Earth, and the tramp, the outcries, and the fearful roar of the pugilists has subsided, we ask ourselves, What was it all about?

Thirty acres of us sat sweating and curious today in a stupendous frame shack in Jersey City and, at large cost and with considerable inconvenience, observed the lethal Dempsey give the boot to La Belle Carpentier in ten minutes of intimate brutality.

Was it worth our while? Did those ten minutes of jabs and punches, clouts and carnage, reward us for our travail and our outlay? Did the sight of the vin rouge oozing pathetically from Carpentier's handsome nostrils repay us for our investment?

Valiant Hero's Congé.

Did we enjoy enough his pitiful prostrations upon the floor, his gallant despair, his futile but intrepid determination, sufficiently to make up for our difficult pilgrimage to Jersey City.

You who were not there may ask, as little Peterkin asked his granddad about the battle in Blenheim:

"But what good came of it at last?"
Quoth Little Peterkin;
"Why, that I cannot tell," said he,
"But 'twas a famous victoree."

And 'twas, I dare say, a famous victory. A big fellow beat a little fellow to death. A heavy, black, extensive, forbidding, cruel, painsgiving engine obliterated a weak and imprudent though thrifty atom which lay in his track.

No Chance for Invader.

It may have been magnificent, but it was not war. Neither was it sport, for the small and gallant Lensman, though beautiful, muscular, good to his folks, and with an oaken heart, stood no chance against the inevitable American.

You may or you may not admire our pugilisitic standard bearer, but you must admit that when he gets up there, as the saying is, he is a pestilence, a resistless tuberculosis, a mean influenza, an epitome of all the bad diseases which assail the fisticuffers.

Well, here is what we got for our time and trouble today in Jersey City's field of the cloth of gold. I figure in my inventory that your imagination works as well at a prize fight as it does, for instance, at the grave of Keats. You get nothing from a prize fight that you do not take to it.

Nice Women There.

An amphitheater, incredible in size, filled with 90,000 of you and your fellow men. Numerous nice women are there also, and somehow you like them for it, even though you believe that woman's place is in the home.

Hours of preliminary bouts in which dull tenth raters try to slug other dull tenth raters; and you wonder why there is such bad showmanship, particularly because you are told that the Ringlings are financing Mr. Rickard in his extravagance and you know that the Ringlings are showmen.

Warm water at two bits a tin cupful, cross Jersey City policemen who slug photographers and any one else they can lay their hands on—heat, rain, discomfort, languors, and ennui happen until a cry is heard and then down one of the long aisles of the arena the helpless challenger approaches.

Stillness of Impending Death.

I never heard 90,000 people make so little noise as these 90,000 made as Carpentier treaded the via Dolorosa which led to the shambles. A moment

KNOCKOUT IN 4 ROUNDS AFTER SAVAGE BATTLE

Big Throng Sees End of France's Hero.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Jersey City, N. I., July 2.—(Special.)—With the memory of three crunching blows —those punches that only a Jack Dempsey propels—vividly before him, Georges Carpentier, the champion of Europe, may now return heavily laden with American money to France and tell of this history-making battle of today, in which the world's champion knocked him out cold in the fourth round. The finish came just one minute and sixteen seconds after the gong had started them into action in this session.

A Battle of Thrills.

It was a great fight, it was a great Dempsey, and it was a great Carpentier, and in this wonderful stadium which Tex Rickard planted in Jersey City as a monument to pugilism there was an army of fans. It was a battle in which thrill followed thrill almost as rapidly as a machine gun spits its deadly fire.

Dempsey's defense of the title was characteristic of the man, but Georges Carpentier, this man of courage from across the water, fought the battle of a gladiator, the type of a struggle that is expected of a hero.

When he entered the ring there was a smile on his face; when he was taken out on the arm of Francois Deschamps, his manager, he was smiling. He can smile in defeat as well as in triumph.

Champion Still a Champion.

Never was there such a heartbreaking struggle as that of this afternoon, and that fourth round will remain for all time in the memory of every one of those 90,000 men and women who saw the world's champion emerge triumphant in this struggle with the man from France.

Carpentier, who climbed through the ropes a despised outsider in the betting, was far from that. The Frenchman had an outside chance, to be sure, but it was a mighty good outside chance. It was a chance that would have given him victory had the battle been against any man other than Jack Dempsey.

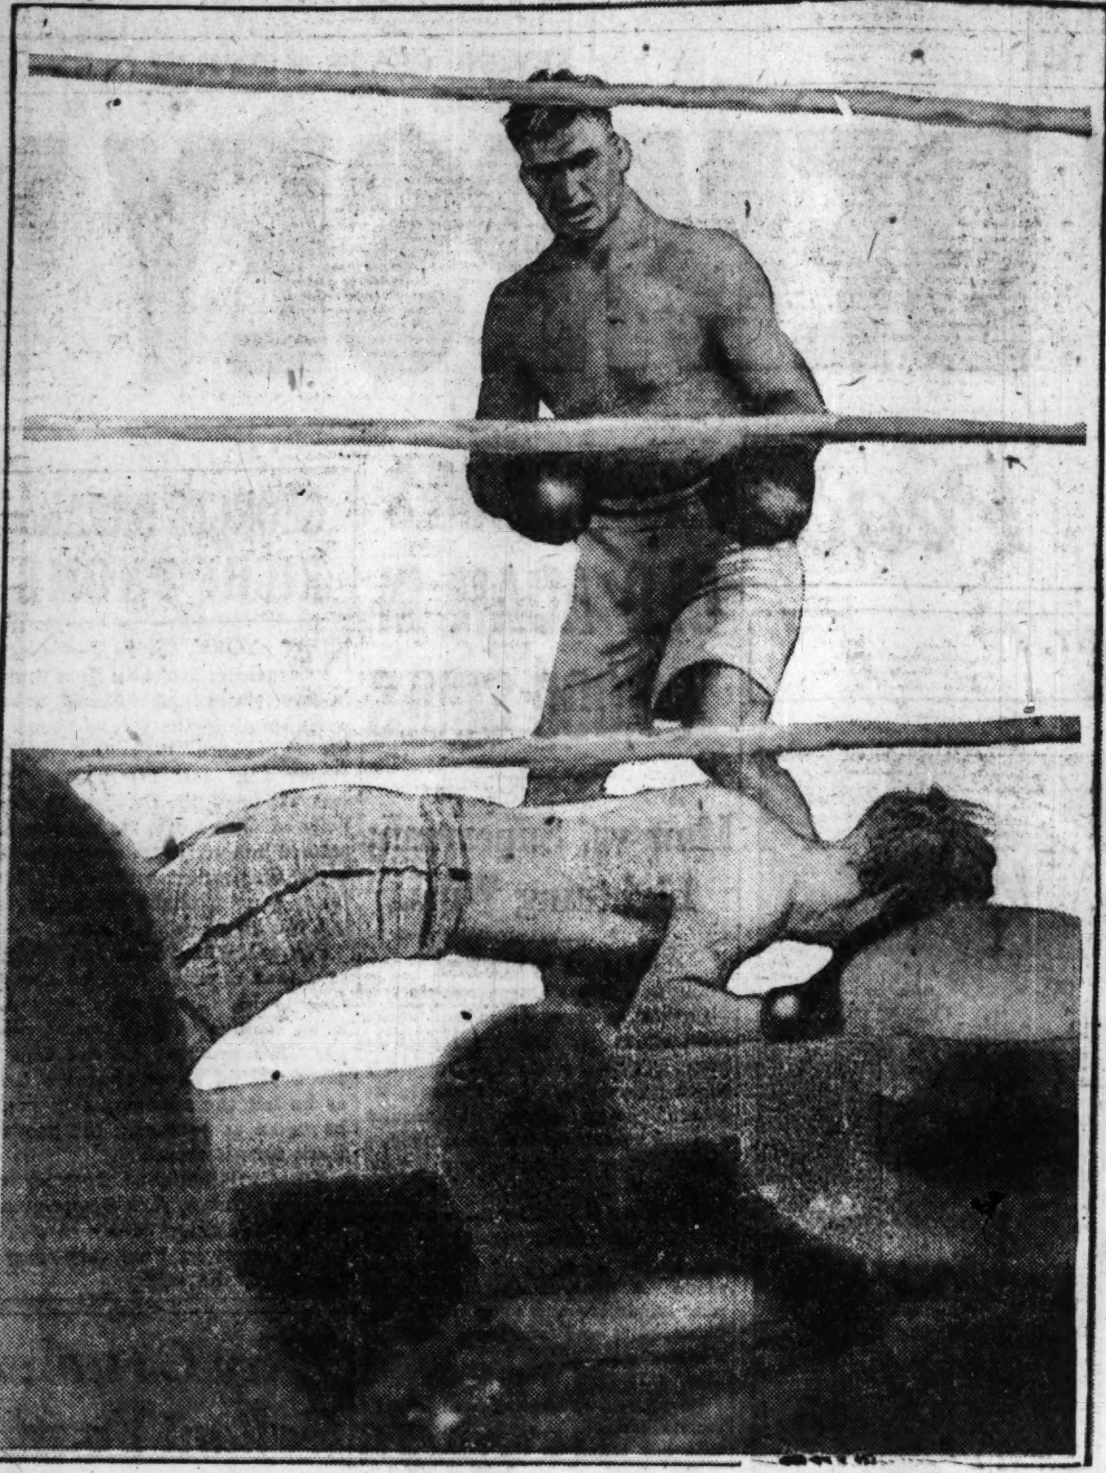
Story of Fatal Fourth.

We'll explain more fully about that outside chance later on, and tell here of what happened in that thrilling fourth round climax. We saw this man Dempsey, who had been punished to a realization that Carpentier was a formidable rival, return to the old viciousness, to the ripping, tearing, merciless crusader, and somehow we seemed to know that something was going to "drop" in this round that boded no good for Georges.

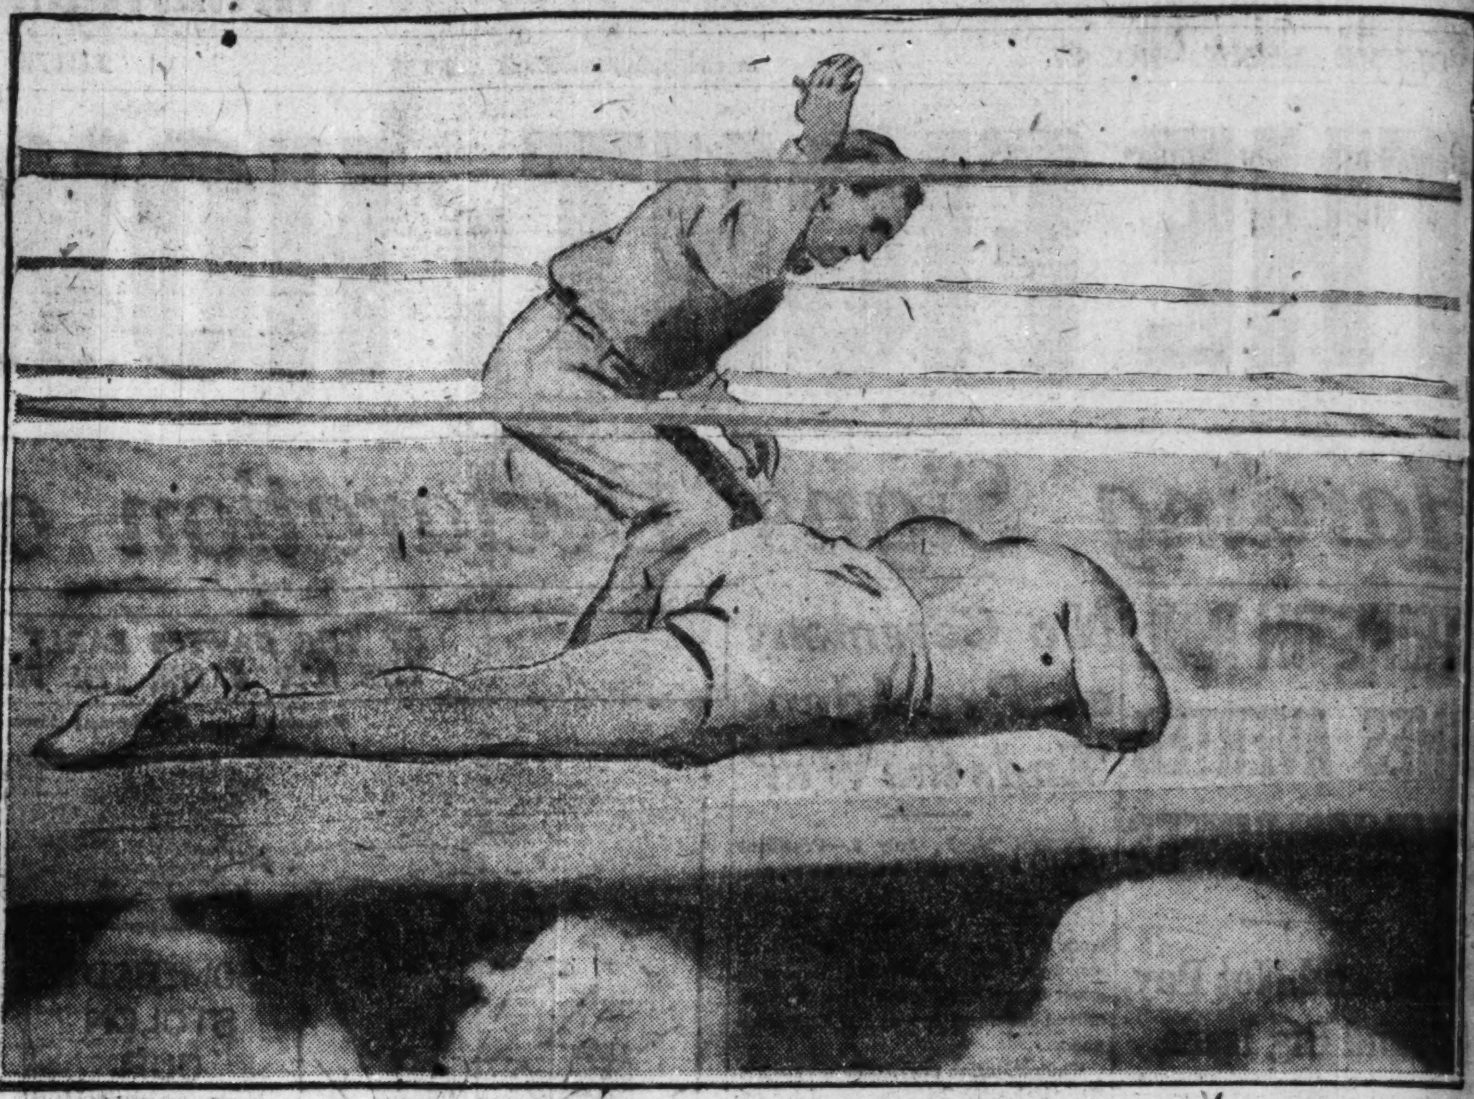
The bell rang. Out of his corner came Dempsey, an expression on his face that we hadn't seen in the three previous rounds. He was out of his chair like a catapult, and he was far past midring when they met.

It wasn't like it had been in the first three rounds, when the champion resorted to boxing himself out of the unpleasant and dangerous situations which Georges had forced on him. Those who saw "the heavy clouds" and his hard scowl saw

TELEGRAPHIC SKETCH DIAGRAMS OF THE KNOCKDOWN AND KNOCKOUT



THE FIRST KNOCKDOWN, IN THE FOURTH ROUND, JUST BEFORE THE KNOCKOUT. —Carpentier is shown lying face down on the canvas slowly raising himself on elbows and knees. He lay there until the count of nine, when he jumped to his feet to receive in a few seconds the blow that sent him to the mat to be counted out.



COUNTING OUT CARPENTIER.—Referee Ertle is shown bending over the prostrate Frenchman, tolling off the fatal 10 seconds. Carpentier had collapsed as Dempsey landed heavy rights and lefts on his stomach as Carpentier got to his feet from the first knockdown.

Relentlessly he tore after Carpentier, now crouching, now with the old swaying motion of his body which gives him the terrific power of punch. Georges met the onslaught courageously. He might have stalled, he might have blocked, and he might have clinched to ward off the impending punishment.

But Georges didn't do that. He tossed off the prospective opportunity and made it a man to man struggle while the gigantic throng thrilled almost to hysterical state, hushed, then yelled tumultously.

And this is what the mob saw:

Carpentier, turning loose all the power he could put in his famous right hand, shot Dempsey dead to the jaw. But Dempsey was fighting now and not boxing. If we could have read what was in the mind of the world's champion it is certain that if put in words it would be transcribed something like this:

"Come on Georges, we'll settle this here and now. It is either you or I"—and so Dempsey, like the man from France, played the game toe to toe and punch for punch for all that was in them.

Both Dead Game to Core.

No two gamer men ever settled an issue like that of today and as they moved here and there across the canvas, the world's champion always crowding his foe and taking what Georges had to offer in the way of stinging blows, we saw the finish in sight.

Georges showed the super speed beyond all question, and that speed enabled him to hit oftener than Dempsey. With the accuracy of gun fire he shot left hooks to Jack's chin, then quickly followed with hard rights on the jaw.

Dempsey's jaw was set, his teeth in a tight clinch, and never once did he give evidence of flinching, although in those punches there was a world of sting.

But while Georges was doing this Dempsey relentlessly plied his punching trade to a most efficient degree. He did not do as Carpentier was doing, but turned his attention to his opponent's body.

The face of Carpentier took on increased sallowness and we saw the diminishment of speed in the Frenchmen's feet as he sought to carry the pace that was being set for him by the world's champion.

And Then—It Happens.

For fifty seconds this terrific bombardment continued—then it happened. Near a neutral corner into which Dempsey had forced Carpentier there was a rapid exchange of terrific blows. Suddenly, Dempsey switched from the body to the head and that left hand, which all during the training session he had been "instructing" in the art of forcing sleep on his sparring partners, shot to Georges' jaw.

That blow traveled no more than ten inches, but behind it was the power of a mule's kick. It landed flush on the jaw of Georges. His knees sagged a trifle, but before Dempsey could draw back for a follow up shot, the Frenchman crumpled in a nose dive to the canvas.

He lay there on the canvas, a quivering hulk, with his nose buried in the resin.

But Jac wasn't the winner—not yet, but soon.

Referee Ertle of Jersey City, the man to whom had been intrusted the task of doing the counting, leaned over the fallen Carpentier and carefully tolled off the seconds. He reached eight, and there was Carpentier still reclining on his face on the floor.

No one in the vast throng expected to see Georges get up in the brief time left. Dempsey, the ideal exponent of the restless age, was prowling around the ring. He was waiting for what few expected would happen, but what did happen.

He's Up Again and Fighting.

Ertle said "nine" and as the Frenchman heard it he bounded to his feet with the speed of a panther. It was a wonderful exhibition of recuperation.

But there in front of him was Dempsey and—the inevitable. On came Jack, and as the befuddled Carp sought to protect his jaws by wrapping his arms around them, the world's champion, his fighting brain working faster than the fists and legs of Georges had traveled when the round started, once more switched his attack to the body. Crash went Dempsey's left and the punch caught the Frenchman right under the heart.

It is hard to figure why that terrific blow didn't knock the heart clear out of Carpentier's body. It was a heart breaker and it was the second of those three wallops that Georges Carpentier probably always will remember.

The third came like a flash out of the dark blue sky, which had started to leak a few drops of rain. It was "Old Mr. Haymaker"—a straight right hand drive which was delivered with all the force that the world's champion could put behind it.

It landed squarely in the pit of Georges' stomach and that was the end. Carpentier collapsed in a helpless heap on his face on the floor.

No Chance to Rise Now.

It was the hardest punch of the fight and this time there wasn't any chance for the fistic hero of France to regain his feet.

Referee Ertle once more took up his task of tolling off the seconds. While he was doing it we saw the helpless but courageous Carpentier shake himself as he lay there in the effort once more to arise. It was impossible, for that fearful punching and Nature had him licked. Ertle said "ten" while the prowling and scowling Dempsey stood still and waited.

But this time Dempsey seemed to understand that his work had been finished. He simply waited for the referee to do his work, then stepped briskly over to his fallen foe, lifted him bodily from the canvas, and carried him to his chair in the corner.

That act of Dempsey earned him the applause of the multitude, something that was sadly lacking when the world's champion entered the ring. But Dempsey did not hurry away then to his own corner or to his dressing room.

Waits for His Recovery.

He stood there in front of Carpentier, holding Georges' gloved hand in his own waiting for the badly punished Frenchman to recover. It took Carp about five minutes to gaze around and find arena scenery the same as it had been before the blow was struck.

Just one minute and sixteen seconds of the round had been fought.

We have said that thrill after thrill featured every round of the four, and we shall start at the beginning and tell what happened before the fourth round, so disastrous for Carpentier.

We saw Carpentier climb through the ropes first, some six minutes before Dempsey parted the hemp.

The fleet of camera shooters cluttered up and snapped a man whom it was thought might "crack" when he stood face to face with Dempsey, the dark skinned "punching devil" who sat in the other corner. But men of the Carpentier type do not "crack." We can understand that now.

For instance, here was Carpentier, his face wreathed in smiles from the time he climbed through the ropes in his own corner. When Dempsey came along and entered the ring at the same corner, Georges grabbed Jack by the hand and gave him a friendly slap on the back.

Scowl Replaces Smile.

Jack smiled at the greeting, but only momentarily, and quickly a serious expression took its place. It was the Dempsey fighting face. When Dempsey was introduced the huge mob did not give him much of a hand, but when Announcer Joe Humphries introduced Georges the stadium rocked with cheers. It lasted fully three minutes.

So Dempsey had something on his mind when he started the ruthless business. We have mentioned this because it is our belief that the world's champion was hurt by the way he was received. Undoubtedly it affected his work.

We have mentioned before that it was late in the fight before Dempsey got to battling in the old Dempsey form. He didn't seem to hit his stride and he was lacking in style in the first two sessions.

We saw him start out in the first round in the manner of a man who is a boxer, not a fighter. He appeared to forget his shift, which is one of his greatest assets. Then, too, he wasn't hitting in the way Dempsey can hit and did hit later in the battle.

Georges Shows His Caliber.

The clever Frenchman opened up the speed notch like a flash after the gong sounded and stepped right into Dempsey, pegging him on the nose with as pretty a left jab as any one would care to see. Then a moment later he whipped a sweet right stab to Jack's jaw, and the world's champion there and then began to understand this was a real fight.

But Dempsey could not unbuckle; he didn't step as he can step and this Frenchman who weighed sixteen pounds less forced him around the ring. Can anyone who knows Dempsey imagine any one, let alone a lighter man, forcing the Utah mauler around a ring? We can't. But Carp did it, which shows the way Dempsey was battling.

Carp showered and pasted Jack with an assortment of lefts and rights which landed accurately. Ten seconds before the end of the session saw the Frenchman leading by a wide margin, but Dempsey, aroused to desperation, managed to tear loose near the finish and was pommeling the European champion merrily on the ropes.

He pushed Georges through the ropes just before the bell, but that finish by Jack was the only thing that enabled him to get anywhere near an even break on the round.

Yankee Gets First Blood.

It was in this furious attack that Dempsey gained the first blood of the battle. He poked a hard right to Georges' nose and split it. That wound spurted the crimson in the remaining rounds. Dempsey, though punched badly in this session, showed no marks.

Those who saw the second round surely were well fed on thrills and we saw Jack Dempsey in a condition we never have seen him in before. Carpentier, who had gathered confidence by his success of the previous round, got the knockout fever and went out to stop the world's champion.

How close he came we probably never shall know, for Dempsey is about the only man that can give reliable information on this point.

But with the clang of the gong Carpentier set sail on his title cruise. With speed and cleverness and all the steam he could put in his right hand he nailed Dempsey time and again, and the strange sight presented to the mob was that of a world's champion careening around the ring with shaky knees, desperately holding when the opportunity presented and blocking all the punches he could.

It looked like curtains for Jack Dempsey to some folks, but they were not reckoning on the real Dempsey. He fought the tough round out and lost it by as far as from here to Chicago.

The turn in the tide came for Dempsey in the next round, and it was here that the titleholder came into his own style. He took the aggressive, and, instead of Carpentier doing the forcing, Jack forced Carpentier to break ground continuously, and the Frenchman often was on the run. A wicked left hand crash from Dempsey opened a small cut under Georges' left eye. There was a little spill of blood from this and the nose wound inflicted early in the bout, but Carpentier suffered no inconvenience or material damage.

Dempsey had Carp nailed against the ropes in the Dempsey corner and was punishing him with hard body punches when the gong sounded. Carp clinched to save himself, but this was the only time in the battle that he really resorted to drastic defensive tactics.

Dempsey had made up considerable of the lost ground in this round, and when they went to their corners Jack was by far the stronger of the two. Georges seemed a trifle leg weary.

We have already told about that fourth round, but there is something more that should be said about this wonderful battle before we finish. We have told of how Dempsey fought, but have not told much about the style, the cleverness, and, last but not least, the fighting brain of this intellectual man from across the ocean.

We have heard much about how François Deschamps, the gent of hypnotic power, is the brain power that sends Carpentier along to achievement. Just once this afternoon we heard the French manager shout an admonition to Georges in French.

—And Every Inch a Man!

Carpentier doesn't need any assistance. He is a great fighter, a far better fighter than any one in America suspected. We think that there isn't a man of his weight in the world today who can lick him. He weighed just 172 pounds this afternoon and conceded a matter of sixteen pounds to a world's champion.

Also there may have been some suspicion lurking in the minds of fistic fans that Carpentier has a "glass" jaw and that he cannot "take it." All wrong there, brother! Anybody who gets shot on the chin the way Carpentier was cracked in the fourth round and get up before ten seconds is told off is taking something, believe us.

Carpentier's right hand punch is all that it has been advertised, which means that it is very good, but the real beauty about it is the accuracy with which he delivers it. He nailed Dempsey with it so often this afternoon that Jack must have thought that a string was attached to it and his chin. I do not remember once that he missed with it, except after the going got rough in the fourth.

But while the wallop is mighty effective, it is just what we have said about it. It's a stinger, but it doesn't rock a man to sleep, especially one of the sturdy type of Jack Dempsey, with one application. If it had Dempsey's power behind it, Georges Carpentier would now be champion of the world.

However, we must take off our hats to that sweet Dempsey wallop. When it collides with the "spot" somebody drops. Dempsey hits harder with either hand than Carpentier does with his flashy right.

We might also add right here that there is no disgrace in taking a defeat such as Carpentier took today, but—vive L'Amerique; vive la France.

The fight in Jersey City terminated at about 2:29, Chicago time. Less than three hours later the pictures of the first knockdown and the knockout were "on the wire," being transmitted by telegraph from the office of the New York Daily News, to the art department of THE TRIBUNE.

The fastest regular train service between the two cities is twenty hours; the fastest airplane flight on record consumed 6 hours and 50 minutes.

At 5:15 THE TRIBUNE artists were decoding and transcribing the first signals flashed from the New York wire.

The method of sending and receiving is as follows:

A specially prepared transparent screen, criss-crossed with horizontal and perpendicular lines (each line being numbered) was laid on the photographs of the fight as soon as the plate made at the ringside had been printed in the New Yorw News studio.

A paper copy of the code screen in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S art department formed the "receiving apparatus."

An artist in the New York office coded the outlines of the figures in the photograph, the key being the numbers of the screen lines transversing the outlines of the bodies. These numbers, wired to Chicago, were decoded by THE TRIBUNE'S artists, and transcribed to the paper print, from which the images were traced to drawing board, and the picture completed.

Each of the pictures required three hours to be completed, from the time of arrival of the code and consequently "beat" the best possible airplane flight by a tidy margin. Though mechanical in effect, they are not "faked" by "telegraphic description," but are accurate diagram pictures of the positions of the fighters at the "knockdown" and the "knockout."

THE STORY OF THE FIGHT BY ROUNDS

FIRST ROUND—Carpentier started with a left smash to Dempsey's jaw and tried again with his right. They clinched. Carpentier uppercut Dempsey in the clinch and stayed in close. In another clinch Dempsey hit the Frenchman with three right hand punches to the head. They then locked arms. Georges missed with a terrible right hand swing to the head and they went into a clinch, where Dempsey did better inside work. Dempsey began smashing Carpentier all around the ring, Carpentier running away. The Frenchman tried with his right once more and Jack nailed him with a right hook to the chin. Carpentier at this point was taking an awful beating. Carpentier fell half way out of the ring from a right drive to the head. The foreigner tried his famous right at the bell. Dempsey's round.

SECOND ROUND—Dempsey came out crouching and tried with his left hook. Carpentier sent a hard right to Dempsey's mouth and they clinched, Dempsey forcing the Frenchman around the ring. Carpentier landed a light right on Dempsey's ear and a clinch followed. Deschamps began yelling for his man to stay away. Carpentier suddenly shot his right across to the jaw and staggered Dempsey. Dempsey went back reeling. Carpentier followed with a left shot to the American's face. The champion was dazed and very wild. Carpentier immediately whipped another right to Dempsey's head. It became a roughhouse fight, with science thrown to the winds. The Frenchman was very crafty and aiming for Dempsey's face. Both got in some hard drives during the mixup. Carpentier's round.

THIRD ROUND—They both raced to the center. Dempsey tried with a left hook, but was short. Carpentier smashed the champion twice with right hand blows. Dempsey began holding and could not seem to get away from the challenger's hard drives. Dempsey sent a left uppercut to the Frenchman's mouth and commenced chasing the lighter man. The champion drove three lefts to Georges' face. Carpentier's left eye was bleeding, but he tried once more with his left. Dempsey smashed the challenger three times to the stomach and once to the face, slowing him. Dempsey shot a left hook to his opponent's jaw. Carpentier was tired, but kept trying with that famous right for the head. Dempsey's round.

FOURTH ROUND—Dempsey rushed Carpentier to the ropes and, with a terrific right to the heart, made him wince. Carpentier landed a right to the head and tried to hang on. Dempsey missed a left and then landed a series of rights and lefts to the body. The continual bombardment was rapidly weakening Carpentier. The Frenchman began to sag at the knees and, after about fifty-five seconds of punishment, crumpled up on the floor from the vicious right to the body and left to the chin. Carpentier was not unconscious but in sore distress as he lay curled up on his side. Referee Ertle began the count as he stood alongside the prostrate Frenchman, while Dempsey leaned against the ropes with a sardonic grin, watching the rise and fall of the referee's hand. At the count of nine Georges climbed to the knees and arose in a game but weakened fashion. The champion was upon him in a flash and another crushing left to the midsection, followed by a flashing right to the chin with all Dempsey's weight behind it, hurled Carpentier to the floor again with a thud that could be heard many feet from the ring. Again Carpentier lay on his side while the count went on, and at the sound of eight he made a desperate attempt to regain his feet. He raised his body part way from the floor with his right hand, but the effort was futile, and two seconds later the European champion was counted out on his back. Then Dempsey lifted the battered blonde fighter in his arms as if he were a baby and carried him carefully to Deschamps. The time of the final round was one minute and sixteen seconds.

WILLARD, DEMPSEY AGAIN TO MEET? ARENA TO STAND

New York, July 2.—Tex Rickard announced tonight that he had no intention of demolishing the Jersey City arena until late next fall, but, on the contrary, planned to hold several championship battles between now and Labor day. He said he had no particular opponents for Dempsey in mind, but would consider any heavyweight who might prove capable of putting up an interesting contest with the champion.

He evaded a direct query as to whether he would stage a return battle between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey on Labor day. He said, however, that he had the assurance of both Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns, that the champion would be available for a contest on Sept. 5.

"I have not heard from Willard recently," said Rickard, "but if big Jess wants another chance at the champion and will agree to put himself in the proper physical condition I am willing to stage such a match in the Jersey City arena."

Willard Is Willing.

Lawrence, Kas., July 2.—Jess Willard, former world champion, to whose crown Jack Dempsey succeeded at Toledo July 4, 1919, will box Dempsey on Labor day if arrangements for such a bout are made, Willard said tonight.

TAKE DEMPSEY'S CASH OUTSIDE JERSEY, REPORT

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—The report that the deposit guaranteeing World's Champion Jack Dempsey his share of the purse money had been attached by a motion picture promoter seems slightly erroneous.

The attachment was denied both by Rickard and Bob Edgren, the official stakeholder. It was not denied that attachment proceedings had been attempted, but it was intimated that all the Sherlock Holmses in Christendom never could discover the hiding place of the cache.

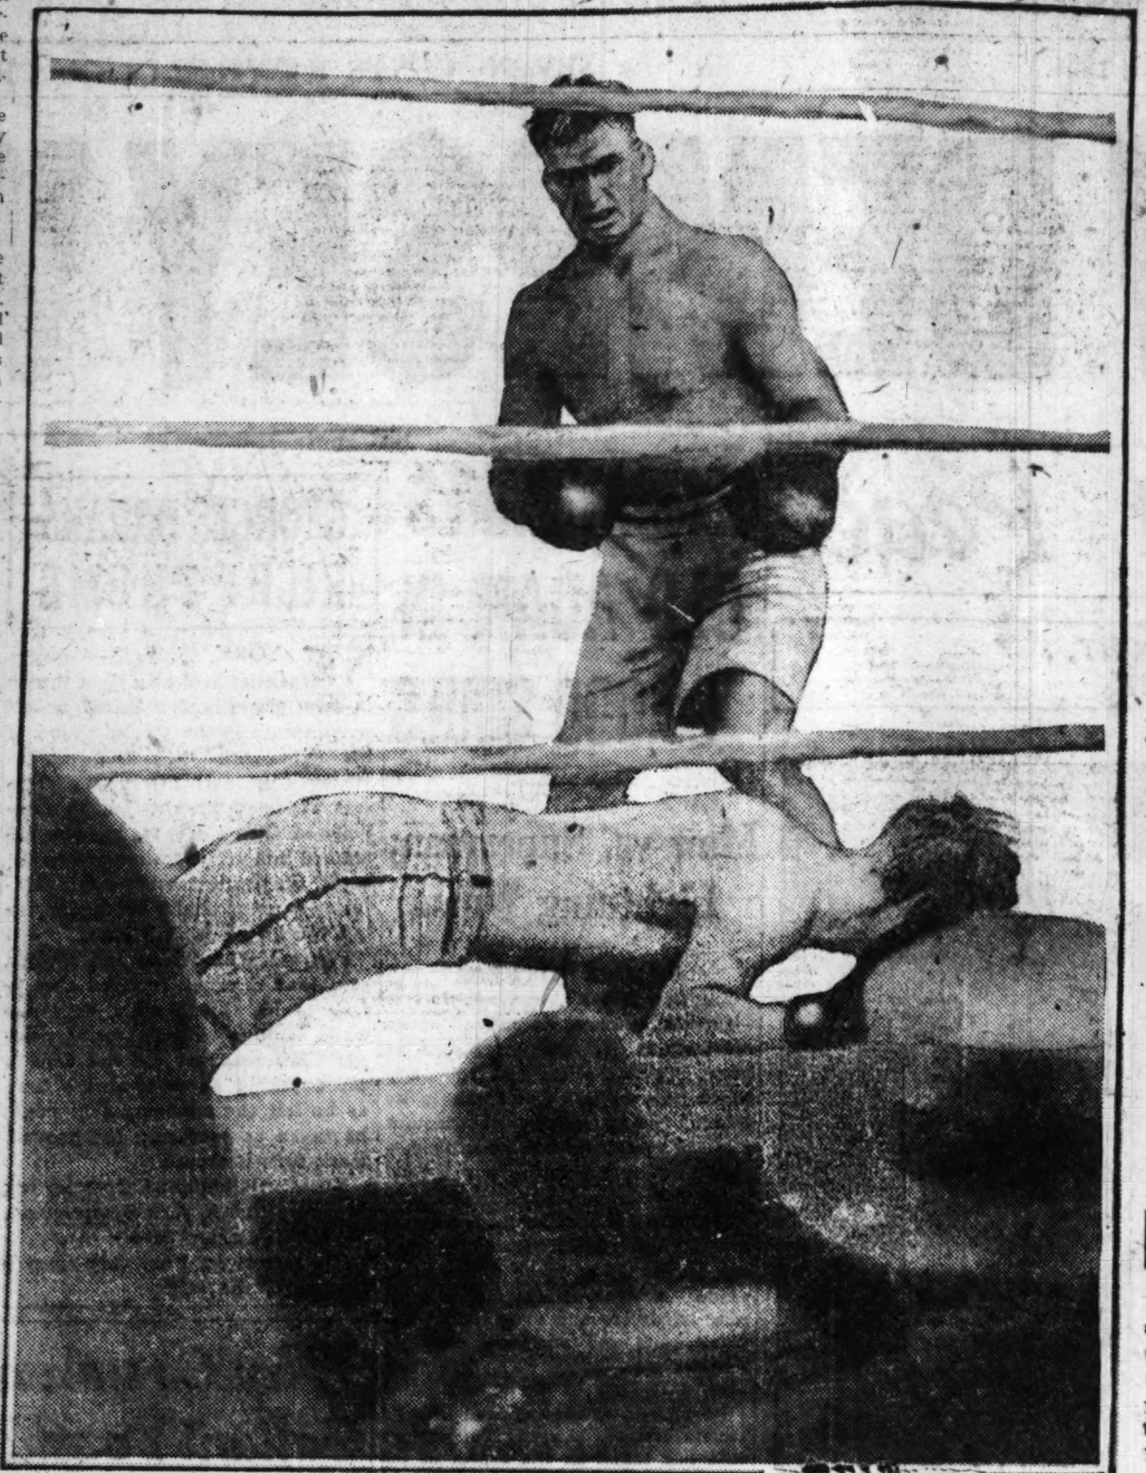
TELEGRAPHIC SKETCH DIAGRAMS OF THE KNOCKDOWN AND KNOCKOUT



THE FIRST KNOCKDOWN, IN THE FOURTH ROUND, JUST BEFORE THE KNOCKOUT.—Carpentier is shown lying face down on the canvas slowly raising himself on elbows and knees. He lay there until the count of nine, when he jumped to his feet to receive in a few seconds the blow that sent him to the mat to be counted out.

Relentlessly he tore after Carpentier, now crouching, now with the old swaying motion of his body which gives him the terrific power of punch. Georges met the onslaught courageously. He might have stalled, he might have blocked, and he might have clinched to ward off the impending punishment.

But Georges didn't do that. He tossed off the prospective opportunity and made it a man to man struggle while the gigantic throng thrilled almost to hysterical state, hushed, then yelled tumultously.

And this is what the mob saw:

Carpentier, turning loose all the power he could put in his famous right hand, shot Dempsey dead to the jaw. But Dempsey was fighting now and not boxing. If we could have read what was in the mind of the world's champion it is certain that if put in words it would be transcribed something like this:

"Come on Georges, we'll settle this here and now. It is either you or I"—and so Dempsey, like the man from France, played the game toe to toe and punch for punch for all that was in them.

Both Dead Game to Core.

No two gamer men ever settled an issue like that of today and as they moved here and there across the canvas, the world's champion always crowding his foe and taking what Georges had to offer in the way of stinging blows, we saw the finish in sight.

Georges showed the super speed beyond all question, and that speed enabled him to hit oftener than Dempsey. With the accuracy of gun fire he shot left hooks to Jack's chin, then quickly followed with hard rights on the jaw.

Dempsey's jaw was set, his teeth in a tight clinch, and never once did he give evidence of flinching, although in those punches there was a world of sting.

But while Georges was doing this Dempsey relentlessly plied his punching trade to a most efficient degree. He did not do as Carpentier was doing, but turned his attention to his opponent's body.

The face of Carpentier took on increased sallowness and we saw the diminishment of speed in the Frenchmen's feet as he sought to carry the pace that was being set for him by the world's champion.

And Then—It Happens.

For fifty seconds this terrific bombardment continued—then it happened. Near a neutral corner into which Dempsey had forced Carpentier there was a rapid exchange of terrific blows. Suddenly, Dempsey switched from the body to the head and that left hand, which all during the training session he had been "instructing" in the art of forcing sleep on his sparring partners, shot to Georges' jaw.

That blow traveled no more than ten inches, but behind it was the power of a mule's kick. It landed flush on the jaw of Georges. His knees sagged a trifle, but before Dempsey could draw back for a follow up shot, the Frenchman crumpled in a nose dive to the canvas.

He lay there on the canvas, a quivering hulk, with his nose buried in the resin.

But Jac wasn't the winner—not yet, but soon.

Referee Ertle of Jersey City, the man to whom had been intrusted the task of doing the counting, leaned over the fallen Carpentier and carefully tolled off the seconds. He reached eight, and there was Carpentier still reclining on his face on the floor.

No one in the vast throng expected to see Georges get up in the brief time left. Dempsey, the ideal exponent of the restless age, was prowling around the ring. He was waiting for what few expected would happen, but what did happen.

He's Up Again and Fighting.

Ertle said "nine" and as the Frenchman heard it he bounded to his feet with the speed of a panther. It was a wonderful exhibition of recuperation.

But there in front of him was Dempsey and—the inevitable. On came Jack, and as the befuddled Carp sought to protect his jaws by wrapping his arms around them, the world's champion, his fighting brain working faster than the fists and legs of Georges had traveled when the round started, once more switched his attack to the body. Crash went Dempsey's left and the punch caught the Frenchman right under the heart.

It is hard to figure why that terrific blow didn't knock the heart clear out of Carpentier's body. It was a heart breaker and it was the second of those three wallops that Georges Carpentier probably always will remember.

The third came like a flash out of the dark blue sky, which had started to leak a few drops of rain. It was "Old Mr. Haymaker"—a straight right hand drive which was delivered with all the force that the world's champion could put behind it.

It landed squarely in the pit of Georges' stomach and that was the end. Carpentier collapsed in a helpless heap on his face on the floor.

No Chance to Rise Now.

It was the hardest punch of the fight and this time there wasn't any chance for the fistic hero of France to regain his feet.

Referee Ertle once more took up his task of tolling off the seconds. While he was doing it we saw the helpless but courageous Carpentier shake himself as he lay there in the effort once more to arise. It was impossible, for that fearful punching and Nature had him licked. Ertle said "ten" while the prowling and scowling Dempsey stood still and waited.

But this time Dempsey seemed to understand that his work had been finished. He simply waited for the referee to do his work, then stepped briskly over to his fallen foe, lifted him bodily from the canvas, and carried him to his chair in the corner.

That act of Dempsey earned him the applause of the multitude, something that was sadly lacking when the world's champion entered the ring. But Dempsey did not hurry away then to his own corner or to his dressing room.

Waits for His Recovery.

He stood there in front of Carpentier, holding Georges' gloved hand in his own waiting for the badly punished Frenchman to recover. It took Carp about five minutes to gaze around and find arena scenery the same as it had been before the blow was struck.

Just one minute and sixteen seconds of the round had been fought.

We have said that thrill after thrill featured every round of the four, and we shall start at the beginning and tell what happened before the fourth round, so disastrous for Carpentier.

We saw Carpentier climb through the ropes first, some six minutes before Dempsey parted the hemp.

The fleet of camera shooters cluttered up and snapped a man whom it was thought might "crack" when he stood face to face with Dempsey, the dark skinned "punching devil" who sat in the other corner. But men of the Carpentier type do not "crack." We can understand that now.

For instance, here was Carpentier, his face wreathed in smiles from the time he climbed through the ropes in his own corner. When Dempsey came along and entered the ring at the same corner, Georges grabbed Jack by the hand and gave him a friendly slap on the back.

Scowl Replaces Smile.

Jack smiled at the greeting, but only momentarily, and quickly a serious expression took its place. It was the Dempsey fighting face. When Dempsey was introduced the huge mob did not give him much of a hand, but when Announcer Joe Humphries introduced Georges the stadium rocked with cheers. It lasted fully three minutes.

So Dempsey had something on his mind when he started the ruthless business. We have mentioned this because it is our belief that the world's champion was hurt by the way he was received. Undoubtedly it affected his work.

We have mentioned before that it was late in the fight before Dempsey got to battling in the old Dempsey form. He didn't seem to hit his stride and he was lacking in style in the first two sessions.

Then a moment later he whipped a sweet right stab to Jack's jaw, and the world's champion there and then began to understand this was a real fight.

SECOND ROUND—Dempsey came out crouching and tried with his left hook. Carpentier sent a hard right to Dempsey's mouth and they clinched, Dempsey forcing the Frenchman around the ring. Carpentier landed a light right on Dempsey's ear and a clinch followed. Deschamps began yelling for his man to stay away. Carpentier suddenly shot his right across to the jaw and staggered Dempsey. Dempsey went back reeling. Carpentier followed with a left shot to the American's face. The champion was dazed and very wild. Carpentier immediately whipped another right to Dempsey's head. It became a roughhouse fight, with science thrown to the winds. The Frenchman was very crafty and aiming for Dempsey's face. Both got in some hard drives during the mixup. Carpentier's round.

THIRD ROUND—They both raced to the center. Dempsey tried with a left hook, but was short. Carpentier smashed the champion twice with right hand blows. Dempsey began holding and could not seem to get away from the challenger's hard drives. Dempsey sent a left uppercut to the Frenchman's mouth and commenced chasing the lighter man. The champion drove three lefts to Georges' face. Carpentier's left eye was bleeding, but he tried once more with his left. Dempsey smashed the challenger three times to the stomach and once to the face, slowing him. Dempsey shot a left hook to his opponent's jaw. Carpentier was tired, but kept trying with that famous right for the head. Dempsey's round.

FOURTH ROUND—Dempsey rushed Carpentier to the ropes and, with a terrific right to the heart, made him wince. Carpentier landed a right to the head and tried to hang on. Dempsey missed a left and then landed a series of rights and lefts to the body. The continual bombardment was rapidly weakening Carpentier. The Frenchman began to sag at the knees and, after about fifty-five seconds of punishment, crumpled up on the floor from the vicious right to the body and left to the chin. Carpentier was not unconscious but in sore distress as he lay curled up on his side. Referee Ertle began the count as he stood alongside the prostrate Frenchman, while Dempsey leaned against the ropes with a sardonic grin, watching the rise and fall of the referee's hand. At the count of nine Georges climbed to his knees and arose in a game but weakened fashion. The champion was upon him in a flash and another crushing left to the midsection, followed by a flashing right to the chin with all Dempsey's weight behind it, hurled Carpentier to the floor again with a thud that could be heard many feet from the ring. Again Carpentier lay on his side while the count went on, and at the sound of eight he made a desperate attempt to regain his feet. He raised his body part way from the floor with his right hand, but the effort was futile, and two seconds later the European champion was counted out on his back. Then Dempsey lifted the battered blonde fighter in his arms as if he were a baby and carried him carefully to Deschamps. The time of the final round was one minute and sixteen seconds.

WILLARD, DEMPSEY AGAIN TO MEET? ARENA TO STAND

New York, July 2.—Tex Rickard announced tonight that he had no intention of demolishing the Jersey City arena until late next fall, but, on the contrary, planned to hold several championship battles between now and Labor day. He said he had no particular opponents for Dempsey in mind, but would consider any heavyweight who might prove capable of putting up an interesting contest with the champion.

He evaded a direct query as to whether he would stage a return battle between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey on Labor day. He said, however, that he had the assurance of both Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns, that the champion would be available for a contest on Sept. 5.

"I have not heard from Willard recently," said Rickard, "but if big Jess wants another chance at the champion and will agree to put himself in the proper physical condition I am willing to stage such a match in the Jersey City arena."

Willard Is Willing.

Lawrence, Kas., July 2.—Jess Willard, former world champion, to whose crown Jack Dempsey succeeded at Toledo July 4, 1919, will box Dempsey on Labor day if arrangements for such a bout are made, Willard said tonight.

TAKE DEMPSEY'S CASH OUTSIDE JERSEY, REPORT

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—The report that the deposit guaranteeing World's Champion Jack Dempsey his share of the purse money had been attached by a motion picture promoter seems slightly erroneous.

The attachment was denied both by Rickard and Bob Edgren, the official stakeholder. It was not denied that attachment proceedings had been attempted, but it was intimated that all the Sherlock Holmses in Christendom never could discover the hiding place of the cache.

DEMPSEY

PREVIOUS KNOCKOUTS BY WHICH DEMPSEY WON TITLE AND KEPT IT

"Knocked Silly" would be a good title for this picture. It shows Champion Jess Willard in the unchampionlike posture resulting from the terrific impact between Challenger Dempsey's left hook and the Kansan's face. In that memorable bout of July 4, 1919, Dempsey's unexpected hurricane attack against the mammoth titleholder furnished a thrill that boxing fans who saw it never can forget. Seven times in the first round of the Armageddon of prize fights the 180 pound challenger smashed the 245 pound champion to the rosin, and only a miserable fiasco in the handling of the gong saved the big man from the ignomy of a one-round knockout. His towel was thrown into the ring after the third round, and a new champion had been enthroned. Willard is shown here with a silly grin, as if he wished to inform the crowd that all this was part of his plans. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Expert Lauds Challenger as Mighty Fighter.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.] It was the most thrilling championship battle of modern times.

Dempsey won as predicted, but that doesn't tell the story. The American was forced to the limit of his skill, only his superior strength and stamina deciding the outcome of the fight, and there were moments when he needed every ounce of strength he had, when he was hard put to it to keep his bending knees straight and his feet under him.

There were times when Carpentier's terrific punches wiped every bit of expression from Dempsey's grim face, every expression but a fleeting shadow of bewilderment that any man could hit him so hard.

A Ring Foch—but Too Light.

The Frenchman has made good every claim made for him. He is a master fighter, a master mind in a body that obeys every impulse instantly and with amazing speed and force.

Writing here at the ringside while Billy Miske and Jack Renault are fighting the delayed semi-final and the tension of the great championship bout is slowly simmering down, I can say that I never saw a greater fighter pound for pound, than the Frenchman.

As for his courage, no gamer man ever lived. I believe he could beat any man in America except Dempsey; and there was a moment this afternoon when even grim Jack was near being knocked out.

As for Dempsey, he won because there is no limit to his grit, courage and determination, and because physically there is no other man like him in the world.

The championship battle was fought before 90,000 people that filled the huge bowl-like arena from the ring to the highest ledge of the far seat sections.

All the World Is There.

America was well represented in that great crowd—the greatest that ever assembled from all over the world for a sporting event that only lasted a few moments. Just before the bell Gov. Edwards and Mayor Hague were introduced from the ring. In ringside boxes sat hundreds of men famous in America's political life, with other hundreds noted in foreign countries.

When Dempsey was introduced there was a good round cheer, but when Carpentier smilingly stood up—that most romantic figure of the ring—the applause was deafening. Joe Humphreys had introduced him as the "idol of his people and a soldier of France."

Referee Ertle, who had watched every detail of the preliminary arrangement, first ordered the seconds from the ring and then walked to a neutral corner and calmly motioned to the timekeeper.

Tiger vs. Bear.

The bell clanged. Dempsey and Carpentier, ready, moved out swiftly to meet and at once, with no preliminary feeling out, no hesitation even for a second, the Frenchman leaped like a tiger at the American, his left fist crunched against Jack's chin and he clinched.

Dempsey began pecking at his body. Carpentier broke and leaped back, only to spring back again with a terrific right hander that caught Dempsey high on the side of the head.

To the amazement of the crowd, Carpentier was forcing the fight, but Dempsey was not to be driven back. He lowered his head and came grimly in, his blows driving home at short range; and at times he shot his clenched fists through small openings into the Frenchman's body.

This was his plan of battle—to wear Carpentier down. In the middle of the round Carpentier drove a right squarely against Dempsey's chin the blow would have knocked out any but a man of iron.

Champion in Distress.

Dempsey's knees shook and his face turned gray. He looked sick and dazed. For a moment even the grim determination was wiped from his face. Another blow and he would go down, but even as Carpentier drew back his hand Dempsey recovered and lunged forward, smashing at Carpentier's body so hard that Georges was forced to give ground before the attack.

Now, came blow on blow, so fast the eye could hardly follow. Carpentier's lefts and right shot home, and Dempsey clouted grimly in return. Once, Georges, who seemed to put every ounce of his strength into one crashing blow when he saw a sure opening, swung so furiously at Dempsey's chin that, merely grazing, he whirled and fell headlong through the ropes.

Ertle jumped forward, but Dempsey, a sportsman, had already started back to let his opponent come back. Carpentier slipped off the ropes and started after Dempsey again.

Face of a Fighting Man.

His blue eyes were full of battle, his smooth brow corrugated—you could see him think.

Circling, he attacked again, and this time his flashing right fist reached Dempsey's chin and shook him. Dempsey pushed in, still grim, and forced Georges to retreat and the bell rang.

The crowd buzzed with excitement during the minute of rest. There was no doubt about it—Carpentier was as advertised; this was to be no cinch for the champion.

Carpentier came out for the second round to attack again; his face was a mask of concentration, through which glimmered now and then a slight cynical smile. He studied Dempsey; blows were exchanged, with little advantage, and it went along to the middle of the round.

Stakes All on Savage Effort.

And then, as if he had been saving himself for a supreme effort, he leaped in and drove a crashing right hander to Dempsey's jaw. Before Dempsey could recover Carpentier had struck again and again and still again, all right hand blows, with furious speed and strength behind them.

Dempsey reeled back, his knees bent and his legs shaking. He was staggering. He wavered to one side a little before he could turn to meet his man, and again Carpentier clouted him on the chin.

Dempsey made a few quick little steps and, like a bluff-bowed ship beating offshore against a heavy sea, went lurching ahead. He was dazed but grimmer, more doggedly determined for the beating that came to him.

In that moment there was no doubt that Jack Dempsey was a champion, no doubt that he could take punishment and fight, for Carpentier had hit him harder than any man ever hit him before and he was weathering it.

Jack Is in Bad Shape.

Carpentier tried another rally, and Jack met him, swinging blow for blow. For once Dempsey was wild. His fists hit nothing but the empty air as the Frenchman changed his plan for a moment and slipped deftly out of danger.

The second was Carpentier's round—but it was still anybody's fight. As Dempsey went to his corner his seconds worked on him furiously, and Jack Kearns, his veneer of calmness gone, put a trembling hand on the ropes and leaned over to give hurried instructions.

Carpentier in his corner, looking anxiously across the ring, had a red lump under his left eye and his nose was slightly cut. Dempsey was still unmarked.

The third started like another whirlwind. Dempsey went straight across the ring, but Carpentier slipped deftly away and ducked under a blow that might have dropped him. He was studying Dempsey again, watching keenly for an opening, intent on holding his advantage and taking less risk of being stopped by Dempsey's slashing blows.

Yankee Guards His Jaw.

Dempsey held his hands high, just under his chin, as if to guard against the right hand blows that had dazed him before.

Carpentier missed two or three times, and as they came into close quarters he suddenly shifted his attack and drove two terrific right hand uppercuts beneath Dempsey's high guard, landing fairly on his chin.

His cold blue eyes were alert, his lips drawn in a slight smile as he watched Dempsey's face to see how much he was hurting him.

Apparently he felt himself master of the situation, but he was making no mistakes. The championship was within reach of his hand, there was the fast, hard fighting Dempsey pressing in, driving spiteful punches to the Frenchman's body whenever they came to grips, so he was wary.

Carpentier outboxed him, moved swiftly, leaped in high on his toes to attack, leaped away to safety. But the Frenchman was weakening. His speed came in spasmodic spurts—amazing speed and power, but not continuous like Dempsey's attack.

Just before the end of the round the champion drove a terrible right hand blow into Carpentier's body. Carpentier clung tightly in a clinch. He was weak. But it was still anybody's fight when the bell rang.

Beginning of the End.

Now in the fourth, Dempsey drew on his reservoir of strength and pressed Carpentier hard. The French boy was shifty, foxy, alert. He leaped into attack and his quick blows struck home, but they seemed to lack the crushing force of the round before.

The body hammering was bringing him down. Carpentier hit Dempsey on the chin, left and right, and Dempsey retaliated with a right, a crushing body blow fairly in the pit of the stomach and near the heart. Before Carpentier could move a short left hook struck him on the chin, and he went down heavily on his face. The crowd leaped up, a roar went from ringside to the fluttering American and French flags in the distance.

Dempsey walked back to his corner. Carpentier pulled his legs up a little and lay there motionless. Ertle tolled off the seconds—up to nine—and at the sound the game Frenchman leaped from flat on his stomach to his feet, whirled, and waited for Dempsey to come at him.

Bravely Waits His Fate.

Carpentier was in sad condition then; he was dazed and weak, but he slipped aside a little to evade Dempsey's first rush, and faced his man with gleaming eyes and a smile on his lips.

Dempsey closed in deliberately. There was a little swirling scrimmage and out of it shot Carpentier in a headlong plunge, dropped by Dempsey's short right hand blow to the chin. Dempsey walked away, and the French boy rolled to his side, lifted his leg and tried with all his might to come up again. His eyes shut and his forehead creased with effort.

He raised a little as the count went on, but fell back helpless when Ertle reached ten. Then, and only then, Deschamps leaped into the ring, his face twisted as with pain, and lifted the fallen champion of Europe from the ground.

Other willing hands seized him and dragged him to his corner. Dempsey had turned to wave to Kearns that it was all over, now he turned again and walking swiftly to Carpentier's corner seized the still dazed Frenchman by the hand.

"Too bad, Georges," Dempsey said. "You made a great fight."

Before Dempsey left the ring Referee Ertle removed his gloves, examined, inspected his bandages again and found them all right.

It was rumored later that Carpentier broke his wrist in the second round. But if he did he surely hit some wonderful blows with it afterward.

As we left the announcer gave out that the gate receipts were $1,600,000. It was a tremendous occasion all around.

WHAT THEY SAID AFTER BATTLE

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—(Special.)—As Jack Kearns stepped out of the ring in advance of his champion he was all smiles and said:

It happened just as I expected. The Frenchman is a game fighter and gave Jack a hard battle, especially in the second round, when he nailed the champion with left and right hand smashes, but I was satisfied when Dempsey came back to his corner at the end of that round that he would take the Frenchman in a few rounds more. The only thing surprises me is that the Frenchman was able to stay in there so long.

He took an awful punching about the body from Jack, and showed wonderful gameness in fighting back at the champion. And the fight was surely but slowly going against him. The champion is now ready to meet any man who questions his supremacy. We will fight anybody just as soon as Dempsey has the necessary rest, to which he is now entitled. It was a great fight, and of course I am glad that my man won. I congratulate Carpentier for his great display during the punishing moments in the contest. We have no immediate plans, but I think I will rest up the champion for some time pending any challenge that might be aimed at him.

"Well, it was a great fight. I guess everybody was satisfied. I believe we gave them a nice little pastime this afternoon. The Frenchman is a game fighter and deserves all the credit in the world. I admit he shook me up quite a bit in the second round, but I was confident that if I could keep him coming to me I could get him sooner or latter. The Frenchman was trying all the time with that right hand of his and I had to watch it every moment. I was satisfied if I could reach the Frenchman with a few body punches I would slow him down to a position where I knew I could get over the deciding punch. I'll be ready for anybody who would like to engage me in a little game of fisticuffs just as soon as I can get a rest."

Here is what the defeated Georges Carpentier had to say:

"I staked my all to win in the second round. I hit Dempsey hard, but could not drop him. I tried again in the third, but a right to my neck seemed to daze me. I do not know how he got through my guard in the fourth. America should be proud of Dempsey. He is a great champion."

SCORES OF FANS SLEEP IN MUD ON PAPER 'BEDS'

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—All through the night the police detail guarding the arena was busy ejecting fans who were trying to "beat the guns" by sneaking through the many entrances and hiding. When day broke over the "jungle" surrounding the arena, scores of huddled forms were scattered about in the mud, still slumbering on couches of crumpled newspapers.

Many Wear Both U. S. and French Colors

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—The international aspect of the affair was apparent in the flags and ribbons carried or worn by the spectators. The Stars and Stripes predominated, but many testified to their loyalty to their own country and sentimental interest in the French challenger by carrying emblems of both countries.

WOMAN CRITIC SMILES WITH "CARP" IN DEFEAT

Sad Until Georges Sets Her Example.

BY JULIA HARPMAN.

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—I have seen my first prize fight. I am glad I was there.

Viewing that appalling crowd, which looked like a Persian prayer rug, skillfully woven, its bits of color furnished mainly by the gay clothing of a thousand women, I thought of the far road my sisters and I have traveled in the last half decade.

Has suffrage made the difference? Is public opinion more lenient than of yore? Or is it that man—collectively speaking—has become more generous; is extending the hand of fellowship to woman and allowing her to enter into a partnership with him, not only in the business of life but in the clean, virile joy of sport?

There was no lack of courtesy from the men at that great contest. None expressed himself as being averse to the presence of women. We were accepted. We were made to feel that we had a right to be there.

Like Gladiators of Rome.

Some who were not there might raise their carefully plucked eyebrows doubtingly—might shudder in most feminine fashion when hearing of the "brutality," the "nakedness," the "animalism" of the fighters—might feel a bit shaky at the thought (much more the sight) of blood.

But as I watched Carpentier, the blonde idol of France, and Dempsey, America's champion, stand together in that snow white ring I think there stirred within me the same emotional thrill—the same element of curiosity—that possessed the kings of Rome when witnessing the exhibitions of strength by the gladiators when the Coliseum stood mighty and magnificent in all its ancient glory.

To me these two perfectly formed creatures were not undressed men. They typified strength, will power, health. They were alike in these things, but utterly unlike in others.

Dislikes Dempsey's Sullenness.

Carpentier's leanness and his look of freshness appealed to my love of beauty and cleanliness. Dempsey's sullen, morose, one day unshaved visage repelled me. Not once did he look his challenger in the eye. Mere courtesy would demand that, thought I.

Not once did Dempsey respond to the Frenchman's jolly smile. He would have lost nothing by doing that. But perhaps he was not happy. He seemed fearfully nervous, and his trainer (at least I think it was Mr. Kearns) tickled his sun burned back, scratched the back of his neck—somewhat in the manner one scratches a cat to make it purr—and cooed in his large, flat ear.

Dempsey is ferocious. Carpentier lithe. Dempsey hangs his head over his chest, and it swings from side to side while he slashes at his opponent; Carpentier's is gracefully set on his broad shoulders, his slim neck arched.

When they dashed into the whirl of that first mad round I—the most ignorant of laywomen, shall I say?—had a sinking realization that the Frenchman had not one chance in a million to win.

Inequality Is "Nauseating."

The sight of his blood did not sicken me, though I do not like blood—it is not pretty. But the inequality of the match was nauseating. My fun was spoiled because the bout was not, in the proper meaning of the word, a match.

I pitied Carpentier when the slugging of the champion cut the flesh at the side of his nose, when his poor bruised eye received more punishment. I wondered how it was possible for human flesh to bear the strain of those blows which sounded on his bare body like the popping of rubber balloons.

And I marveled at the tenacity of the French fighter when he "came back" in the second round. His astonishing pluck proved momentarily victorious, and I thrilled with those who shouted intimately: "Give it to him, Georges—you've got him groggy!"

There is a certain amount of pride in knowing that the American is, as always, greatest. But I am sorry for the Frenchman.

I would be more proud if Dempsey had found a challenger more of his own ilk.

Some women wept when Carpentier fell.

My tears are reserved for sad events. Carpentier, on becoming conscious, smiled. I thought I'd follow suit.

COMBAT A CREDIT TO MEN AND TO GAME: RICKARD

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—Tex Rickard, promoter of the big bout, when seen after the program had been completed, made the following statement:

"There was honor enough for both Dempsey and Carpentier, and I believe all who saw it will agree with me. Jack was too big and strong for Carpentier, but the latter gave the crowd plenty of action and many thrills until Dempsey's powerful punches ended the bout.

"I wish to express my thanks to the officials of Jersey City for the assistance they gave me in handling the crowd, both inside and outside the arena. I never saw a crowd better handled, and it was the greatest that ever gathered around a ring. I think everybody got the seat his ticket called for, and I hope all were satisfied with the bout. The whole affair should prove to those who try to prevent boxing contests that the game has reached a plane where it may be left alone."

200 FRENCH FANS, DELAYED AT SEA, MISS BIG FIGHT

New York, July 2.—Two hundred French fight fans, including some of the most prominent sporting men of France, were not in their reserved seats in the Jersey City arena when the gong sounded for the fight of the century today. They were several miles out at sea, bemoaning the fact that the steamship France could not make its trip from Havre in time.

Anyway This Carpentier Takes Job from Dempsey

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Carpentier has succeeded Dempsey—on the Washington police force. This Carpentier, whose initials are M. N., took the beat of Patrolman E. W. Dempsey.

2,000 WOMEN SEE BOUT; ATTRACT LITTLE NOTICE

Some Hunt Top Seats to Find Cool Breeze.

New York, July 2.—[Special.]—While the 5,000 women expected were not in evidence at the championship battle arena, the 2,000 who vied with the men in enthusiasm represented the largest number of their sex that has ever watched a boxing contest in this country.

The prevailing fashion in fight hats for women seems to be a straw, usually draped with white, a color that admirably fitted into the vista of men's straw hats, men's light colored suits and men's heads protected from the sun by white handkerchiefs.

It was a black and white crowd, as different, say, from a big football crowd as day is different from night. Joseph's coat, like Carpentier's victory, was conspicuous by its absence.

Most of Them Seated Near Ring.

Most of the women spectators were concentrated near the ring. They came so late that they were partly swallowed up in the great shuffle. In the next section above there were still fewer women, and the ratio of men to women increased rapidly as the eye mounted the sides of the arena. In the $5 seats, atop the wooden structure, only an occasional woman could be seen, and how they got there is a problem, for they were not there when the holders of these seats rushed pellmell into the stadium at 8 o'clock or soon thereafter. Perhaps gallantry proved even more potent than the attractions of a perfectly nice $5 seat up where the cooling breeze was blowing.

Attract Little Attention.

Many of the earlier women came unescorted. But none of them attracted more than the usual attention, female fans being no longer phenomenon.

Which way the women's sympathies lay was not a difficult question to solve. For many months it has been a subject of common knowledge that they were heartily in favor of a victory for the handsome and lithesome Carpentier. And they showed this feeling with a considerable patter of applause and soprano cheers as the French idol appeared. When Georges rallied suddenly in the second round and staggered Dempsey, the women were even more vociferous than the men.

PLAYERS FORGET GAME; SEE SCRAP

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—The Dempsey-Carpentier fracas wrecked more than one good business. When time for the start of the double header between the Newark Bears and the Jersey City Skeeters, at Jersey City, drew near it was found the players had forgotten their game appointment and instead were being counted in with the 90,000 or so at the fight arena. Spectators, too, cared little for baseball, so the day's contests were postponed.

Sleeps 9 Hours, Awakes Breathing Victory.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—"Well, I am glad the day is here for that little party M. Carpentier and myself are going to give this afternoon," said Jack Dempsey when he hopped out of bed this morning after a restful sleep of nine hours in the home of William C. Heppenheimer, the banker.

"Let 'er go Teddy," added the big champ as he gave his trainer, Teddy Hayes, a playful hug that nearly strangled Hayes. "They can start shooting anytime, Ted, old boy. I'll be right on the job."

The trip from Atlantic City to the home of the banker was a frolic for Dempsey. Not an ounce of worry for the big scrapper. He seemed more light hearted than any member of his party.

Jack "Cuts Loose" on Train.

During the trip Dempsey cut up like the big boy he really is, always trying to play some prank on his associates. He's a natural fighter when he must be, but there is no malice in his makeup and, while he cuffed Hayes and Trant several times with cute little raps to the ribs, he laughed good naturedly at their discomfiture.

Jack grabbed a short nap during the journey. He never overlooks that afternoon doze. When the trip was less than half over, he stretched out and fell asleep alongside of Teddy Hayes.

Every preparation had been made for the reception of the champion at the home of Banker Heppenheimer. While an attempt was made to keep the thnig quiet, the news of his arrival spread like wildfire. In less than ten minutes thousands of persons jammed the streets surrounding the Heppenheimer mansion, trying to get a glimpse of the American fighter.

Extra! Jack Gets Shave!

There was a little dinner at the banker's home in honor of Dempsey. Dr. John Nevin, Mayor Hague, Deputy Mayor John Malone and Mr. Heppenheimer sat down with the champion, who was the guest of honor.

Jack sat in with a clean-shaven face, an unusual thing with the champion on the eve of battle.

Bounding out of the bed thoroughly refreshed this morning, the champion was ready for an attack on the breakfast table. Dempsey always brags that he never lost a battle in a dining room. He enjoyed the meal, then joined Mr. Heppenheimer and his friends in a discussion of golf.

When the call came to get ready for the trip to the arena he stepped out briskly for his clothes and left the banker's home with a light heart and a confidence that he would return with the Frenchman's scalp and his own title intact.

First Bout Leaves Crowd Cold.

The first pair of preliminary fighters climbed into the arena at 12:15 o'clock and Joe Humphries squared off for the first announcement of the day.

Irish Johnny Curtin of Jersey City and Mickey Delmont of Newark, both 122 pounds, were the principals and started ripping them at 12:20. The referee for this bout was Phil Ehrhardt, while Dr. John B. Farrell was the timekeeper. The contest was scheduled for eight rounds. It was a good fight, but no one seemed to care a whoop. Curtin was entitled to the verdict at the end of the bout.

Packy O'Gatty of New York and Frankie Burns, the Jersey City veteran, were the next pair tossed into the ring for an eight round trip. O'Gatty weighed 129½ pounds, while Burns came in at 125 even. The referee for this contest was Jimmy De Forest. O'Gatty was the winner at the end of eight rounds.

Cheers for Gov. Edwards.

Babe Herman of California, a member of the Dempsey camp, and Joe Metranga of New Orleans then stepped in for eight rounds. Herman weighed 124 pounds and Metranga 128½. Harry McCormick of Paterson was the third man in the ring for this contest. Just before this bout started Gov. Edwards entered the arena and was given quite a reception.

In the fifth round Herman was giving Metranga such a beating that the referee stopped the contest to save the southerner from further punishment.

The next bout of eight rounds introduced Dick Griffin of Fort Worth and Benny Coster of New York. Griffin weighed 121 pounds, while Coster scaled 120½. In the second round Griffin toppled Coster for a count of nine with a hard right smash on the chin. Benny had a tough time sticking out the round.

Twice in the sixth round Griffin sent Coster down for the count of nine. When Coster got to his feet he reeled and was helpless on the ropes. The referee stopped the contest.

Gene Tunney, the A. E. F. heavyweight champion, and Soldier Jones of Canada were the next pair for eight rounds. Tunney weighed 185 and Jones 175.

Before the end of the seventh round the referee stopped the contest. Tunney was easily the winner.

It was announced at this point that the big contest would go on as scheduled at 3 o'clock sharp. One of the preliminary bouts was canceled. A huge horseshoe of flowers was carried into the ring and placed in the corner selected for Dempsey.

Mighty Cheer for Georges.

There was a mighty cheer as Carpentier was seen making his way toward the ring, accompanied by two policemen.

Deschamps stepped into the ring in advance of the challenger and the cheering continued for several minutes. Gus Wilson was also in with the French champion.

Georges smiled and waved his hands at the great gathering while the cheering increased in volume.

Deschamps was chattering in French at an awful pace with Georges. Georges appeared the least concerned of any of his party.

Paul Journee then climbed into the ring to help in the Frenchman's corner.

At this point there is another mighty cheer as Jack Dempsey steps into the ring and shakes Carpentier's hand warmly.

Barney Dempsey, Jack's oldest brother, climbs into the ring to help the most famous member of the Dempsey family.

The principals, together with Harry Ertle, the referee, are now in the center of the ring awaiting the time for the final instructions, while several airplanes soar over the big gathering.

Bandages Stir Protest.

Deschamps is examining Dempsey's bandages carefully.

Finally he makes a bitter protest against the size of the bandages.

There is quite an argument in Dempsey's corner, Deschamps swinging his arms frantically and uttering loud words against the champion's hands having such a large amount of covering.

Bill Brennan has just climbed into the ring to challenge the winner. The usual introductions are now on, with every member of the New Jersey boxing commission being shown to the public.

Mayor Hague of Jersey City is introduced from the ringside, congratulating both fighters on their appearance.

Gov. Edwards is then introduced by the eloquent Joe Humphries. In response to the cheers the governor makes his way into the ring and shakes hands with the two big fighters.

Georges, 172 Lbs.; Jack, 188.

After considerable argument, Deschamps finally withdraws his protest against Dempsey's bandages, but he is watching everything in Dempsey's corner like a hawk. Joe Benjamin, for the Dempsey side, stands in the Frenchman's corner, but makes no protest over Carpentier's bandages.

Carpentier's weight is announced as 172 and Dempsey's 188.

Just before the boxers are called to the center of the ring Tex Rickard is introduced. The big promoter is well received.

Deschamps is a busy bird, hopping from one side of the ring to the other in an excited manner.

Final Instructions Given.

Dempsey is ready to start from his corner, but the Frenchman's gloves have not been completely fastened to his wrists.

Joe Humphries is now introducing Dempsey. There is a big cheer.

The men are now in the center of the ring receiving instructions from Referee Ertle.

In a few minutes the big battle is on.

Following the main bout Billy Miske of St. Paul and Jack Renault of Canada boxed eight rounds. The honors were even.

JACK'S MOTHER JOINS THRONG AT BULLETIN BOARD

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 2.—"I knew my boy would win," said Mrs. Hiram Dempsey, mother of the champion, today. "I did not keep my resolution about staying home and working. I grew too interested and joined the throng in front of the Salt Lake City telegraph office waiting for the returns."

OLD ADAM WAKES IN 90,000 SOULS AT EPIC BATTLE

Bear Meets Panther; Man vs. Superman.

punch bowl of lunacy? It is worth any man's careful study. It is a steadying note. I like it. It is a note of generous excitement—or, to make an inversion that means more, it is excited generosity. From lips that sixty seconds before were the lips of loons I hear not one rancorous word, nor any word of gloating. The 90,000 still gurgle, but they are settling into serenity and sanity.

They are contented. The best man won. You hear that in a chorus that now mumbles and now is a roar. The leviathan which is the 90,000 is content with its mastodon, which is Hiram and Celia Dempsey's boy.

Chain Lightning Is Victor.

And what, as a layman formulates it to himself, will serve for a nontechnical epitome of what came to pass when these two heroic specimens clashed? This happened: An excellent man went against a superlative man. Carpentier was fast today—dazzlingly fast at times—but what is human speed against chain lightning?

Now let me go back and try to catch and pin down the glittering moments of the grand entry. I have seen quite a number of bonny sights in my half century. I have seen the old queen riding up Ludgate hill for her diamond jubilee hour of worship, the troops of the farflung empire in her train. I have seen a premier fortress in the hour of capitulation, the magazines ablaze and one lonely, gallant flag flying from its highest battlement. I have seen a fleet delivering bombardment—it made a music like a hundred pipe organs; and I have seen expositions opened by rulers, and once, under a starlit sky and against a background of white marble sentineled by cypress trees, I saw Margaret Anglin come forth as the Antigone of Sophocles.

The Sight Incomparable.

But never anywhere in this interesting world have I seen a sight at once so human and so grandiose as this day's sight. It has been utterly and good naturedly democratic, but when it resolved itself strictly into the proposition of physical puissance it developed the regal note. For were we not sitting before monarchs?

Can you picture 90,000 blazingly intent upon a single fact? That is concentration carried to the ultimate. Upon every shred and patch of incident the 90,000 are bending in one concentrated glare.

Papa Deschamps, looking more ready than ever to go on as Gaspard in "The Chimes of Normandy," is storming and jawing in Dempsey's corner about the width of the tapes. One moment he seems as mad as a whirling dervish and acts like one; the next he is as suave as Talleyrand and as cautious. He is darting from side to side of Dempsey, whose back, covered by the trusty old red sweater he loves, remains motionless and inscrutable.

Smiling Georges; Surly Jack.

Carpentier is smiling. He waves greetings. Dempsey sits with head down. If you could transmute him into granite now it would stand for a statue of surly meditation. Such repose is uncanny! This is no Irish boy with folks that came from Kildare. It is an Indian throwback, and I do not see Ireland in any aspect of him, but the Virginia mountains where that Indian great-grandmother of his lived and bred. It was 2 precisely by my watch when that woman's descendant pulled off the old red sweater. The portentous solemnity with which I note the hour makes me smile at myself, which is helpful, but I can't swallow, and I wonder, rather idly, how long this time worn heart would keep pumping at this clip.

Kearns "Mothers" Dempsey.

Spirals of smoke ascend from the waiting trains outside this gigantic octagon. Airplanes grumble and snarl above the spirals. The sun appears briefly in a space which, you recall with an effort, is known as a lowering sky. What with the roar of humans around you, and the rumbling of the machines overhead, and the heat of the sun, you feel as if you had a front seat in a Vesuvian crater.

Kearns, as he stands by Dempsey's side while the fighters are receiving their instructions, keeps running his hand over the champion's bare back. Now he does it vehemently, as if he were going over a side of beef. But now he is patting him softly. It is quite a mothering touch, quite a touching touch. It makes you grim. Brute or big baby! you don't know which. It is such human grotesqueries as the impresario's slim hands running over this side of beef that extenuate prize fighting. Its brutishness is outweighed by its school boy oddities and its homeliness.

Old Adam Peeps Out Again.

The people caught sight once of the red seals on the packages of gloves as they were being handed into the ring. They looked with awe on those red seals as if they were seals on death warrants.

There are moments when the spite and cussedness of human nature dart briefly forth like serpents.

"Knock him out, Jack!" a hectic partisan screams.

"Sit down!" a man behind him admonished. "Do you want to cause a crime?"

"I suppose," muses another, "I suppose he'll break that Frenchman in two."

Sapiency, personified by a fat, florid man, responds in a detached tone, "He will if he don't break his own arms first."

The flesh of weary men—weary and a little touched with nausea—emits an occasional moan. One man sighs: "If hell's any hotter than this I'm going to be good." But there was little of that. Passionate interest and Rickard's superb arrangements consumed every grouch.

A Tale That Tells All.

Such an amount of interest in so brief a space of time I never observed or felt before, and it brings back to me a story. A long time ago, when it was a daring thing to do, H. H. Kohlsaat led his newspaper with an account of a championship battle. H. H. ran a moral paper, and certain of his following protested at his new kind of journalism—new for him and for them. Some protested vehemently, some in a half hearted way, as if they felt they had to, rather than wished to.

"But did you read it?" said the little man to one of his critics—an Evanston preacher, I think.

"I did," said the preacher. "God help me, every line."

And that is why 90,000 of us were here today. We loved it all, God help us, every throb and thrill!

"KID SUPERSTITION" TAKES A FALL OUT OF CHAMPION'S FRIENDS

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 2.—Old Man Superstition was thwarted in his attempt to take a fall out of Jack Dempsey here last night. Twelve others gathered around the table with the champion and refused to sit down. William Heppenheimer Jr., son of Jack's host, saved the day and Jack's meal by making it an even fourteen.

WHAT PROFITS IT TO HURT A BRAVE LAD?—HAMMOND

Never Had Chance Against Surly Champ, He Says.

later our champ enters, and there is something of an uproar, but not so much, for he is not a popular champion.

The mayor of Jersey City climbs into the ring, and so does the governor of the state, both of them looking none too statesmanlike. They bow to the multitude, and are so engrossed in that process that they almost forget to greet their guests, the graceful Georges and the Big Fellow, who is about to set him right.

Wild moments are being lived in Dempsey's corner. Deschamps, the Frenchman's entrepreneur, having heard that Dempsey is not averse to dirty tricks, with bandages, etc., looms over the Champ, like a sleuth.

Deschamps Volatile, Alert.

A towel, which he will need later, hangs from his pants pocket, and he is excited and gesticulate. He does everything except to look at Dempsey's teeth to see how old he is, and he is vigilant, chattering, picturesque, and old world.

Kearns, who is Dempsey's manager, is something of a hard-boiled egg, coatless, good looking and amused, American, and confident. Flowers are brought into the ring and a sad band plays everything except the Marseillaise.

The battlers get together in the center of the ring to be introduced socially, and Dempsey towers over his victim, seeming to say to himself, "I hate to do it; he's so pretty."

The difference between them is that which might be between the Woolworth building and a little church in France.

Marches Gayly to Doom.

The tocsin rings and they dash at each other. Does the little French aviator run from the big American ship riveter? Not at all. He leads with his so called right, and marches gayly into devastation.

Dempsey, in the first round, hurt him with short, invisible, mean, slinking onslaughts upon the heart, the kidneys, and the base of the brain. He hits him in new and unexpected points of the anatomy.

Carpentier's eyes as the first round closes, have in them the pathetic outlook of a wounded gazelle. He seems to be saying, "I like you, Jack; let's be friends." No chance, Dempsey hates an aviator as the devil hates holy water.

In the second round Georges had his crowded hour. His dartlike right landed so many times on the whiskered jaw of the champ that we thought, for a moment or two, that a miracle might be about to be wrought. Dempsey seemed a bit surprised.

Strength Sapped by Blows.

Like lightning the Frenchman's right would strike the defender's adamant jowl, but the steam was absent. He had been beaten about the heart so much that his sinews were weakened. He put the champ against the ropes and had him breathing hard.

The bell rang and the one chance in a thousand that he had to win was gone. If he could have hit Dempsey for a few seconds more the result might have been different, though the same.

Dempsey's invisible, unexpected, short arm body blows sickened the challenger's lovely torso. He was weak save at heart, and when he struck there was no venom in his blows.

A left to the jaw put him down. He leaned upon his knees gracefully, but he came up, his head bloody but unbowed, before the last toll of the referee.

Dempsey stood, eyes down, surly, hating, a blood brother to all the gargoyles, as if he were saying to himself, "This is another day."

Carpentier got up. Verdun was writ in his features. Dempsey scrutinized him for an instant as if to say, "What will I do with him—kiss him or kill him?" and then he unleashed an assassinating right to Carpentier's already shattered heart and the war was over.

WINS FIGHT FAN CHAMPIONSHIP; IN LINE 12 HOURS

Jersey City, July 2.—The fight fan championship of the world goes to Alfred Phipps, colored. Phipps, native of New York City, was in line before one of the bleacher seat ticket wagons at 10:15 last night. The bleacher seats opened at 10 a. m. The Negro is 27 years old and he said Carpentier should win within seven rounds.

A quarter of an hour after Phipps took up his all night vigil before the ticket wagon, Jack Walsh, 25, thought Dempsey should win in seven rounds.

Third in line was William H. Green, 24, New York City, another negro. He picked Dempsey in eight rounds.

The woman's fan championship was won by Miss Martha O'Hare, New York. Miss O'Hare, a singer, was thirteenth in line. She picked Dempsey in three rounds.

DEMPSEY GETS PAID AT RATE OF $120 PER SECOND

New York, July 2.—[Special.]—How would you like to be paid at the rate of about $120 a second for hitching on a pair of eight ounce gloves and punching a fellow creature into ten seconds of helplessness?

It was a bit less than $120 [$117 and a few cents] for each of the 256 seconds of actual boxing that Jack Dempsey received for knocking out Georges Carpentier.

Figuring the fight went one minute and sixteen seconds into the fourth round, which, added to the full 180 seconds of each of the first three rounds, makes a total of 256 seconds, the champion with his $300,000 share of the gate money earned about $120 for each of the sixty ticks of the clock. But Uncle Sam takes a large chunk of it.

EFFICIENCY OF RICKARD SHOWN HANDLING CROWD

Moves In and Out Like Machine.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—Never before in the history of Fistiana has a crowd—and this surely was a gigantic one—been handled in the smart fashion accorded this one.

When the huge stadium was almost filled Tex Rickard was spotted weaving his way down one of the subterranean passageways.

Tex wasn't smiling; instead he wore a serious look, for this man, who plays the game big and takes chances that no other living man has taken in the promotion line, wasn't satisfied with loading this big stadium with humanity. He was thinking of the business of unloading it without accident or trouble. That is Rickard all over. His foresight has made him famous and success isn't success until the curtain falls on whatever he starts.

Rickard Shows Marks of Worry.

When the last person escaped through the exits, although there still were hundreds of scribes laboring with the telegraph operators at the ringside, Rickard, who put off an operation for appendicitis so that he could work opt the great show of today, smiled a bit, and he looked weary and worn. There is a price for success. Rickard made big money today, but he worked hard for it, and those who know him take off their hats to him and hope that his health will not suffer as a result of his colossal effort.

Rickard provided plenty of policemen, plenty of firemen, plenty of ushers, and other employés to handle the mob. There wasn't a jam at a single gate, and the fans, male and female, who started to appear early, walked in leisurely and orderly.

Clean Benches Win Praise.

We saw in this mob today brilliantly gowned women galore, and we heard one woman, who must have been a regular fistic fanette, make this remark: "I've been watching boxing matches for years, but never before have I ever witnessed anything like this. Why, just look at those clean seats and benches. There isn't a chance for a person seriously to damage a gown. The chairs are comfortable and clean, and just look at these benches—the sharp ends of every bench have been planed off and there isn't a chance for a woman to tear her raiment."

That's just a little more of Tex Rickard's foresight. He is so smart that he isn't likely to be caught with a lot of damage suits now that this day is over.

GRAND JURY LAUDS POLICE.

Chief Fitzmorris received a letter from the June grand jury yesterday commending the work of the police department. Nineteen policemen are given special mention.

TEMPTING ODDS FIND CARPENTIER MONEY LACKING

Dempseyites Raise Ante, but All in Vain.

New York, July 2.—[Special.]—Aft the sharp Dempsey slump in the be ting Thursday and Friday the cham pion's supporters rallied behind hi this morning and gradually lengthene the odds. Coincident with this the was a mysterious absence of Carpenti money, and this combination produc a lull in the betting that continued cle up to the time when the boxers e tered the ring. The odds on Dempsey fluctuated between 3 and 2½ to 1.

Rarely in the history of heavyweig championship bouts has the bettin been so light as it was today.

The odds on Dempsey, which ha been 2 to 1 on the eve of the batt shifted quickly this morning to 2½ to 1, the Dempsey men raising the odd in an effort to attract the Carpentie money out of seclusion. But the mov was unsuccessful.

After their brief splurge on Thursda and Friday, the Frenchman's suppor ers grew wary and kept their mone out of sight. When 2½ to 1 failed t rouse the opposition, the Dempsey fa tion went up to 3 to 1, and it was this figure that the betting stood. Ev these attractive figures failed to tem the supporters of the Frenchman, a as a result the betting was practica at a standstill for several hours befo the time set for the bout.

A liberal estimate of the amoun wagered today in the city would $50,000, a figure far below that f other championship bouts of this i portance. The total amount of mone wagered in this city was probab about $650,000.

BOUT IS CLIMAX OF HUMANITY'S SPORT HISTORY

All Other Contests Fade Beside This One.

BY FREDERICK SMITH.

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.] —'Tis said in the story book that it was a thrilling thing to see when Ben Hur won the race from that shifty charioteer, Messala.

In other days Salvator and Boundless, by their thoroughbred stoutness of heart and their dauntless speed, made the world's sporting blood leap again. And so clearly were two champion baseball teams matched that a world's pennant was lost and won when a slender Giant dropped a fly ball.

Multitudes saw these and many other historic triumphs and failures in that colorful full-blooded world where rivals in strength and nerve and skill all but break their hearts in striving. And often it has been said in haste—"there never again can be another sporting moment so tumultuously electric."

Ballyhooing the Epitome!

Yet today, ladies and gentlemen, step into the WORLD'S GREATEST ARENA on Boyle's thirty acres, Jersey City, and see positively the greatest sporting show on earth. Step inside and find a seat in this mammoth soup plate and see a circus so mastodonic in its domestic interest that it has drawn 90,000 men and women from far and near; so international in its appeal that airplanes circle above the yelling throngs waiting for photographic plates which will be delivered to ocean speed annihilaters and thus rushed to Europe for English and continental newspapers.

Other aviators carry photographic plates westward so that no time may be lost in putting fight pictures before the eyes of waiting America.

This is the fight day and the news of the senate's passing of the peace resolution which ends the war between America and Germany is subordinated to the announcement that Mr. Dempsey and Mr. Carpentier are ready.

They Also Serve W. O. S. & W.

It has been a hectic night in Jersey City. Many hundreds of fanatic fans waited until dawn satisfied simply to stand through the weary hours and gaze upon the house in which Mr. Dempsey slumbers—perhaps to dream. Hotel and private lodgings have grown so scarce that placards throughout Jersey City advertise that camping sites may be rented from a certain well known lumber company.

The city is a-flutter with the Stars and Stripes, and the small folk and many of their elders have forgotten about Independence day and will tell you the world is all draped in red, white and blue because this is the day that Mr. Dempsey and Mr. Carpentier present their boxing exhibition.

It is called a boxing exhibition in all official pronouncements for it would be crude indeed to admit that the reformers were right and that it was to be a fight.

Cuisine a la Flivver.

Tin Lizzies have become rolling kitchens and from them the delectable hot dog passes across the curb to hands that heed not the messy mustard. World series days are brought to mind when a midnight visit to the arena reveals thousands of fans who have eluded or weedled the police and are ecstatically trying to keep awake until the gates shall open and the $5.50 seats shall be available for those little sweethearts of fortune who are first.

Washington Crossing the Delaware seems not to have a particle of historic edge on the spectacle of Knickerbocker Crossing the Hudson today. As early as 7 o'clock this morning fight crowds were gurgling through the necks of the Hudson tubes. Ferry boats to Jersey were panting for steam enough to carry their unprecedented loads.

Parking places had been arranged for almost 3,000 automobiles, but hundreds of other cars were scattered about the city, left in the hands of volunteer guardians who promised to try to be honest.

Heavy Hand of Discipline.

Police kept traffic moving in sections much as troops were moved in France. Many of the police are ex-service men and they are trained and rehearsed to the last detail for the greatest job of their lives. Persons without tickets are stopped blocks away from Boyle's Thirty Acres and before they approach the sportsmen's altar of heaven they must show they are on the way to lay their offering at the foot of the shrine.

But now, ladies and gentlemen, it is midday. Step inside, people, for this twentieth century amphitheater, this bowl of humanity is a stupendous show in itself and would be if there were to be no gladiators.

Rising in gentle slopes from the square "ring," aisles touch their circumference of the circle within which is the greatest crowd a pugilistic contest ever got together. Alternately about the rim of the saucer the Stars and Stripes and the tricolor of France wave in the lazy, sultry breeze.

The Human Rainbow.

On the inner surface of this shallow dish there is a predominating color tone of black and gray, variously tinted shirts, and those thousands of white dots are straw hats. All this is shot with jabs of crimson which are the caps of the busy ushers. In the circle of boxes there are women, some thousands of them, perhaps, and their raiment adds rainbow tints to the impressive picture.

The bands play blues and jazzes and song boosters warble for a while. Eighteen hundred uniformed policemen and firemen are on duty at posts long ago set for them, and they are ready to act if fire or accident shall threaten to bring disaster in this compact mass of excited humans.

Airplanes roar to and fro above the heads of the crowd. Moving picture men perch themselves on a steel fighting top near the ringside.

About the ring are hundreds of writing men and telegraph instruments sending their tiny racket trickling through the confusion of voices.

Scorn Opening Contests.

It is an unparalleled show; ladies and gentlemen, and it is magnificent in its setting. The preliminaries between fighters of no international note win shouts from the Roman mob. Blood flows and a flutter of enthusiastic horror passes through the boxes where sit the ladies.

The skies had been overcast by clouds since early morning, and when at 1:15 p. m. a light drizzle began to fall into the coverless saucer it was interesting to see how indifferent to a possible drenching a vast asemblage of well groomed fight folk can be.

Clarence Darrow and Maclay Hoyne were at one in overruling any idea of being drowned out and sat serenely watching Mr. O'Gatty trying to put Mr. Burns through the ropes.

At 2 p. m. the sun was out of his corner once more. This is no place for the baldheaded man, who, perforce, goes hatless.

The huge bowl now was filled and the color of pine boards that cost Tex Rickard $250,000 to put together on the aforesaid thirty acres were hidden entirely by the record fight crowd of history.

Fighters' Arrival Electric.

The change in the great crowd at the first word that the two battlers for world honors were about to enter the arena was electric. It was possible for any person in any seat in the mammoth amphitheater to look about at all the others.

The movement of thrilling expectancy when Carpentier and his entourage started down the long aisle toward the ring was like the sweeping to and fro of tree tops under a sudden breeze.

The popularity of Carpentier and the great number of his followers in the fortunes of the day were at once apparent. Cheer after cheer greeted the blonde Frenchman. He wore a smile of pleasure and apparent confidence as he climbed through the newspaper correspondents and up to his corner.

Then, as the cheers were increased to a thunderous greeting, the gentleman from France turned slowly, bowing and smiling. At length, with a peculiarly French gesture, he raised his clasped hands repeatedly to the throng in token of graceful and sincerely appreciative acknowledgment of the fine courtesy the American sporting world was extending to him.

Dempsey's arrival at the ringside a couple of minutes later was greeted with a more tremendous cheer, although a shorter one. Jack, with his skinned rabbit haircut and his dental smile, took the fancy of the mob with his bluff response to these rounds of cheers.

Ruthless Champion Invincible.

The fight is told elsewhere. It would be impossible to describe the intense excitement stirred by that brief but courageous battle put up by Carpentier against the heavier and relentless Dempsey.

By common impulse the thousands of spectators arose at some swift exchange of blows and then resumed their seats when the milling was less strenuous. A madman shrieked in my ear in this first round.

"He's slaughtering that boy; the fight is over; it's over; it's over!"

A girl a few rows away sank back in a faint, and when she was revived she begged to be taken from the place.

When those two dynamic blows hurled Carpentier to the canvas in the fourth round, and when the Frenchman was again knocked down and lay face downward with all his hopes and the hopes of his beloved France withered in defeat, it seemed that the arm of the moving picture operator up there aloft on the fighting top was the only human bit of activity that was functioning normally in the tossing waves of arms and heads.

CHICAGO WOMAN MADE CHAMP'S FIGHTING TRUNKS

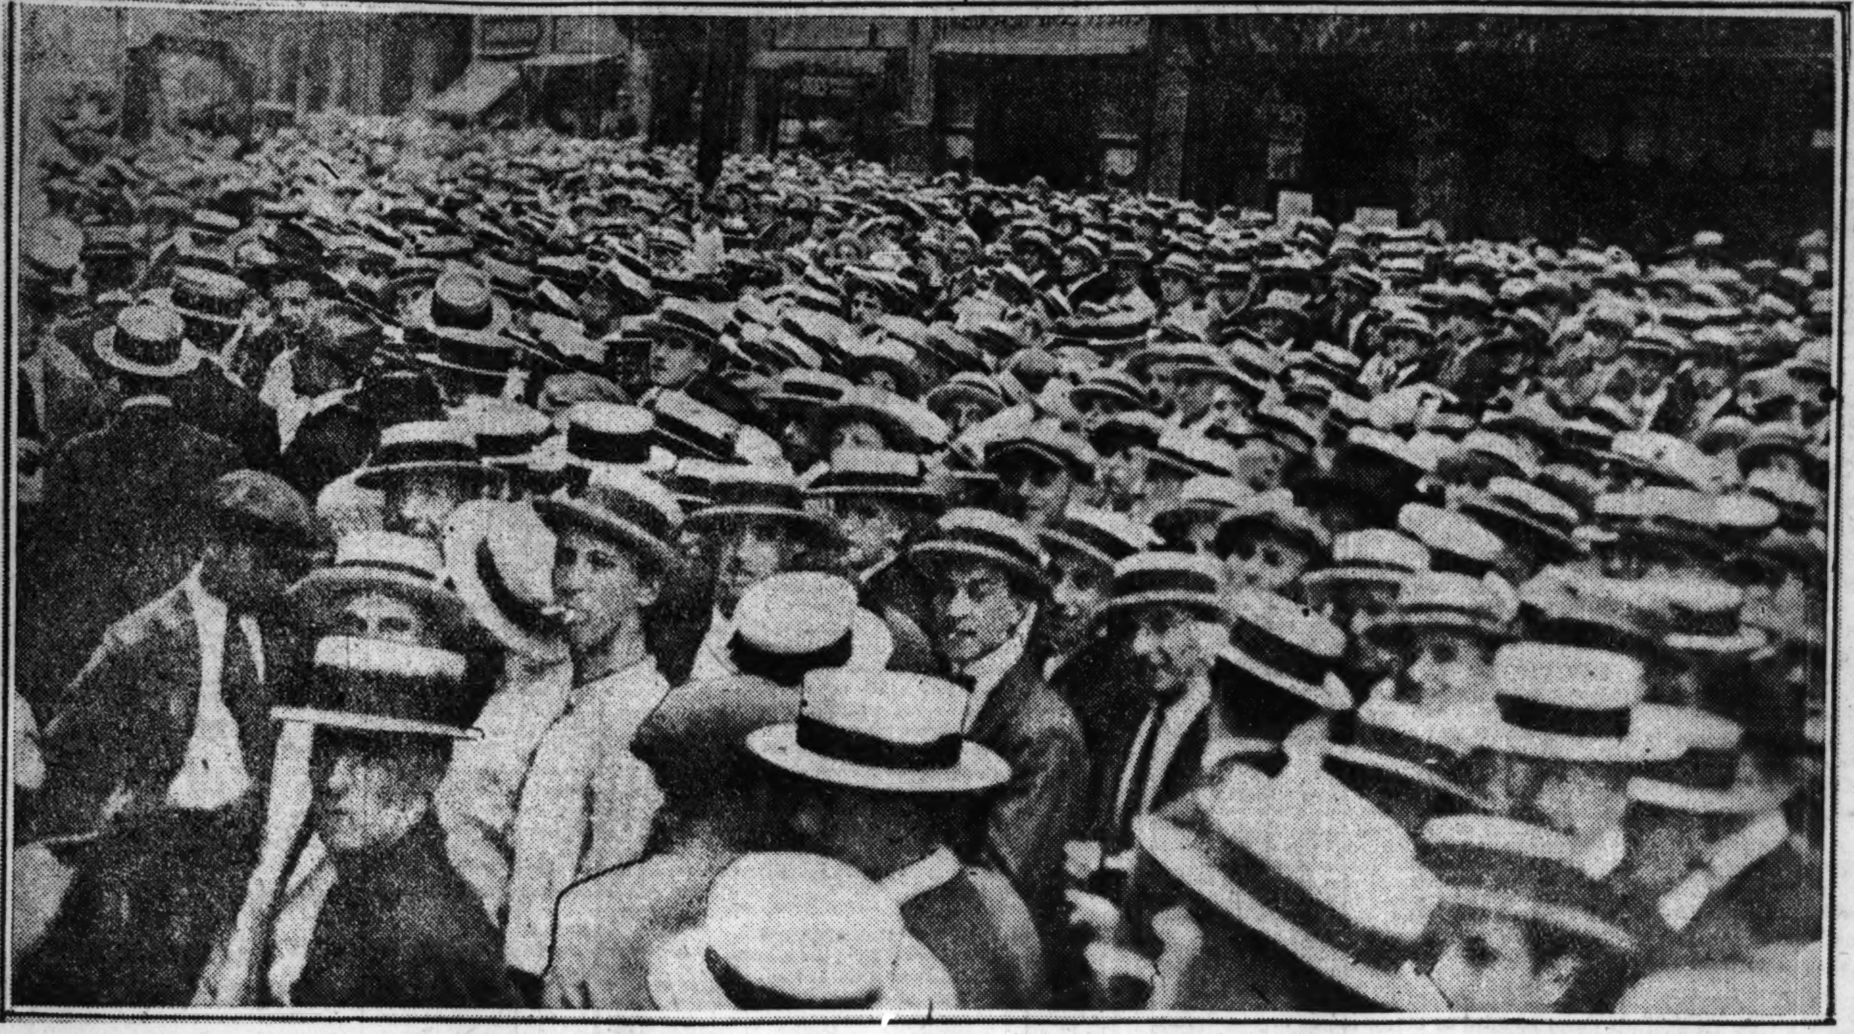
Jersey City, July 2.—The white silk trunks which Dempsey selected for the fight todaw yere provided by Mrs. Moe Brown of Chicago, his landlady in the days of "slim pickings" before his rise in the puglistic game.

Mrs. Brown submitted two pairs of handmade trunks. After eliminating a red, white and blue rosette, which Dempsey said was too fancy, and the hooks and eyes with which they were fastened, on the grounds they might dig into his "tummy," the trunks were declared ready.

Stampede as Gates Open; Policemen Quell Onrush

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—The bleacher gates were opened about 10 o'clock. A mad stampede started, but was quickly checked by an avalanche of cops, who crushed the unruly by sheer weight of numbers.

"TRIBUNE, TELL US OF THE FIGHT!"



Thousands of Chicagoans gathered in front of The Tribune building, at Madison and Dearborn streets, yesterday. Over special wires to the ringside at Jersey City news of the great battle between Dempsey and Carpentier was flashed to them almost instantaneously. Carpentier's magnificent showing in the second round drew storms of approval which rocked the loop. But the word of Dempsey's knockout victory in the fourth round made the Carpentier cheering seem like a whisper lost in memory. After all, the world's fighting championship belongs to Uncle Sam, the thousands seemed to think. Three cheers for Jack Dempsey!

SIDELIGHTS ON BIG FIGHT

BY ROBERT LEE.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 2.—[Special.]—There were two audiences in the arena today. No sooner had the sea of paid faces flowed out through the gates than the proletariat of Jersey City came swarming in. They salvaged pop bottles and newspapers. The grownups stood three deep behind the newspaper gentry. Long before 6 o'clock the amphitheater was cleared and the silence that has characterized it for the last week was upon it again.

There were plenty of those who are always with the winner. When Carpentier entered the ring there was a genuine roar of applause for him. When Dempsey entered, the spectators roared again. When Dempsey towered over the Frenchman like some terrible dinosaur there were shouts like these: "He'll kill him." Then in that brief moment in the second round when the hope of the multitude came near realization there came another roar: "Get him, Georges; get him! By Jinks, the Frenchman is going after him. It's all over with Dempsey. I always said Carpentier could fight. I picked him to win."

Then the fourth round.

If nothing has been said elsewhere about the Jersey police let it be said here. It was the neatest job of traffic handling in many a day. There was hardly a jam. Police were everywhere. Within three hours after the last blow was struck the crowd was dispersed.

The betting odds that were so much talked about, failed to come up to the talk. Last night in New York there were some wagers laid. It was boldly declared that 2 to 1 would prevail at the ring side. There was plenty of money at 2 to 1 but there were no takers. Most of the bets were of $1, the bettors choosing corners of the ring and accepting whichever pugilist happened to be sent from there.

It is doubtful if the weather ever had so many persons on the anxious seat. In fact the anxiety was divided between the ring and rain. The day began with sunshine. Then came clouds. The sky remained, for the most part, overcast. Two or three times there came a light sprinkle. Groans of disappointment burst from the multitude. Then happiness returned as the clouds held their moisture and the play went forward as advertised.

Pudgy sandwiches went at 25 cents each. Water sold for two drinks for a quarter. You drank it out of a tin dipper that served the whole 90,000. Patent seat cushions had been stored up in huge quantities, but there was little demand. If it was going to rain it meant a lot of wetness, and the crowd was prepared to stand it. A few of the forehanded brought their umbrellas, rain hats, and raincoats. All they got for their pains was more heat than is generated inside a boiler. A raincoat surely holds heat when it's hot.

Because of the advertising that the high rates for parking space received those who hoped for a harvest from the temporary storage of automobiles went away broken hearted. Very few cars were brought into Jersey City. The tubes and the ferries were operated under double capacity and the town was filled and emptied in short order.

All the fights were not in the ring. A half-dozen were started in various parts of the amphitheater. But the vigilance of the police prevented any real damage.

"Let them get in the ring," cried the populace.

"Outside!" yelled the police.

Outside they went.

Gov. Edwards got the grand reception. As the governor and his military suite entered the amphitheater there was a grand shout of applause. There was something in this that seemed to show that this kind of an audience likes this kind of a governor. And also, as if the spirit of the times were propitious, there were many women outside selling buttons to aid the cause. The cause? Yes, the cause of liquor.

"This will bring wine and beer back," explained the women. But the mob moved on.

DEMPSEY DINED AT TWO PARTIES AFTER VICTORY

New York, July 2.—Jack Dempsey tonight was the guest of friends who helped him celebrate the successful defense of his title.

The champion went from the arena to the home of William Heppenheimer in Jersey City, where he spent Friday night. There he was entertained at an informal dinner which was attended by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, Mayor Bader of Atlantic City and a few intimate friends of the boxer.

Later Dempsey, with his manager, trainer, and a few friends came to the Hotel Belmont here, where another informal celebration took place.

The champion's plans for the immediate future are uncertain. Already he is swamped with theatrical propositions, but is much averse to even a short career behind the footlights. Dempsey plans to leave for his home in Salt Lake City within a week.

PLANES CIRCLE ARENA; CROWDS MUTTER PROTEST

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—[Special.] —Airplanes swooping and gliding, circling the great arena and dashing across the middle of the ring—this was one of the sights that greeted Georges Carpentier as he climbed through the ropes at Jersey City a few minutes after 3 o'clock.

The appearance of the French boxer seemed to be the signal for the greatest aerial display of the day—a display, incidentally, that was in violation of the urgent requests of the Jersey City authorities.

The popular temper was clearly shown as one aviator, more reckless than his fellows, cut across the corner of the big bowl and glided a few hundred feet over the heads of the populace. There were many muttered imprecations, threatening gestures here and there, and murmured protests against the activities of the flyers.

Buenos Aires Streets Are Blocked by Fight Crowds

BUENOS AIRES, July 2.—Streets in front of the newspaper offices were blocked this afternoon with huge crowds watching the bulletins on the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. The crowds were partial to Carpentier, cheering whenever his name appeared, although they cheered Dempsey's victory.

LONDON YANKS CHEER; PARIS IS DUMFOUNDED

Tribune Bulletins Result.

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 2.—Philharmonic hall, one of the largest in London, was filled tonight with Americans, guests of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, to hear the results of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight.

A few preliminary bulletins arrived, and then at 8:30, London time, "The men are entering the ring," was announced. Thirteen minutes later, "Dempsey wins" was greeted with a genuine American cheer.

Paris Dumfounded.

PARIS, July 2.—[By the Associated Press.]—Consternation fell upon Paris tonight when the defeat of Georges Carpentier at the hands of Jack Dempsey in their bout for the world's championship in Jersey City today was signaled with white lights by airplanes, on newspaper screens, and by theater announcements.

The crowds, absolutely dumfounded, refused to believe the first bulletin telling of Carpentier being knocked out.

The chief gathering place of Americans was the Place de la Concorde. Dempsey's victory was received by wild cheering. The French spectators gazed upon the Americans in silence. Hundreds of thousands of persons were standing before bulletin boards on the boulevards. Men, women, and children stood in silence while they read how Carpentier was completely outclassed and outfought.

The Associated Press flash was the first to reach Paris. It was received at 8:32 o'clock this evening.

Mrs. Carpentier Gets Word.

Mme. Carpentier listened to the progress of the fight in the editorial rooms of the Petit Parisien. Her optism did not fail until the fourth round. When the word came that her husband had taken the count she turned away and said: "Georges is defeated. I shall cancel my trip to the United States and await his return to me."

Carpentier's wife, when seen later, said the shock to her was very severe, and her greatest grief was that she was not with Georges. Her one desire was that her husband return to her as soon as possible. She added proudly, however, "No matter what the result, he fought like a Frenchman and a sportsman."

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 2.

Senators are going to make a last ditch fight on the naval bill conference report to restore the airplane carrier and submarine appropriations cut out by the house. They don't want the navy hamstrung as was the army by "pennywise" economy.

Director Dawes of the budget is going to hold the prohibition commissioner to a strict accounting as well as other government officials. The $7,500,000 appropriation enforcement this year looks to the budget director like a lot of money, some of which ought to be saved.

Defending the duty on petroleum in the new tariff bill, a Mid-Continent Oil official said today that the American oil producing industry was facnig destruction as a result of heavy importations of Mexican oil.

Dr. Crafts of the international reform bureau in a new publication on public uplift says the world is growing worse despite reformers.

Secretary of War Weeks has notified all corps area commanders that in discharging enlisted men to meet the cut ordered by congress they must give them their three year enlistment allowance to which they are entitled by law. This is going to make the economy army cut by congress expensive.

REFORMERS CALL BOUT A CRIMINAL ASSAULT ON CARP

Jersey City, N. J., July 2.—An effort to enter a complaint charging Jack Dempsey with criminal assault upon Georges Carpentier was made by H. C. Gilson, attorney for the International Reform bureau, which tried ineffectually to stop the contest, at the temporary police station established near the arena.

Lieut. Gus Martin, who was in charge, advised the attorney to consult a magistrate. Gilson said he wanted the fact that he had made a complaint with the police recorded, and declared he would visit Chief Battersby for that purpose.

Gilson attended the fight with several New Jersey clergymen, and went to the police station directly after it was over.

CHICAGO FORGETS HOME, BUSINESS, FOR FIGHT NEWS

1,200 Calls Each Minute, Tribune's Record.

Your perspiring metropolis turned its face to the east yesterday and did anxious homage for a space while two men went through half a million dollars worth of fistic maneuvers. Jersey City had become Mecca. Home and business were forgotten in the one ambition to learn the fight result.

The citizen of Chicago, in straw hat and shirt sleeves, appeared nervous and absent minded as he trod the blistering loop. He glanced at the newsstands, where huge headlines assured him Dempsey and Carpentier were awaiting the bell. He paused for an eleventh hour dissertation on their respective chances. His heart, if not his person, was sitting on a $50 seat in the big arena.

"Carpenteer ain't no boob," affirms one. "He's got a nasty right."

Heroes Boost for Dempsey.

Pondering this gastronomic prophecy, we swing into Lake street. There, in front of the Aviation Club of Chicago's employment bureau, stand a group of former service men. Among them is Henning Jorgenson, wearing a victory medal that has bars for the Aisne, the Marne, the Meuse, and Champagne. His croix de guerre, he tells you, has been sent home to the folks in Denmark.

"Us? Oh, most of us want Dempsey to win," says Jorgenson. "He really wasn't a slacker, you know."

His opinion is seconded by J. Tucker of 822 South Wabash avenue, who has seen Georges fight overseas.

Crowd Loop to Get Bulletins.

Up from Dearborn street comes a faint roar. An announcement has been made by a husky megaphone artist standing on a window sill of the Tribune building.

"Carpentier just entered the ring," he calls, and 2,000 sweating humans in the street below rumble approval. The bulletin is followed rapidly by others. Members of the Hamilton club crowd their balcony to hear.

"Bet you even money the Frenchman stays three rounds," says an auditor in the gutter. Another citizen, succumbing to the excitement, takes him up. Battle talk flies thick and fast. France and America are in deadly combat and damn the league of nations!

A few minutes pass. Rounds one, two, and three have been duly chronicled by the megaphone. The crowd waits impatiently for No. 4. It comes like a cataclysm.

Roar Greets Climax.

"Dempsey wins by a knockout!" is the bellow from the window sill. A roar answers. The thousands begin to surge. A citizen dashes frantically up Dearborn, informing the world beauty has been vanquished by the beast. Motormen lean over their controllers to make excited query.

Meanwhile, up on the fifth floor of the Tribune building twelve phone girls are answering the big interrogation at the rate of 1,200 calls a minute. All the facilities for handling the army of TRIBUNE advertisers have been thrown into service. The entire town, apparently, is calling to learn the result.

"And you ought to hear the women," said Anna Garrow, chief of the switchboard. "They outnumbered the men nearly two to one. Guess they were concerned about Car-pong-tuay's beautiful face."

Extras Thrill Crowds.

Within half an hour after the knockout the hectic scramble in four sweltering pressrooms begins to bear fruit. Mighty headlines suddenly appear on the newsstands.

Sitting on a "help keep the city clean" can, we see a man in shirt sleeves reading to a group.

In an automobile at the curb on Dearborn street sits Miss Anna Lundquist of 1456 East 67th place. She, too, reads an extra.

"How do you like the result?" asks the reporter.

"Well, I would like to have seen the other man win," observes Miss Lundquist. "Of course, I am glad to have the title kept in this country, but I think Carpentier is the better sportsman."

Who Cares for Handsome Face?

A pilgrimage among the women folk discloses few who are not interested. Most of them rejoice that Dempsey won.

"But doesn't it grieve you to think that the Frenchman's pretty countenance should have been battered?" inquires the scribe of Ruth Leslé, a writer from New York.

"O heck! Who cares for a handsome face?" comes the reply.

Miss Teen Jacobs, 2508 South Canal street, emerged from a movie theater.

"I don't approve of fights," she says, "but I hope Dempsey wins. He was leading in the fourth inning, you know."

Miss Luella Homestead, 5247 Kenneth avenue, rejoiced in the victory of the tiger because he isn't married.

"I don't really know much about fighting, but I wanted Mr. Carpentier to win," affirmed Miss Hildegarde Willert as she left her billing machine in the Union Trust company.

She Should Worry: $200.

"I should worry," said Mrs. C. B. Gunther, 4026 West Harrison street. "I won $200."

In Grant park an individual in ragged shirt and tattered trousers reclined upon the greensward.

"What," asked the reporter, "do you think of the fight?"

The vagabond eyed him, blinked, and——

"What fight?" came the vague interrogation.

Back to normalcy once more!

I. Open the Great Lakes to the Atlantic.
II. Finish the Lakes to the Gulf Waterway Without Delay.
III. Develop a Practical Highway System.
IV. Regrow Our Vanished Forests.

HEADED TOWARD THE ROCKS.

The Lundin-Thompson machine organized the Fifty-second general assembly with the aid of its vassal, Gov. Small, and undoubtedly the city hall leaders were certain that the state lay bound and gagged at their feet.

The possibilities were rich. By taking over the tax review machinery of the whole state through the bill giving a tax commission appointed by the city hall sweeping powers of "revision," an extraordinary source of political revenue and of political discipline could be acquired. By wiping out the civil service and by creating new jobs liberally, a loyal body of political janizaries could be built up. By passing a joker public utilities bill and talking a lot of city hall jargon about protecting the people's rights, a smoke screen could be produced behind which the main object of all Tammany tactics could be profitably pursued, the main object being, as THE TRIBUNE has pointed out before, plunder.

But the final session of the Fifty-second assembly has not worked out that way. The program was smashed by a revolt against the Lundin-Thompson-Small alliance, which began in Chicago when the city hall invasion of the courts was defeated by a landslide of popular disgust. The better element of downstate in the assembly took heart at this proof that Chicago was out against Tammany at last, and the city hall program began to break up. Lundin and Thompson hurried to join their battle leaders, Small and Ettelson, at the front. Big Bill even entered the house of representatives, and, sitting by the city hall speaker, tried to spread fear by his redoubtable presence into the hearts of the wavering.

But the Tammany tiger, escaped from one of the notable drubbings of our political history, was not such a formidable animal as it had seemed to be, and so the city hall program was so thoroughly demoralized that a special session has been threatened to save its face. The civil service was not destroyed; the tax review machinery has not been turned over to Lundin and Thompson; the bunk traction relief program was riddled, dangerous political provisions being corrected or cut out by amendments.

Considering that the city hall had command not only of its own retainers but of the power of the governor, had organized the assembly, and had, at the start, the momentum of repeated success, this change of fortune blows a cold blast over its future. The legend of its unbeatable power has blown up. The machine has been beaten in Cook county, beaten to a frazzle, and it has been beaten at Springfield. It can be beaten again, and it is going to be beaten conclusively, for the people of Illinois are doped by its demagogy no longer. The looting of Chicago every man and woman in the state can see. The broken promises—broken because they could not be kept and were not made to be kept—are coming home to roost. The loud talk of the people's rights, the red talk about the rich and the yellow talk about the war, which is intended to distract attention from the loot of public funds through padding of pay rolls, huge fees to insiders, and fat contracts where they will do the machine the most good, in short, the whole sordid melodrama of city hall politics is being bared to the eyes of every citizen. Cook county already has revolted. Downstate is realizing that its fear of domination by the worst elements in Chicago politics is well grounded and is encouraged to fight by the example of the voters' revolt in Cook. The vicious program of the machine has gone by the board. The huge campaign of graft backed by terrorism is carrying its organizers to political destruction.

The battle of the state is well begun. The best elements of our citizenship are awake to the folly of that disunion which alone was responsible for the city hall's past successes. We shall have to meet a gas attack of demagogy in the next few months, but the truth will survive it. All that is needed to abolish the machine is the facts, and they are looming clearer day by day.

PERUNA POLITICS.

The agrarian bloc in congress, described as "making the power of the farmers felt in national affairs as seldom before," is preparing to add the following gem to our federal statutes—a law providing for the truthful labeling of paints, oils, turpentines, and varnishes. This is but one feature of the bloc's patent medicine program for the curing of all our economic ills, but we cite it as representative and easily made clear.

But patent medicines are notably alcoholic in content and effect. They are likely to be habit forming. We fear that the agrarian congressmen are developing a predilection for such compounds. Also we fear that there is in the concoction more of methyl than of the more insidious, if less violent sister, ethyl. For that reason we feel justified in reminding the congressmen that wood alcohol is a potent poison and may cause blindness and perhaps political death, even if taken indirectly in the formula for a certain brand of varnish.

We hate to see our solons getting inebriated and sentimental on Senator Corntossel's Golden Political Discovery, spending their time in a frenzied effort to save some downtrodden householder 30 cents on a can of inferior varnish with which he planned to dress the kitchen floor. It is expensive and wasteful. First we have to pay them for their time while preparing this legislative home brew. Then we must pay an expensive staff of bureau chiefs, employés, and prosecutors who dispense it. Then we have them coming down to work the next morning looking for a little of the hair of the dog that bit them, and unable to forget their hangover to take up such practical jobs as the St. Lawrence seaway, the lakes to gulf waterway, the "Pittsburgh plus" evil, and the Panama canal tolls settlement, which demand clear heads and united effort.

The agrarian legislators are new in the midst of their jag on political Peruna. Their friends, constituents, and fellow congressmen must prepare a mental ice pack for their fevered heads and an economic bromo seltzer against the hour of their awakening.

The latter is already at hand in the form of the joint international report on the St. Lawrence seaway project, just signed by engineers for the Canadian and American commissioners, showing that the whole improvement from Lake Ontario to Montreal can be completed for $250,000,000, and that an immediate return of $1,750,000 from hydroelectric power will be made available. This will mean hundreds of thousands of dollars in the pockets of farmers and consumers in the middle west. It ought not to be an unpleasant beverage on which to sober up.

THE VENDETTA IN AMERICA.

Another brutal murder done in broad daylight in a crowded district of Chicago marks the persistence of conditions in the midst of American life which America cannot afford to tolerate. The conditions are so flagrant that one street corner in Chicago is called "death corner," and this is only a few blocks away from one of the best residential districts of the city.

The average American thinks the Sicilian vendetta, in its local practice, is of no concern to him. He reads the headlines of the latest assassination much as he does a "thriller" in fiction. They are killing each other off, he says, and turns to the sporting page.

He is wrong. In the first place, they are not killing themselves off, for when one assassin dies another takes his place. The code of murder lives on and is obeyed by many and condoned by many more. While a community submits to these conditions murder will go on.

But the point which the negligent American overlooks, although it is of direct concern to him, is that the effects of the murder code reach far beyond those who perpetuate it. The labor gunman, the criminal, the political thug are recruited from this class. The latest crime seems to have occurred in a political feud. One of the developments of labor warfare and the struggle for control of certain unions is the appearance of the tactics of assassination. The older tactics seldom included killing, and especially not killing from ambush. That is a hazard which some of the most ruthless of labor czars do not care to face. In the most lawless regions of frontier America it was virtually unheard of. The code demanded a chance for the enemy. But there are no duels in the vendetta. The victim is slaughtered like a helpless beast.

It is foolish to think this spirit or its effects can be confined forever to a district or class. It will demoralize through an increasing radius if it is condoned or escapes the stern punishment it deserves.

We sympathize sincerely with men like Father Gianbastiano and the great majority of reputable Italians who abhor and combat this evil sprung from the poisonous past of a people long oppressed and deprived of conditions of progress. It is clear they are not given the support they have a right to demand from the local government. We realize the difficulties encountered by the police because of perverted race loyalty, and also the fear of reprisal. But difficulties could be overcome if corrupt politics did not make use of race feeling and a false regard for race ties were not perpetuated in the interest of politicians and others who abuse it for political or other advantage.

While Italians segregate themselves and keep alive their Italian race consciousness, resisting the process of Americanization to which they ought to yield themselves wholeheartedly when they adopt American citizenship, this evil will be difficult if not impossible to eradicate. It is important that no considerable addition be made to the class which maintains the vendetta code until it is assimilated to American life.

Editorial of the Day

SHIPPING POLICY AND PANAMA TOLLS.

[New York Evening Post.]

Every forecast of the policy of the new shipping board indicates its determination to put our merchant marine on a practical business basis. It must accept the fact that shipping as good as that which we built for $200 a ton was sold last month in England for $36 a ton. Mr. Mark Sullivan in the Evening Post last week, outlining the board's probable intentions, declared that it would ask the nation to accept "the wiping off of about three billions of the money that has been spent on the shipping board." A special dispatch to the Times on Saturday stated that the new board recognized that its fleet of nearly 1,700 ships is worth "from $750,000,000 to $1,000,000,000," and that it would "be futile to place a higher valuation upon it." If the ships are rated at their actual worth they can be sold and the buyers can operate them at a profit impossible at present capital costs.

By this policy, and not by subsidies, can the merchant marine be put on its feet. The ship owner, obtaining his ships at a fair price and liberal terms, assisted by government agencies in obtaining foreign trade, and confronted by the necessity of showing all his energy and efficiency, will build up a vigorous American marine if it can be done at all. Artificial nourishment by subsidies, direct or indirect, involves many elements of injustice to the public, and will never give us anything but a flabby marine. The preferential rail rates contemplated in the Jones act would be mischievous, and President Wilson did right in refusing to abrogate over night those treaties which prevented such preferential treatment. Even more mischievous would be the preferential treatment of American ships at the Panama canal, remitting their tolls.

Tolls remission has against it those weighty arguments based on considerations of international fair play and respect for treaties which were urged by Root, Choate, and President Wilson. It would be the violation of a solemn treaty of the United States. That is the central objection to it. But it is open to the objections leveled against other indirect subsidies. The Mississippi valley states are already protesting against it as a sectional measure designed to benefit far western farmers by lowering their freight rates at the cost of higher middle western taxes. It would be a factitious aid to a marine which should learn to survive without factitious aids.

THE STEERAGE.

Below the transient homes (that rival all
Of splendor Rome could show before her fall),
The steerage lies: I stumble down a slippery stair
And meet rank odors with the lifting air;
Another world is here of burly males,
Like womenfolk, and children breathing mirth or wails;
On stirring screws, it is a lurching boat
That up above seems but to glide and float;
Yet, here is Life—red, vibrant to the core,
In alien types and tongues, bound for a homeward shore:
They dance the peasant dances, wild and free;
"American no good," is flung at me,
And when they sing the newborn songs, I hear
The menace of a challenge sounding near.

FATHERHOOD.

Sir: Hail to thee, Bonnie! One walked a block down Dearborn this morning with his hat off to you. Thou art of the Rock upon which is built the health and wealth and happiness of the nation, and of these thou shalt partake to fullness.

Only don't misunderstand that Dear Dub so cruelly. Here is a Dub whose Bonnie—bonnier today than e'er in seven years before—gave him their fourth he-cub less than three months ago.

I'll show you white hairs aplenty in a head of thirty, that attest the anguish of the Dear Dub. Oft did he lie awake into morning hours (when your weary burden had dragged you to the depths of sleep) haunted by horrid visions of your certain flirtation with death. And when the hour came and you were busy, so sadly, heroically busy, he stood by, and never will you know what was his hellish agony.

What would be the wringing of your heart were one of those beloved he-cubs of yours being buffeted in a treacherous devouring sea, sinking and rising to sink and rise again, and you stood on the shore impotent to aid, a dumb paralytic who had only eyes to see and not a muscle to move. Oh, Bonnie, if only at that moment the Dear Dub's heart had opened to liberate his agony as you were delivered of yours, and you had had but a glimpse therein, there would never again cross your path the faintest shadow of a doubt that his is a love for you, greater even than that of which the Holy Word says there is none greater.

But Bonnie, the day is coming when you and your Dear Dub and my Bonnie and I will be the envy of many, yea of all those who are now sinking their bark of happiness because the blackest cowardice, the grossest selfishness makes them fear to sail the sea of pain that tortures soul and body and that closes the harbor of happiness. You know, Bonnie, that between the crew of two who sail that sea together there grows a bond of greater strength than any of which the earth in metals yields.

Lastly, Bonnie, there are a few more years ahead with days of messy jobs and utter weariness and discouragement. Be then of good heart and view this picture which is a draft of courage to my Bonnie and to me: An old, gray, little, loving mother and a dwarfish, bewhiskered, gentle, blue-eyed Dub, who laid their only he-cub, their only child, on the flag draped altar of '17-'18, and live in utter desolation. How they wish that there had been more cubs, three or four, or even thirteen like my daddie's Bonnie gave to him.

God bless you, Bonnie, and that Dear Dub of yours and the three little he-cubs. L. F. H.

ON FEEDING THE BABY.

THE use of sweetened condensed milk has the advantage of convenience. A can of sweetened condensed milk need not be kept on ice after it has been opened, although it is wise to keep it in the icebox if there is one. It can be kept several days after having been opened. In other words, the contents will not spoil in the ordinary time required to use that amount of milk.

The disadvantages are several. The food elements are out of balance. There is too much sugar for the amount of fat, protein and mineral salts. So far as we now know sweetened condensed milk is deficient in that vitamine which prevents scurvy.

The babies fed on sweetened condensed milk are generally fat, chubby and have plenty of dimples. In the old time baby show they had a way of taking the prizes, for when bedecked with lace and ribbons they were good to look at. But the physicians say they easily got bowel trouble, especially in hot weather, and when they did they crumpled up quickly. Babies fed on cow's milk have less resistance than those fed on human milk. Those fed on sweetened condensed milk have even less resistance. In spite of these disadvantages of sweetened condensed milk, its convenience, especially in homes where ice is not taken, causes it to be widely used.

Evaporated milk has the advantage over sweetened condensed milk, as it is very much better balanced from the nutritional standpoint. Therefore physicians advise it in preference to the sweetened product. Its disadvantage is that it does not keep well. When a can is opened it must be kept in the icebox or used up quickly.

The baby foods have a considerable following. In every community there are a number of mothers who advocate one food, talk it among their friends because their babies thrived on it, ofttimes after having failed to thrive on other foods. There is another group that talks up another brand, a third group that talks up a third brand, and so on. All are honest, earnest women speaking out of their experiences.

The various baby foods are convenient, they keep well, they do not require to be kept in the icebox, they do not go to pieces in any way rapidly. A package kept anywhere near right can be emptied before the contents spoil. These foods have had several scientific boosts in recent years.

The scientific approval of milk powders reacts favorably on them, since most of them have milk powder as a base. The proof that milk can be dried without loss of vitamines has helped them, so has the proof that the anti-scurvy principle is kept intact when it has been dried. Some experiments made at the University of Illinois which proved the value of one of these foods have reacted to the advantage of all of them. Finally, since so many of them contain malt ingredients, all the advocacy of malt soups and other malt preparations has helped them.

The disadvantages of the baby foods are several. They are expensive. In using them we are apt to try to make the baby fit the food and not the food fit the baby. In other words, they are inelastic.

In some particulars they are not well balanced from the standpoint of nutritional elements. But the main objections is that they lead us farther away from the basic proper methods of feeding—and that is mother's milk flowing directly from the teat into the baby's mouth, unhandled and unfabricated.

YOU ARE KEEPING YOUNG.

S. B. writes: "I seek a remedy for sleeplessness. I use that term and not insomnia because I am not, up to this time, made in any degree uncomfortable by the unnatural condition which I seek to have removed. I am in my 77th year and from childhood have been an uncertain sleeper. Now I seldom sleep more than two or three hours in the twenty-four, though I go to bed at 8 o'clock and get up about 6. I lie in bed for hours as comfortable as I can ask to be, yet without sleep. I seldom notice my lack of sleep, though occasionally I am a little dizzy. I am afraid of senile dementia. I am unwilling to resort to drugs of any kind. I do not use tobacco or tea or coffee. My principal exercise is a rapid walk of three or four miles the first thing in the morning. For mental exercise I read heavy books and magazine articles and I combine large numbers in my head."

REPLY.

Eat a few crackers and a glass of warm milk or of ordinary buttermilk at bedtime. Beyond that you are not justified in doing anything. You probably are getting all the sleep you need. Doubtless you have many cat naps which you do not count. Let me congratulate you on your philosophy. Many people, who are poor sleepers, keep themselves awake by fear and worry that they will not sleep. It becomes a phobia with them. This insomnia phobia is one of the most frequent causes of insomnia. I also congratulate you on not taking coffee. Many old people are poor sleepers because they use coffee in excess. You need not fear senile dementia. You could get insurance against that cheap. A man of 77 who walks three or four miles a day, who reads heavy books and magazines, and who calculates has too many interests and too much pep to be in danger of senile dementia. That condition develops in the pepless, those without interest in life.

PARALYZED OPTIC NERVE.

M. W. writes: "The optic nerve of my left eye is paralyzed. Would that affect the brain or the heart? Will glasses help or is there any cure? The eye is very sensitive to strong light."

REPLY.

If you mean you have an atrophy of the optic nerve, glasses will not help you nor is there any cure. You are lucky if only one nerve is affected. Optic atrophy will not affect the brain or the heart, but in some cases of optic atrophy brain trouble originates the eye trouble.

2. No.

WAR ON RATS.

Chicago, June 28.—[Friend of the People.]—Is a landlord allowed to raise the rent of his tenants when he does not look after the property, just ignores all complaints? The house we live in has been bothered with rats for a long time, since last December, and we have advised the landlord and the agents who look after the collecting of rents, but nothing has been done. Last night the rats ate a hole in one of the floors. Seeing the advice given others, thought I would write you. A. G.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served on the agents to exterminate all rats in building.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE ELEEMOSYNARY STEEL CORPORATION.

Fort Atkinson, Wis., June 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I was much interested in the editorial in last Sunday's issue of THE TRIBUNE in regard to the Pittsburgh basing plan. There is one phase of the matter as you and others have handled it that leaves a wrong impression.

During the war and through 1919 and a good part of 1920 the steel corporation supplied in the neighborhood of 40 per cent of the steel consumed in this country, and while the prices of independents ranged variously from $10 to $126 per ton higher than the corporation, getting theirs while the getting was good, the corporation voluntarily increased its wages from time to time until wages were more than double, but kept their selling prices down and did their best to protect their customers and stabilize the market.

In regard to the foregoing, so as to be more specific, during the latter part of 1919 and early 1920 independents quoted galvanized sheets as high as $240 per ton, while the corporation supplied their customers at $114 per ton f. o. b. Pittsburgh, and when prices were at this extreme do not recall of any independent selling for less than $180 a ton.

Now, the foregoing has nothing whatever to do with the question in hand except to explain the attitude of the steel corporation's customers toward them, regardless of the fact that many of these same customers are members of the Western Association of Rolled Steel Consumers, who are trying to have the Pittsburgh basing plan abolished.

JOSEPH P. CRANSTON.

THE SINGLE TAX AS A CUREALL.

Chicago, June 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. Arthur M. Evans' review of the census returns on farm values in THE TRIBUNE of June 24 is an eye opener for those groping in the dark for the cause of the H. C. L. In the central states farm values more than doubled. This, of course, means farm land values. There is little doubt that land values in the cities and mineral regions doubled, if indeed they did not treble.

The earth out of which all forms of food, fuel, raiment, and shelter must come has gotten farther from reach of the tillers of soil and hewers of wood. We are faced with the fact that the great public domain is literally gone. To secure a portion of the earth's surface from which to draw the necessities of life men must bid against each other.

Is it not time that we give some thought to the basic teachings of economic science? Namely, that the earth's surface is man's field of opportunity, and that to continue an institution which positively nurtures trafficking in land will certain drive this civilization where others have gone before.

The tendency so well defined by the census, showing the land values of the country to have trebled in the first twenty years of the twentieth century, is irresistible. We must reverse the tendency or it will overwhelm us. There is nothing quite so irresistible as a tendency. Henry George showed the way to reverse this tendency in "Social Problems," one of the most readable and instructive books treating of political economy: "All that is necessary to do is to abolish all other forms of taxation until the weight of taxation rests upon the value of land irrespective of improvements, and take the ground rent for the public benefit." G. T. T.

THE NEED OF AMERICANIZATION.

Chicago, June 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—On behalf of we Americans who try to live up to the American customs, I am assuming the privilege of calling your attention to the Maxwell and Halsted streets community, known as the Ghetto. I had occasion to pass through that unprided district recently and was very much surprised the way them people ignored our ways and laws. This trip was on a Sunday, that being their busiest day, a day which real Americans should try to respect, but here these people thrive away without any respect or regard whatsoever of our customs. They simply refuse to become Americans—simply outlaws to our traditions. Such a class of people are the ones who are instrumental in giving the good and law abiding Jews a bad name. This should be taken seriously by the better class of Jews with a motive to stop this vulgar farce of Americanism and try to keep the standard of equality more on a level. Such modes of living—with all due respect to any and all religious creeds—should be compelled to submit to the ways and manners of the country in which these people flock to. They must surely like the United States or else they would not be here, so why not they be compelled to live the American way like real people do? SAMUEL COHEN.

EVIDENTLY MR. M'SHANE HAS HAD A GOOD RUN.

Garrett, Ind., June 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In regard to your editorial in this morning's [June 27] paper, entitled "Pay the Railroads," I wish to contradict that part which says, "it is a fact that they were returned to the owners physically deteriorated."

Now I as a locomotive engineer am in a position to know that the above is incorrect, as there never was a time in my fifteen years of railroading when the power and equipment were kept in such good condition as they were during federal control. And since being turned back the power and equipment have gone right back to where they were before.

What would the railroads do with this seven or eight hundred million dollars which you claim the government should pay them? They couldn't buy material because they have not got room to put any more. The material yards are full, the right of way is strewn with it.

So there would only be one place for this money to go and that would be in the stockholders' pocket.

H. H. MCSHANE.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE SONG OF THE MYSTIC.

By Father Ryan.

I walk down the Valley of Silence—
Down the dim, voiceless valley—alone!
And I hear not the fall of a footstep
Around me, save God's and my own;
And the hush of my heart is as holy
As hovers where angels have flown!

Long ago I was weary of voices
Whose music my heart could not win;
Long ago I was weary of noises
That fretted my soul with their din;
Long ago I was weary of places
Where I met but the human—and sin.

In the hush of the Valley of Silence
I dream all the songs that I sing;
And the music floats down the dim Valley,
Till each finds a word for a wing,
That to hearts, like the Dove of the Deluge,
A message of Peace they may bring.

Do you ask me the place of the Valley,
Ye hearts that are harrowed by Care?
It lieth afar between mountains,
And God and His angels are there;
And one is the dark mount of Sorrow
And one the bright mountain of Prayer.

"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Mystic Isles of the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"Queen Victoria," by Lytton Strachey.

"COQUETTE," Frank Swinnerton's much heralded novel, is at last a reality, living up to its name, to its heralding, and to Mr. Swinnerton's reputation for knowing how the other half lives—the other half meaning man's better, so to speak. "Coquette" is the story of a girl of 17, unattractive, poor, uneducated, who, as a stitcher up and odd jobs girl in a tenth rate seamstress' establishment, looks upon life and finds it n. g. and who, by a hard determination to make something of herself, becomes exceedingly chic, the wife of the son of one of the most fashionable dressmakers in London and etc., meanwhile retaining with amazing sang froid one Toby, lover extraordinary.

If anybody but Frank Swinnerton had written "Coquette" it would be called a dime novel. Because he did it with his usual art it is an important novel. Myself, I have never been completely sold on Frank Swinnerton. He is a good writer, a very good one when he isn't in a hurry. His psychology is at times almost unbelievably accurate—he has that half cynical honesty about romantic situations which is a relief after the soppiness of many writers of love scenes. [That word soppy is lifted from "Coquette." Sally's abomination is a soppy person.]

He somehow gathers in enough mist from the heavens to veil his story with atmosphere. But in a story which seems perfectly quiet and uneventful, which is wholly psychological, all of a sudden he will inject pure melodrama. Maybe that's the way life treats us, but somehow it always jolts the clouds of atmosphere away, and the little river of psychology seems to be dammed, and you feel as though he had got tired of his fine writing and had said to himself, "I gotta finish this thing. Guess I'll put a little jazzy tragedy in and call it a book."

"Coquette" is a thriller through most of its pages because it is brilliant psychologizing about the mind of a self-enlisted coquette. At the end it is a thriller in the same way that "Blue Jeans" was and that "The Bat" is, because death, either imminent or sudden, is a cheap nerve tingler. Well, there's this about "Coquette": A lot of readers are going to "learn about women from her."

Edna Ferber has left her bed and board in Chicago and has gone to spend the summer in Estes Park, where Enos Mills has a rarefied hostelry in the rarefied atmosphere of Long's peak. She is reading proofs now on her novel "The Girls," which will be published about the middle of October after its serialization. If it is as good as the first part of "Fanny Herself" it will be a really great book. That story of the wise, gentle, slaving mother fighting fate with the only weapon that is put into the hands of mortals—unswerving work and hope—is something far finer than it was given credit for being, smothered as it was by the story of Fanny herself.

The idea of "The Girls" is novel, perhaps because it is such a homely one. We have all known a group of old women who still called themselves "The Girls." Little groups of "girls" of whatever age always refer to themselves as such. This is the story of three generations of "girls," unadjusted to each other and struggling to adjust themselves to life.

Speaking of Estes Park, if God is good and we can find a pair of walking boots that fit us, we, too, are going to Long's peak to forget that our little state is bounded on the north by hungry presses, on the south by voracious readers, on the east by the day that copy must be in, and on the west by such beautiful sunsets as make our heart ache to have time to look at 'em. We're going to ride straight into the goldenest of 'em.

"This World of Ours," by J. H. Curle is not such an ambitious title as it sounds. Mr. Curle knows it, all of its byways, as well as its highways. With the blood of the Pinzons of Spain who sailed with Columbus to discover America chugging for recognition, he began his wanderings at the age of 14. He became a mining engineer, and resolved to "go down every gold mine in the world," and he did, five hundred in thirty-eight countries. Then he traveled more—and more. "If Francis Bacon could take all knowledge as his province," he says, "why shouldn't I try to take this round world of ours for mine . . . and I did." He is probably the only man writing nowadays who might use that title honestly—for a book of travel.

"Star Points" is an anthology of modern "Songs of Joy, Faith, and Promise," made by Mrs. Waldo Richards, who compiled "High Tide" and "The Melody of Earth." Mrs. Richards has a real sense of beauty in poetry, and she shares abundantly her love for fine thoughts in fine words.

"Scaramouche," by Rafael Sabatini, is a good old fashioned historical romance full of swashbuckling and the fruit of the vine, and not too unrestrained love, and the rise of the French revolution casting its shadow into the lives of the characters. "Scaramouche"—the clever cynic of the old strolling player mimes—is the name of the hero—a name assumed with the garb of the actor. A young lawyer whose name is Andre—Louis Moreau—the godson of an aristocrat, reared as a gentleman, but ignorant as to his parentage, fired by the killing of his best friend, a revolutionist, by the great lord of Brittany, swearing an oath that his friend should be avenged, becomes himself a revolutionary and, as escape is certain death, joins a band of players. There he becomes Scaramouche, and all of the rest of the way through the almost four hundred pages he plays the part of that wily cynic, no matter what part fate gives him in the mime of life. This story has all of the thrill of the Stanley Weyman tales (shades of a childhood literary aberration! How I used to love 'em), and has something of a literary flavor besides. A sweep of a plumed hat, everything done with a gesture, conversation graceful and subtle—everything that one might ask of a romantic novel is here. If any book can overcome one's prejudice toward the historical romance, "Scaramouche" ought to do it.

There was much wailing and gnashing of teeth when the Pulitzer prize awards were announced. There were those—and many of 'em—who thought "Main Street" should have been the prize novel. Edith Wharton's "The Age of Innocence," though, is a gorgeous piece of work. The sheer finesse, the exquisite polish of the work she did in that book, is an amazing thing in our present day slap-dash literary world. Sinclair Lewis himself declared that it was almost a perfect creation.

And speaking of publicity, which we weren't, there is Albert Einstein, the demon relativitist. Besides the natural fund of publicity material which is inherent in him, every once in a while somebody volunteers as an amateur press agent, as witness Ald. Falconer's veto of the vote of the New York City fathers to extend to Dr. Einstein the freedom of the city. That secured for the scientist columns of newspaper space. In Germany Herr Leibus, editor of a Berlin paper, was equally successful, for his modest proposal to murder Dr. Einstein for the good of the fatherland came even to this country as a news note.

Visitors last week. Former fellow citizens. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Dell. Mr. John V. A. Weaver. Johnny Weaver is a nice boy, and we're all awfully fond of him, and his "In American" is something new and peppy, and we hate to hear him say that Chicago is a hick town and to underline New York City when he signs a register. Maybe it's because we know we are a hick town but that New York is just as much a hick town to Londoners and London as much a hick town to Parisans and Paris and all of the others as much hick towns to the artist who does his shopping on Mount Olympus. Annyway, as Mr. Dooley used to say, Floyd Dell likes us and was almost childishly happy to get back.

And that "childishly" reminds me. When I began my so-called "literary career" by timidly suggesting to Mr. Dell that I'd like to review books for him—when I went to see him with my future palpitant upon his word, he seemed extremely adult to me—years and years older than I could ever be. Now he seems of some attainable human age, the age of perpetual youth and simplicity. He is, as a matter of fact, extremely young to have, as the papers say, such a brilliant future behind him.

"The Briary Bush," the sequel to "Moon Calf," which will be published in the fall, is entirely a Chicago story. It is not a photograph of the "intellectual life" of Chicago seven or eight years ago. It is an interpretation, rather, and no one will be recognizable. That assurance is at once a calmer of fears and a murderer of hopes! The Dells are on their way to Port Royal (Davenport) and points west up to and including California.

JUST ABOUT DOGS

by Edward Goldbeck

REALLY, I do not see why I should not write about dogs. The dog is a literary topic. Schopenhauer, the philosopher of pessimism, proved that his philosophy was genuine by living alone with a poodle. Frederick the Great, in his leisure hours a pessimistic philosopher, too, wanted to be buried with his dogs, because he despised the "race méchante" of human beings. Anatole France is tenderly profuse about Riquet, M. Bergeret's little dog, and tries to tell us what Riquet feels and thinks, what he reveres and loves and fears.

It was not always so. On the classical French stage at the time of Louis XIV. certain words were permitted as "noble," other ones were forbidden as "low." When Racine in one of his tragedies used the word "dog," his daring was admired, praised, and blamed. His successors were less audacious; they called the dog "de la fidélité respectable soutien," the respectable adherent of fidelity. But these times of restraint are gone; nowadays we are allowed to call a dog a dog [in literature] and so I may just as well use this privilege.

Anatole France does not share the idea of Descartes, that animals are soulless mechanisms. Here is the beginning of his novel "M. Bergeret a Paris": "M. Bergeret was sitting at table and taking his frugal supper. Riquet was lying at his feet on a cushion. Riquet's soul was religious, and he bestowed the honors of divinity on the human being. He thought that his master was very good and very great. Especially when he saw him at table he conceived the sovereign grandeur and goodness of M. Bergeret. Everything eatable seemed beautiful and precious to him, but human food impressed him as something august. He worshiped the dining room as a temple, the table as an altar. During the meal he kept his place at his master's feet, silent and immobile."

Later on, Zoé, M. Bergeret's sister, wants to dust the sideboard. Riquet begins to growl and to bark at her and gets into a condition of wild excitement. He cannot endure such a desecration. Zoé complains about the stupidity of the dog, but her brother takes his side. "He is intelligent," says M. Bergeret. "He does not understand all our ideas, but we do not understand all of his. The souls are impenetrable." [Oh tragedy!]

A Melancholy Dog Called Comical.

DO dogs feel that, too? Mine do. I have two dogs. One is a female, the most melancholy looking dog I ever saw. Her name is Comical. She knows all my moods, sufferings, loathings, despairs. She knows them by intuition. The other dog is a male, a wire haired terrier, an English aristocrat. [His mother was Lady Squibbs.] His name is Innocent on Sundays, Nocy on week days. Queer names? Not at all. My neighbor has a collie, whom he calls Alma Gluck. Sometimes I hear her bark. What a voice, what a technique!

Nocy has no intuition, but he tries hard to understand. At such moments he gives his neatly designed head the angle of interrogation, as if he wanted to see more clearly. But soon he returns to activity, for he is a practical dog and averse to wasting his time in useless assaults at the "Unknowable."

I love dogs: what an immense asset of joy, benevolence, sympathy, is shown by the incessant movements of their psychographic tails! Highbrows think they are vulgar. A German poet once wrote the following words: "Go away. Grief is noble and you, though you are whining so faithfully, are low." Ridiculous arrogance, stupid overvaluation of human nature! Our grief is never exclusively noble; even in the periods of deepest grief we remain "low," subject to all the imperative demands of animalism, and the only difference is that we know it and that this knowledge adds a subtle and poignant nuance to our suffering.

There has been endless debating about the difference between the thought of the animal and that of the human being. I think that the difference exists only in quantity, not in quality. The foundation of thought is memory. Voltaire has already said: "Without memory, no mind." Are the dogs endowed with memory? No doubt. After many years of separation the dog will recognize his master, only he does it by smell. We recognize things by smell, too, occasionally, and there is even a French saying: "The nose is the memory." The fragrance of a flower may bring back long forgotten associations of thought. But we have many other means of identifying objects. We know for instance the appearance, the anatomy, the history of the human being. It is doubtful whether the dog knows that a human being has two arms, two legs, two ears, and one nose. He is able to see these details, but it is questionable whether he ever perceived them, stated them to himself. What he knows is probably this: a certain kind of smell designates a human being.

No Future for the Barking Language.

IT is often said that the dog cannot form abstract notions. He probably can. He knows that a cat is not a squirrel, he distinguishes a rabbit from a bird. Well, what else is abstraction? He does not reach the result by a complicated logical process of eliminating certain characteristics and combining other ones, but do we? Life would be a rather wearisome affair if every time I mention a cat I should have to go through the business of putting together the mosaic of details which when it is completed means "cat."

The dog has senses, the dog has memory, to retain the impressions which he receives through his senses; the dog has a language to communicate his impressions. But at this point we must pause. Man gets most of his notions through the eye and the ear, and he can fix these notions and impart them through signs which apply to the eye and the ear. The dog has notions, too, but he gets most of them through smell. Smell cannot, however, be reproduced, and so the dog cannot reproduce his notions. Evidently it is impossible to impart smell notions through the ear or the eye. The dog, who ought to have a language founded on the communication of smells, uses a language which by its nature is bound to ignore his strongest, most fundamental faculty. Under these circumstances it is to be feared that the barking language has no great future. That barking is differentiated and expresses emotions and various grades of emotion is sure. But whether, for instance, a dog can say in barking: "Here is a bird!" "There is a man!" and so on, is doubtful.

This is a dualism which seems to be inherent in a dog's nature and which prevents him from reaching a higher position in the myriad graded scale of nature. As he has not the right kind of language, the language which would be adequate to his organization, he cannot fix and retain his impressions, he cannot develop his memory. Every dog observer knows how easily a dog forgets.

In this respect—a pessimst might say—he is happier than we are. We remember, alas! all the bitterness of life to our last hour. We remember the foul taste of all those cups we had to empty to the dregs; contempt from fools, treason from friends, humiliations from cads and knaves. Every night before going to bed we ought to drink a cocktail mixed of Lethe and that wonderful ingredient which the French all "Ye m'en fiche," the Russians "Nitshewo," the Germans "Wurstigkeit," and the Americans "I don't care."

I must stop, for Nocy wants to go for a walk. He refuses to go out by himself. He runs after every car, and I am afraid some day he will run into one. A short time ago an interesting question was raised in a suit in Boston. The owner of a dog killed by an automobile asked $1,000 damages. The driver of the car responded that the dog clearly committed suicide by hurling himself under defendant's car. A clever contention, and if it could be proved, that dog would have taken a feather out of man's cap; but this proof is impossible, for France was right when he said with gentle melancholy that "the souls are impenetrable."

When I come back, Comical will greet me ecstatically. But at the very moment when she wants to rush at me in a frenzy of welcoming she will have to stop and scratch herself. Poor dog! Well, Comical, never mind, we have known each other for quite a time and can get along without the symbol, as the husband said when his wife wanted to kiss him.

Jury Quickly Decides That Slayer Is Sane.

With virtually his last chance to beat the gallows swept away by a jury's decision declaring him sane, Carl Wanderer merely yawned yesterday as Judge David sentenced him to be hanged on July 29.

It was the second time within three months that he had stood in Criminal court while a judge fixed the date he was to die on the gallows for murder. Only intervention by Gov. Small can save Wanderer now.

The jury, which has listened for ten days while attorneys alternately argued or wrangled with the judge over the question of Wanderer's sanity, took less than an hour to reach a verdict declaring him sane. Only two ballots were necessary.

Judge Silences Attorney.

As Judge David stepped to the bench after Ferdinand Scherer, his chief clerk, had read the jury's verdict, Attorney Lloyd Heth announced he wished to make a statement.

"I want——" he began.

"I don't care what you want," snapped the judge, irritated by the interruption. "There has been too much talk all through this case."

Afterward Mr. Heth explained he intended to call the judge's attention to the Supreme court's ruling, calling for a speedy hanging for condemned murderers found sane after an insanity hearing.

Cites Supreme Court Dictum.

"The ruling requires the judge to set an early date," he declared. "Every day that Wanderer lives increases the chances that he will beat the rope. The ruling as taken from the opinion handed down in the Gene Geary insanity trial provides:

"'After the trial the court should at once enter the verdict and judgment thereon, and immediately thereafter definitely fix the date for the execution of the defendant, which may be set at any time thereafter, except on Sunday, but time of such sentence to be fixed just sufficiently far ahead to give the sheriff of the county time to properly prepare for the execution of the defendant.'"

Wanderer scratched his ears and a wan smile lit up his face for a second as Judge David set the date for his execution.

As the judge read, "And he is sentenced to be hanged by the neck until dead," Wanderer yawned and rubbed his hand across his face.

David Raps "Public Officials."

Before discharging the jurors Judge David congratulated them as men who had not shirked their duty to serve as jurors. Then he made a bitter attack on what he termed attempts by public officials to influence the verdict of the jury.

"If there were more men like you," he said, "there would not be so much talk of crime going unpunished. You men showed you were able to come to a decision without being swayed by tears or attempts to give false impressions to the jury.

"During the course of this trial I have received several threatening letters. One of them intimated that I had received money for giving Wanderer an insanity trial.

"Attempts have been made to influence this court by public officials who do not realize the importance of their positions. Such attempts are absolutely reprehensible. Statements have been published which, if true, might have influenced judges in the performances of their duty."

Crowe Sides With Chief.

Statements by Chief Fitzmorris in which he said Wanderer should be hanged, and that state officials had no right to testify against the state as certain alienists did at the Wanderer insanity trial, evidently were the target for the judge's wrath.

State's Attorney Crowe immediately after the trial backed up the statements of the chief.

Harry E. Shoff, vice president of the George A. Limbert company, was foreman of the jury. He refused to give out any statement, saying it had been decided by vote that no interviews be given.

The victory yesterday is the third won by the state in the Wanderer case. Following the murder of his wife and a "ragged stranger," Wanderer was tried for the murder of his wife. A jury gave hi mtwenty-five years. A second jury sentenced him to die for the murder of the "ragged stranger."

Appeals to the Supreme court having failed, Wanderer was virtually resigned to his fate when Gene Geary stayed his execution by applying for an insanity trial under the ancient statute of 1845. An appeal of a similar nature was made for Wanderer and Judge David granted a trial by jury.

FIND 38% OF U. S. FARMS. ARE NOW RUN BY TENANTS

2,454,746 Rent Land Which They Till.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Farm tenantry, a growing problem of American agriculture, has now increased to the point where nearly two out of every five farms in the United States are run by renters instead of by the owners.

The figures for 1920, just issued by the census bureau, are lower than the estimates other governmental agencies have made from time to time, but they show that of all the farms in the country 38.1 per cent are operated by tenants. In 1910 it was 37 per cent, in 1900 35.3 per cent, in 1890 28.4 per cent, and in 1880 25.6 per cent.

Ever since 1880, and perhaps before that time, the farms operated by tenants have in each decade increased faster than those run by owners. In the ten years between 1910 and 1920 the number of owners who ran their farms decreased about one-half of 1 per cent, farms operated by managers increased 17.9 per cent, tenants increased in number 4.2 per cent. In 1920 the number of farms in the United States was 6,448,366, of which 3,925,090 were run by owners, 68,530 by managers, and 2,454,746 by tenants. About two-fifths of the American farmers thus have no stake in the land they till.

Big Increase in West.

The most significant increase in tenantry has come in the great fertile regions of the west, where lands have advanced furthest, and in states where new land has been turned under the plow. The proportion of farms run by tenants is highest in the south.

Of the northern states, Illinois has most tenants—101,196—and Nebraska has the highest ratio of tenants to all farmers, 42.9 per cent. This is how tenantry stands in some adjoining states:

Tenants Work on Shares.

The trend has been towards tenancy on shares. In 1920, 68.4 per cent of all tenant farms were operated by share tenants as compared with 59.5 per cent in 1910. The number of share tenants, including croppers in the south, is 1,678,735, which is an increase of about 20 per cent over 1910.

The number of cash tenants, including standing renters who paid for the use of the land a stated quantity of some crop, is 585,014 as against 712,294 ten years ago, a decrease of 18 per cent. In 1920, 23.8 per cent of tenant farms were run on a cash tenancy as compared with 34.5 per cent in 1910.

GUARD ARMORY MAY BE SHELTER FOR NEEDY VETS

Col. Swanson of Second Investigates Plan.

Col. W. E. Swanson, commanding officer of the 2d infantry, Illinois national guard, yesterday joined the ranks of patriotic Chicagoans who are trying to make the life of disabled or luckless war heroes more comfortable.

When Col. Swanson learned that hundreds of war veterans are out of work, penniless, and without places to sleep he announced he would find out whether it is possible to give the men beds in the Second infantry armory at 2653 West Madison street.

"If I learn I can turn the armory into a temporary hotel for these men I will do so," he said. "Do not be too jubilant, because I am not sure the thing is possible; but I will try."

Roused by Col. Davis' Plea.

Col. Swanson was stirred by Col. Abel Davis article in last Sunday's TRIBUNE, which asserted wounded soldiers have been receiving disgraceful treatment from the government.

"I am informed the government has $18,000,000 to spend on hospitals for these men," Col. Swanson said. "The only thing to do is to start work immediately. We have the money—let's build."

"If we don't take care of our wounded men we'll never have another army," said Col. James Hamilton Lewis, former senator.

Citizens must not be deaf to the first whispers of a conflict being prepared in Asia—particularly in Japan—to force us to admit those people to our country on an equal basis. There is also the prospect of danger from European governments that will arise from our efforts to collect loans and have our trade extended throughout the world.

"America cannot expect to get soldiers in the coming conflicts if she does not now give proper reward to the soldiers who offered their lives in France. It's not charity. It is paying ourselves for future protection."

"Disgraceful," Says Clinnin.

Col. John V. Clinnin, American Legion leader in Chicago and a veteran of three wars, asserted present conditions were "disgraceful" and that "the men we sent to Washington shall immediately make amends."

"I have a fixed opinion," he added. "I know the situation in many hospitals in America. I know the officers and physicians at the 47th street hospital and other institutions in Chicago are doing their best to take care of the men, but they haven't the proper things. The 47th street building was not built for a hospital. The government will do well to finish the Hines Speedway hospital immediately.

"Mr. Hines, whom I have never met, certainly has more foresight than many of our congressmen. He knew we would need a hospital. It has been proved that we do. Why isn't the hospital completed?"

No effort was made to harm them.

Soft Coal Output Creeps Up During June; Still Low

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Production of soft coal recovered slightly during the week ended June 25, but was still far short of the 8,000,000 ton mark. The total output was estimated at 7,669,000 tons, an increase of 1.5 per cent over the week preceding, but still about 350,000 tons below the rate maintained from May 14 to June 11.

Two men wearing army uniforms and driving a taxicab, believed to have been stolen by them, entered the barber shop of Louis Costanza, 10153 Commercial avenue, last evening, robbed the owner of $80 and a watch, and forced a customer whom he was shaving to stay in the barber chair while they took his watch and $60.

SWEETS OUSTING BEEFSTEAKS ON BILLS OF FARE

"Salads and sweets are taking the place of beefsteaks and heavy food on the menus of men since prohibition went into effect. The day of the famous beefsteak dinner has gone," according to Gilbert Cowan, president of the American Caterers' association, who will be one of the speakers at the opening of the American Hotel and Restaurant Equipment exposition in the Coliseum, July 11 to 16. One of the important questions that will come up before the hotel and restaurant men of the country while here, Mr. Cowan says, will be that of "the changing palate."

"Never before in the history of the world," he continued, "have men's palates been so sensitive and particular. Food must be better prepared and more carefully seasoned, and of superior quality. It must be more appetizing than in the days when one or two pre-dinner cocktails stimulated a jaded appetite."

JUDGE SABATH WINS THIS BOUT; STOPS A DIVORCE

Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday effected a reconciliation between Samuel Abrams, secretary and treasurer of Abrams & Sons, and his wife, Mrs. Florence Abrams, 4919 North Kedzie avenue, who had filed a petition for divorce.

Judge Sabath told the couple he did not think either deserved to have their child, Sanford, 3 years old. Both wanted the boy. Judge Sabath took the three into his chambers and gave them a lecture on the seriousness of marriage vows.

When they came out the divorce action was dismissed by stipulation. The boy held the hands of his parents.

"In the thousands of case I have heard since I have been on the bench," Judge Sabath said, "I consider I have accomplished most for the community when I can effect a reconciliation. It is a victory I take pride in."

(Independence Editorial)

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

In June of the year 1776 Richard Henry Lee of Virginia introduced a measure in the Second Continental Congress calling for a Declaration of Independence from the Isle of Great Britain. This was referred to a committee, including such famous men as Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and Benjamin Franklin.

The result of this committee's work was finally passed after debate on July 4th, 1776, to the wild hurrahs of the populace.

Tomorrow we celebrate that wonderful day. May the great advantages and blessings which were then given to us be perpetual. Let us remember the hardships and privations that our Colonial fathers went through in order to establish this wonderful nation.

Let the resolve be taken to be fully worthy of them and all unite to make this, our Country, greater, better and more glorious than ever.

How many cylinders?

YOU can buy four, six, eight, or twelve-cylinder motors, but you can buy only one that is scientifically and mechanically efficient—the Six. Because six is the smallest number of cylinders that produces continuous power, and is the largest number needed for any demand a car puts on its engine.

And that one six-cylinder motor most worth knowing has been brought to high perfection by fourteen years of specialized development and is used exclusively in the Winton Six. May we show you? Call direct factory branch at 2512 South Michigan avenue. Victory 7700.

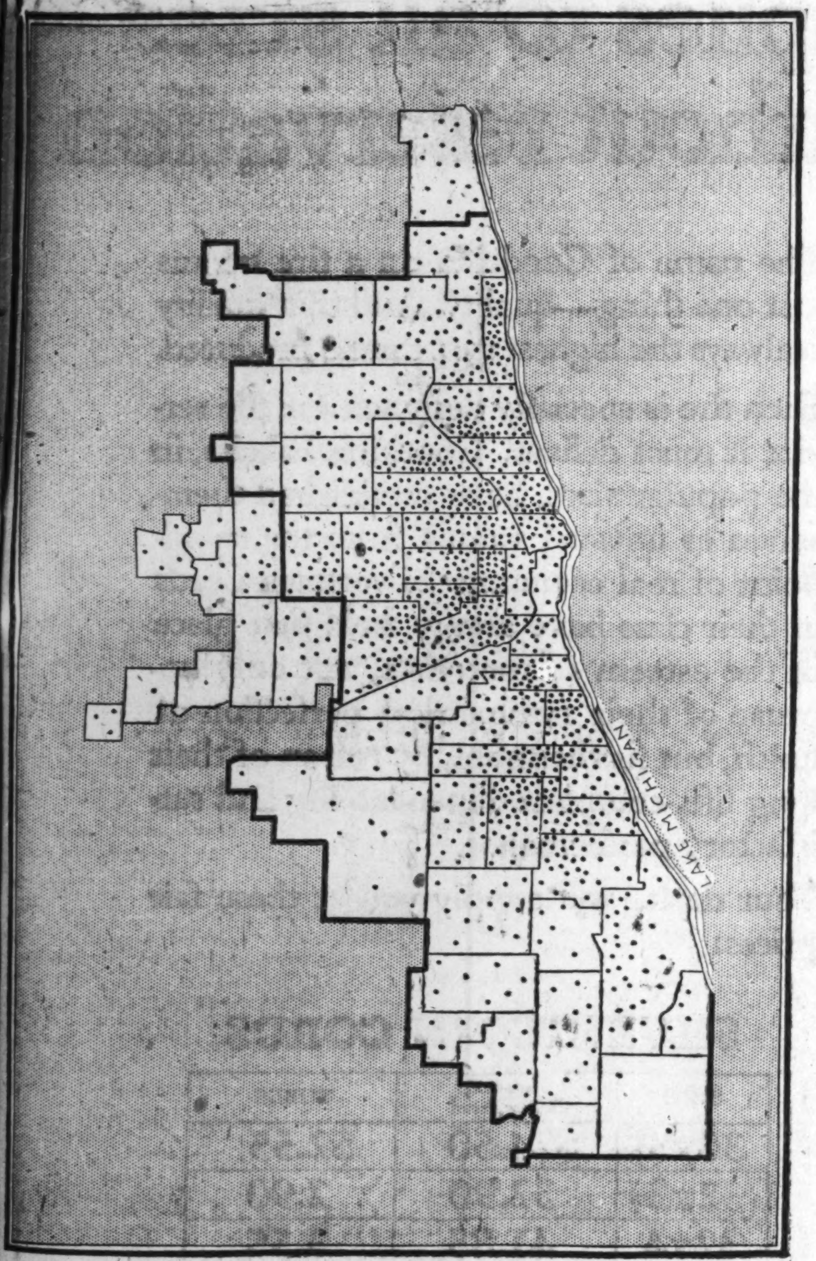
The TRIBUNE IS FIRST IN CHICAGO

The Sunday Tribune has more circulation in Chicago and suburbs than any other Chicago newspaper

POPULATION



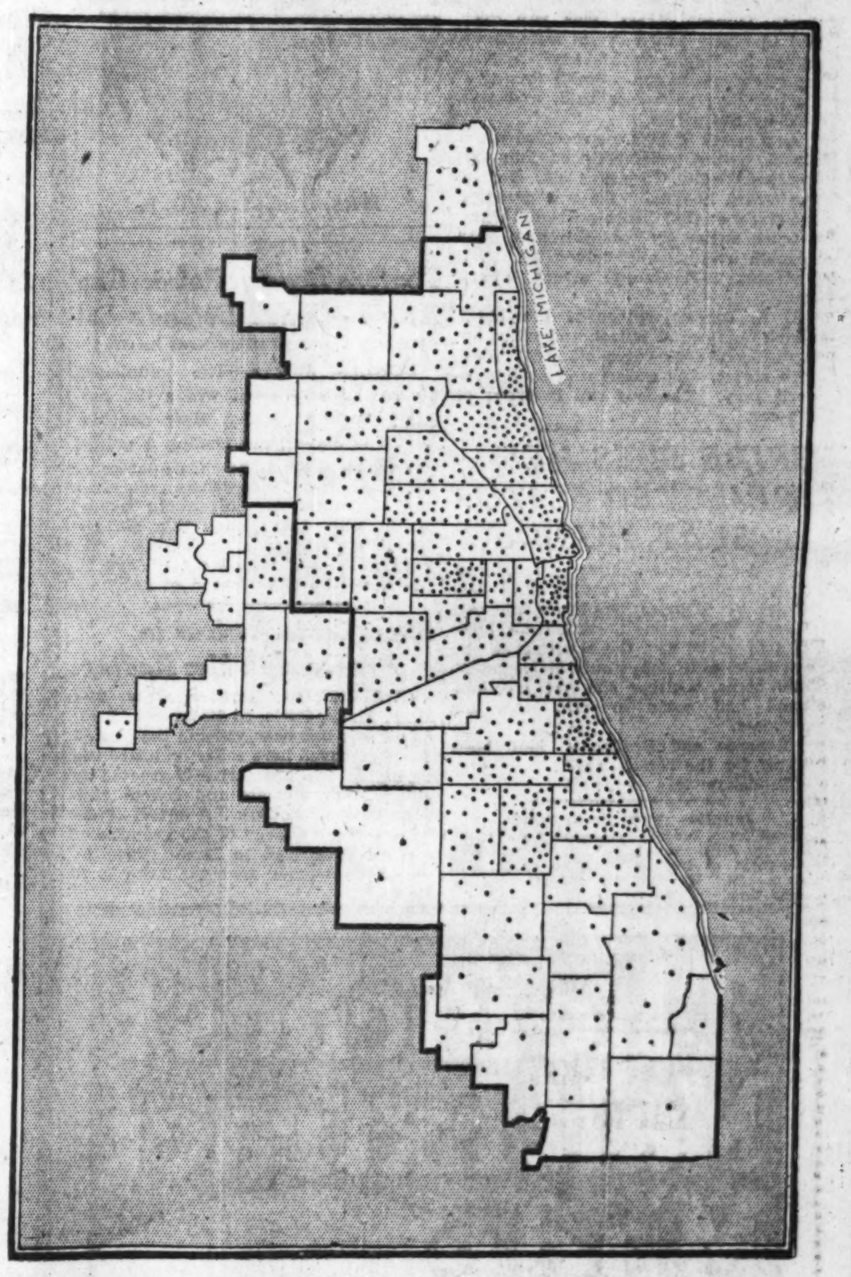
THESE MAPS of Chicago and leading suburbs tell a remarkable story of the domination of a great market by one great medium. The Sunday Tribune's net paid circulation of 470,584 in Chicago and suburbs is 35% greater than that of the next Sunday paper, and 20% more than the leading evening paper.

On the map to the left each dot represents 500 families in the district or suburb in which it appears. On the map to the right each dot represents 500 Sunday Tribunes sold in the district or suburb in which it appears. In every sense of the word The Tribune "covers" Chicago.

The 48 Chicago districts on the maps are those into which this great city has been divided by The Tribune for merchandising purposes. The suburbs shown are Evanston, Oak Park, Forest Park, River Forest, Maywood, Cicero, Berwyn, Riverside, Brookfield and La Grange.

Note in how many districts the number of Sunday Tribunes sold corresponds closely to the number of families.

CIRCULATION



Also---The Tribune has the largest morning daily circulation in America!

Also---The Tribune prints approximately one-third of all the advertising appearing in the six Chicago newspapers!

BOOMERANG HITS WOMAN FOE OF SCHOOL TEACHER

Own Reputation Attacked at Miss Powers' Hearing

Before Chief Justice Charles A. McDonald in Criminal court will permit Miss Esther D. Powers of 4733 Forrestville avenue, considered one of the brightest teachers in Raymond school, to be subjected to an examination in the Psychopathic hospital, Alliettia Anderson, 4543 Clifton avenue, will have to prove that she herself is a reputable citizen.

Miss Anderson, who is employed by a physician's collecting agency, signed the petition asking for the examination of Miss Powers on June 12. The same day a patrol wagon was backed up at Raymond school and the pretty teacher was taken to the Psychopathic hospital. Teachers telephoned to Attorneys Thomas D. Nash and Michael Ahearn, who obtained a writ of habeas corpus. The hearing of the writ before Chief Justice McDonald yesterday was continued until next Saturday.

Teacher's Story.

According to her attorneys, Miss Powers and James Brooks, a real estate dealer, brother of Dr. Overton Brooks, 418 Oakdale avenue, were sweethearts until a year ago. James Brooks sent Miss Anderson to the school to obtain $1,500 for him from Miss Powers, stating he was in great trouble. Miss Powers talked to the principal and other teachers, and they advised her not to loan him the money.

Investigating the story told by Miss Anderson, Miss Powers learned a former sweetheart of Brooks had ended her life for love of him in Paducah, Ky., the attorneys say, and her father also ended his life. Paducah is the former home of the Brooks family.

When Miss Powers accused her sweetheart an attempt was made to "railroad" her to the Psychopathic hospital to hush the matter, her attorneys claim.

Miss Anderson Attacked.

Joseph Schoenberg, 4818 Winthrop avenue, testified yesterday that Miss Anderson's reputation for truth and veracity was not of the best.

Sergt. Frederick Able of Town Hall station told the court of investigating the complaint that Miss Anderson was operating a baby farm. He said the police were now investigating complaints regarding the Clifton avenue apartment.

Dr. Julius Ginker and Dr. James Whitney Hall testified for the school teacher.

BOY OF 6, PLAYING IN STREET, KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

While running across the street in pursuit of a playmate in front of his home, Joseph Alex, 6 years old, 4840 South Honoré street, was run over and instantly killed by an automobile driven by Edgar Smith, 5818 Carpenter street, yesterday. Smith was driving rapidly, witnesses said, and was held by the police.

As a result of injuries received when struck by an automobile on June 27, Charles Gielow, 70 years old, died at the Grant hospital. He was crossing the street at 1837 Lincoln avenue when a truck owned by Fred Hartman, 2018 Lincoln avenue, and driven by Lloyd Theroux, 1031 George street, struck him.

L. J. Barrett, driver of a machine which on June 21 struck and killed Joseph Lococo, 15 years old, 1047 West 18th street, was exonerated by a coroner's jury. The boy ran in front of the car.

BRIDE SEES HER REJECTED SUITOR SLAY HUSBAND

James Rensroe, janitor at 4700 Magnolia avenue, was fatally shot last night by Charles Bradshaw at 1403 North Wells street. Rensroe's bride of two weeks saw the shooting as she sat in an automobile outside her mother's home, whither she and her husband had come to call. All are Negroes.

Rensroe and Bradshaw had been rivals for the bride's hand.

Bradshaw was captured.

JOBLESS MAN A SUICIDE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, July 2.—The municipal authorities of Cassel, where the majority Socialist leader, Herr Scheidemann, is mayor, are leading a poison gas attack against the older quarter of the city. Herr Scheidemann declares the attackers are advancing everywhere with success and that slaughter of the enemy is prodigious. He guarantees that within a few days he will have the city cleared of bedbugs.

WIVES NO. 1 AND NO. 2 PALS; JOINT HUSBAND TARGET

Awaiting Bigamy Trial the Women Live Together.

Two pretty young women, wives of Edward Breuer, are living together at 1009 Davis street, Evanston, awaiting the trial of their husband on a charge of bigamy. The wives are the best of pals. They attend shows together, take walks together, go to parties, and never have an unpleasant word.

"What's the use of being jealous?" asked wife No. 1, who was Miss Sophie Daehr of Syracuse, N. Y., and married Breuer, Oct. 28, 1916.

"It would not do one bit of good to get angry and besides, I could not dislike Frieda. She is a dear."

Breur, a former United States Army sergeant, left his first wife to come west and in Evanston he met, wooed, and won Miss Frieda Shoen, pretty young girl. They were married Dec. 4, 1920.

No. 1's Not Jealous.

"Of course, I am not jealous," continued wife No. 1. "Why should I be? Frieda and I are living together now and are very happy and it would be most foolish to tear out her hair or attack her or threaten to shoot her as so many wronged wives often do. What would I gain? What would she gain? We have a mutual feeling of contempt toward our mutual husband now, and are determined to punish him."

Writes for Railroad Fare.

Recently he wrote wife No. 1 a request for money to pay his railroad fare to Syracuse.

"I suspected something," Miss Daehr said yesterday, "and so instead of sending money I came to Evanston, where I met Frieda and learned of their marriage."

Breuer yesterday addressed a letter to "Mrs. Breuer" begging that he be furnished with cigaretes, tobacco and a pipe while in jail. The women looked at each other and laughed. He will not get his cigarets, tobacco and pipe from them.

The property includes the towns of Jake Hamon, Edhobby and Breckwalter, as well as the railway built by Hamon when he started developments in Texas, according to French. Population of the three towns, connected by 108 miles of railway, is approximately 3,000.

IDAHO PUZZLES OVER KIDNAPING OF 'LADY RADICAL'

Boise, Idaho, July 2.—[Special.]—It was doubtful tonight just what would be accomplished in the case of the "angry Socialists and the gentle mob." Ten citizens of Twin Falls, this state, came back from Montello, Nev., in care of Deputy Sheriff Bert Robinson. As charges against them, he had the story of Kate Richards O'Hare, Socialist organizer, that last night they had entered the home of H. H. Freidheim at Twin Falls and escorted her out of the state.

They had offered her no violence, she said. She appealed to Gov. Davis of Idaho, saying she intended to return to that state and demanding protection. The governor, on his way to Seattle, left word that "those who wish to rise to the ideals of good citizenship should avoid arousing passions that disturb the peace of the community."

Late tonight came word from the national secretary of the Socialist party at Chicago that "1,000,000 Socialist citizens" are waiting to see what the governor will do.

There were no arrests tonight and the local sheriff doubted if he could recognize the men who had been bought back from Nevada.

PLAN TO FORCE 'BIG TIM' TO TRIAL DURING SUMMER

Judge Reported Willing to Give Up Vacation.

The trial of "Big Tim" Murphy and his alleged accomplices, charged with the Dearborn street station mail robbery on April 6, will be pushed through this summer according to rumors in District Attorney Clyne's office. It is said that one of the judges, presumably Judge Landis, will not take his usual summer vacation, but will remain on the job to try the case.

Bonds for "Big Tim" are expected Tuesday, when, his friends say, they will file $175,000 in Liberty bonds to get him out of jail.

Three men are still sought in connection with the robbery. Their names are suppressed, although the indictment against Murphy and six others has been released following the plea of Murphy's attorney, Friday, before Judge Landis that the defense was unprepared to proceed, as it had never been informed of the specific charges.

There are six counts in the indictment. One charges robbery with a gun of the registered mail, jeopardizing the life of Dennis J. Colbert, a railway postal clerk. The second alleges the theft of a registered mail sack from a mail auto truck. The third charges the defendants had money and bonds in their possession on April 6, which they knw was stolen from the mails; and the fourth that the defendants concealed money and bonds knowing they were stolen from the mails.

The fifth count is for the conspiracy to rob the mail on March 30, which attempt failed, but was carried out successfully on April 6. The sixth count charges conspiracy to rob the mails, not specifying it as registered mail.

Truckload of Beer Bound for Fox Lake Seized

Waukegan, Ill., July 2.—A truck load of beer headed for Fox lake from Chicago was seized by agents of State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county and two Chicago men, Joseph Regan and Abe Solonsky, employed by the Washington Light company, were arrested. They claim it is "near beer."

A 2C 'KID' SHOW AIDS VACATION FUND FOR POOR

They Raise $1.75 for Camp Algonquin.

BY REV. G. A. MAC WHORTER.

"Libby Jones and me made up a play and we charged 2 cents to get in. Libby and me were the actors, and we took in $1.75, so here it is for the sick babies."

Thus writes Jean Richardson, 450 Keystone avenue, River Forest. And Billy-Bob Birch, who wishes some other child to have as good a time as he has on his vacation this summer, sent $2.

It is just such contributions as these that are keeping the good work at Camp Algonquin going these days, but it will take a lot of them to maintain the camp all summer, so send in your gifts, no matter how small, today, and tell others about the wonderful outings that many poor mothers and children may have at such little cost.

The contributions on Friday helped to put the Camp Algonquin fund over the first thousand dollar mark. Now let's go after the next five or ten.

DEMOCRATS SET FOR FINISH FIGHT ON MAYOR'S JOBS

Ousting of 91 Starts Move to Fire 'Temporaries.'

Mayor Thompson's battle gage, consisting of the ouster of ninety-one city employés, mostly Democrats, Friday night, was grabbed up eagerly by Democratic council leaders yesterday, and unless the administration recedes from its position it looks like a finish fight between the two departments of the city government.

"If the mayor wants a fight, as the ouster order indicates, he will get it," declared Ald. John S. Clark, chairman of the council regrading committee, which is responsible for the council's order that 246 Lundin-Thompson workers be pried from city pay rolls.

"The Lundin-Thompson henchmen knocked off by the council are political appointees and not essential, while every man the mayor has fired has been earning his salary.

"In six months we will be making up the 1922 budget. At that time I am in favor of ousting every one of the 5,000 Lundin-Thompson temporary appointees if no way can be found to get rid of them before."

Democrats Eye Law Department.

Ald. Clark declared that the city law department, one of the biggest patronage caches controlled by the administration, will also receive the council's attention.

Indications are that city hall powers have decided to circumvent the council's order ousting the 246 Thompsonites, by permitting them to take civil service examinations, held by the mayor's civil service commission, within the next month.

Examinations will be called at once, Harry Wallace, secretary of the commission said, to fill all positions now held by temporaries except those in the labor bureaus. Among the positions to be filled will be those of chief clerk of the controller's office, office secretary of the fire department, chief clerk of the water office, manager of properties in the police department, and all clerical and hospital positions now held by "temporaries."

Don't Want to Lose Henchmen.

"We don't like to do it for when even one of our own men is given the protection of the merit law, he is no further value to us as a political worker," one city hall leader said. "However, the move has been decided on to kill the use of temporary employés as a political issue."

The impending row between the council and the mayor may come on the question of redistricting the city in fifty wards. It is reported that the redistricting committee will submit a new plat for ward lines, approved by Democratic, Deneen, and Brundage leaders, at next Friday's council meeting.

"Objections by the mayor's friends stopped our redictricting plans last winter, but we will go through with it this time. We have the votes," Ald. James B. Bowler declared.

Think They Can Override Veto.

Anti-Thompson aldermen declare they have sufficient votes to pass a redistricting plan over the mayor's veto—if he can veto such a plan, which is questioned—and that any vetos of budget items will meet the same fate. Forty-seven votes are necessary. Friends of the mayor counted aldermanic noses yesterday and asserted that the mayor can muster twenty-two votes, which is five more than needed to prevent action over his veto. The actual voting strength of the council at present is only sixty-three.

Because of the executive's ouster order there were no messengers, and only one stenographer on duty in the aldermanic chambers yesterday. Among those laid off was Henry Sonnenschein, secretary of the license bureau, and close friend of Ald. Anton J. Cermak.

Secretary Wallace of the merit board asserted that Ald. Clark's estimate that there are 5,000 temporaries on city pay rolls "is a gross exaggeration." The number is less than 1,000, including laborers, he said.

HELD PRISONER IN HOTEL HERE, IOWA GIRL SAYS

Her name, she said, is Margaret Brown. She is 20 years old, and a few days ago she ran away from her home in Des Moines, Ia.

"I hadn't a cent when I arrived in Chicago," she said. "I believed I could get work. I asked a man near the depot where I could find a respectable hotel. He took me to the Union, 136 South Canal street, and I have been kept there, a prisoner, ever since."

The story was told to Detective Sergeants Wragg, Woods, and Anders, who raided the hotel yesterday. They had learned about the girl from a man who saw them passing by. He said the girl was being held against her will and had asked him to call the police.

James C. B. Harkins and Thomas Doe, who live at the hotel, were arrested, charged with keeping a disorderly house.

John Rockefeller in Court! Too Rough, His Wife Says

John Rockefeller's wife complained that John was too rough with her in their home at 115 South Laflin street, but she failed to appear before Judge Samuel H. Trude in Desplaines street court yesterday. John was dismissed.

"Are you the man who supplies us with gas and oil and contributions to charity," the judge asked him.

"I'm not the guy," said Rockefeller. "No relation to him."

"Flivver" Bandits Hold Up Driver for Tea Company

Julius Rasmussen, 5024 North Kedvale avenue, driver for the National Tea company, 3513 West Madison street, was robbed of $55 by three armed bandits at North Harding and Wrightwood avenues yesterday. The robbers were riding in a Ford automobile stolen earlier from a cleaning and dyeing company.

A Span That Lived Its Span

The Rush street bridge has lived its little span—and now no longer spans. Its iron superstructure's gone, its woodwork, everything that made it a bridge. There's nothing left but some framework resting on the water, and the machinery that made it go around. Old friends looking down upon it from the upstart Michigan avenue link bridge call it "a Yankee cheese box on a raft," and give it the raucous Ha! Ha!

MAYOR SEEKS TO SET A DATE FOR LIBEL ARGUMENT

Scheme to Harass Fee Fighters Seen.

Mayor Thompson, through his attorneys, asked yesterday for the designation of a day when the arguments on demurrers to his libel suits against THE TRIBUNE and the Daily News will be heard.

"This was just a smoke screen," commented Weymouth Kirkland of the firm of McCormick, Kirkland, Patterson & Fleming, attorneys for THE TRIBUNE. "We have been pressing—probably pressing too hard in the opinion of the city hall—the suits of THE TRIBUNE to recover $2,742,000 paid the city's building and real estate experts. The move of the city hall today won't stop us.

"There is no way to stop those suits on expert's fees. We will keep after them until the money is repaid."

First Suit Filed by Mayor.

The first of the libel suits was filed by the mayor personally because of matter printed in THE TRIBUNE in 1917 during the war relating to the mayor's Americanism.

The other suit was filed on behalf of the city, claiming it had been damaged $10,000,000 because of matter printed in THE TRIBUNE relating to the financial condition of the city. That was filed Sept. 17, 1920.

April 19 last The Tribune company filed suit in the Superior court to compel the repayment of $1,004,586 paid two building experts. The attorneys began pressing those suits at once. They started to take depositions, but Mayor Thompson and the city proper obtained a continuance of that suit until ten days after the legislature adjourned. That period will expire July 10.

Attorneys Try Two Courts.

But yesterday Chester Cleveland, special utility rate lawyer for the city, and David H. Jackson, private lawyer of Mayor Thompson, appeared in Judge Brothers' courtroom to get a date set for argument on the demurrer in the first libel suits of the mayor. Judge Brothers was not there. The lawyers went to Judge Windes to get him to act. He declined, but told the lawyers to return to Judge Brothers next Wednesday. This refers to the suits against THE TRIBUNE and the Daily News.

The city's suit against THE TRIBUNE is pending before Judge Fisher. He fixed July 12 as the day when arguments will start on the demurrer.

ILLINOIS G. O. P. STARTS BATTLE OF 1922 WITH RUSH

Springfield, Ill., July 2.—[Special.]—The legislature wasn't out of town before the Illinois political campaign of 1922 was going full tilt and at a stage of bitterness that is usually reached sixty days before the primaries.

The line of battle is that dividing the Small-Lundin-Thompson camp from the rest of the Republicans of the state.

The 1922 primaries will be held in April and the big scrap has started. By state fair time next month two complete slates probably will be in the final stages.

The 1922 campaign at that will be but preliminary to the big affair in 1924, when Mayor Thompson again will endeavor to defeat Medill McCormick for the United States senatorship and Gov. Small will be up against a contest for renomination.

DEATH PUZZLES CORONER'S JURY.

Whether the death of Jules van de Zande, 3145 West 42d place, was accidental or otherwise, could not be determined by a coroner's jury yesterday. He was run over by a Chicago and Alton freight train Friday.

SHERMAN OFFERS TO AID BRUNDAGE WITHOUT CHARGE

Leading attorneys of Illinois, aroused at Gov. Small's action in vetoing the appropriation for the department of Attorney General Edward J. Brundage, leaving him with no means of law enforcement, are rushing to the aid of Mr. Brundage. The latest recruit is former Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, who telegraphed the attorney general yesterday offering his service free of charge.

"The governor of Illinois, by approving a recent act of the legislature, has made a dry law for this state," Mr. Sherman's telegram read. "By vetoing the appropriation to enforce it he has nullified the law. As I am now a private citizen, I tender my services without charge to the state to enforce this law."

Brundage Accepts Offer.

"Thank you very much for your generous office to aid in law enforcement," Attorney General Brundage telegraphed to Senator Sherman. "I shall be glad to avail myself of your services."

"It is certainly gratifying to have these attorneys offer their services to the state," Mr. Brundage said after receiving Mr. Sherman's telegram. "Yesterday nearly a dozen lawyers offered their services to this office at $1 a year, and the way it looks we will have to call on them for aid if the state wants to win any of the pending litigation or enforce any of the laws which it is the attorney general's duty to enforce.

Office Needs More Money.

"The only excuse that the Lundin outfit has for cutting my appropriation is that the attorney general's office in this state is getting more than in other states. But in this state the office does more. We are compelled to represent all the different boards and commissions, while elsewhere these all have their own staff of attorneys. But we are going to do the best we can under the circumstances."

Mr. Brundage said that he is ready to go ahead with the prosecution of the vote fraud violations at the recent judicial election whenever the Chicago Bar association presents the matter to him. Under the direction of Col. John V. Clinnin, the association gathered evidence of fraud against more than 400 henchmen of the Thompson-Lundin organization, and Attorney Frederick A. Brown has been selected to prosecute them.

When the bar association is ready Mr. Brown will probably be made a special assistant attorney general and a special grand jury will be summoned to aid him in the investigation.

SNUG BERTH FOR THESE WAR VETERANS

Three submarine chasers, tired of their berths in the north branch of the Chicago river, have obtained permission to enter the Lincoln park lagoon. It is cleaner water and a sweeter atmosphere. The trio, the SC-437, SC-433, and SC-431, are in the service of the United States coast guard. At present they are being guarded by F. S. Sollman and C. W. Peterson.

BEDFORD FAMILY WINS RELEASE OF OIL MAN'S SON

Charles Bedford was released yesterday from the county jail at Michigan City where he was held preparatory to being sent to the Indiana State reformatory at Jeffersonville, when Judge Crumpacker in Superior court vacated a three to five year sentence against him by reopening his case and resetting it for hearing on Oct. 10 next. Bedford was released under $2,000 bonds.

Bedford is the son of Charles E. Bedford, vice president of the Vacuum Oil company of New York, and grandson of E. T. Bedford, president of the Corn Products Refining company, and an original director of the Standard Oil company. He was convicted in Michigan City, Ind., of stealing an automobile, and sentenced to the penitentiary.

Irresponsible, Is Claim.

Yesterday members of his family employed Michigan City attorneys, who went before Judge Crumpacker with an affidavit stating young Bedford was mentally unbalanced and not responsible for his acts.

It was explained to the court that Bedford was so ill several years ago he has never been mentally sound and responsible since and that he stole the automobile after escaping from a nurse and an attendant in Chicago.

Court Didn't Know Facts.

The court stated it had no knowledge of the young man's incompetency at the time the sentence was imposed, and the sentence was immediately vacated and a rehearing set for Oct. 10.

FALL FATAL TO WOMEN.

LEADERS AGREED ON EXCLUSION OF JAPANESE

Views of America in Symposium.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Varying views of the Japanese question in the United States and of measures for dealing therewith are voiced by 275 prominent Americans in a symposium published by Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. The majority of the expressions of opinion favor exclusion of the Japanese as an immiscible race.

"This symposium," says Mr. Vanderbilt in a preface, "was gathered in the hope of giving the American people the unbiased outlook of Japanese-American relations as they are today. In presenting a cross section of the public opinion of important leaders in public affairs we have tried to develop a guide toward better relations and better understandings of the two races."

Against Racial Intermarriage.

William J. Bartholf, principal of Crane Technical High school and junior college, Chicago—I do not believe in the intermarriage of races, and I would allow no one to be taken in as an American citizen unless he could be absorbed safely as a white citizen. For this reason I would be "dead" opposed to admitting the oriental nations.

R. M. Barton, chairman United States railroad labor board, Chicago—I think all immigration, or substantially all, should be stopped for years, and at least until we have digested, assimilated, and thoroughly Americanized the "rudis indigestaque moles" (tough hunks) we have already swallowed. It is not the problem of the Pacific coast. It is the problem of the whole United States.

Saved for White Civilization.

John J. Blaine, governor of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.—I feel that the western civilization should be saved for the white civilization.

John G. Cooper, United States congressman, Ohio—The time has come when our country must stop immigration of all elements which cannot become Americanized or appreciate and support the ideals and institutions of our form of government.

Senator Nelson of Minnesota—Japan has her hands full with Formosa, Korea, and a portion of Manchuria. Her field of operations is necessarily in the orient, and I never thought that she had any hostile plans against the United States.

Exclusion Only Solution.

Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin—I have been making such study of the oriental question as time permitted, and I have long been convinced that absolute exclusion of all orientals is the only solution of our problem.

Senator W. S. Kenyon of Iowa—I do not want to be an alarmist, but I really feel considerable apprehension.

Representative Royal C. Johnson of South Dakota—I agree with you absolutely that we must prohibit all immigration from Japan, and the sooner Americans become alive to this vital problem the sooner pressure can be put upon congress and the executive to take the action that we think should be taken.

Orient for Orientals.

David Felmley, president of the Illinois State Normal university, Normal, Ill.—I believe the integrity of our civilization demands that Japanese and other orientals that cannot be assimilated into the white race by intermarriage ought not be permitted to come into our country except as students, visitors, and diplomatic and mercantile representatives.

H. M. Gage, president of Coe college, Cedar Rapids, Ia.—I have felt keenly the indignities which Japan has heaped upon citizens of the United States, especially in Corea. Our citizens are not accorded the respect which Japan pays to citizens of other countries.

Question of Assimilability.

Harry P. Judson, president of the University of Chicago, Chicago—It is in my opinion vital to the future of our nation that we should control rigidly the question as to who shall or shall not be members of our body politic. It is not a question of superiority, equality, or inferiority, but rather a question of similarity and assimability. We cannot therefore wisely admit to our body politic members of unassimiable races. I believe that the various Asiatic races fall within that category.

Samuel R. McKelvie, governor of Nebraska, Lincoln—Our state legislature now in session passed a bill in one house which prevents the ownership of land by aliens from the orient.

G. L. Mackintosh, president of Wabash college, Crawfordsville, Ind.—We already have one great race question and it is a pity we have to face another. In this case we should make it as easy as possible for the dammed up peoples of Japan and China to spill over into Siberia and Mongolia.

Samuel Plantz, president of Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis.—While I realize that there is an opportunity for considerable trouble ahead, I also believe that if our country will treat the Japanese rationally and justly there is no immediate danger of any conflict. I admire Japan for standing against laws that assume race inferiority. I regard the California situation as extreme and unfortunate and I feel that agitation of the militarists and the navy league against Japan is both unfortunate and unpatriotic.

Elliott W. Sproule, United States congressman, Illinois — I am not only now in favor of the exclusion of orientals but I have been for a long time.

Policy of Bluff.

Horace M. Towner, United States congressman, Iowa, chairman of committee on insular affairs—I think the Japanese question is one of extreme delicacy and difficulty. The whole policy of Japan is based upon audacity and bluff. Her present attitude with regard to the island of Yap is insufferable and should be resented strongly.

Dr. Charles F. Thwing, president of Western Reserve university, Cleveland, O.—I do not believe that Japan desires a war with this country. I think that Japan is as averse to a conflict with the United States as the United States is averse to a conflict with Japan. This opinion is based upon general expressions, and also is based on conversations I have had with several Japanese statesmen on the occasion of a visit in Tokio several years ago.

John White, acting president of Rose Polytechnic institute, Terre Haute, Ind.—As to the unassimiliability of the yellow races in this country I am convinced. I am also rather fully of the opinion that Japan is playing a game deeply in her own interests, which is perhaps natural, but it is a question whether she cannot be brought to a realization without plunging the nation into war.

John Sharp Williams, United States senator, Mississippi—Nothing is of more vital importance to a democracy than that the population of a country governed by it should be homogeneous. To that end the various elements should be mutually assimilable in lawful wedlock.

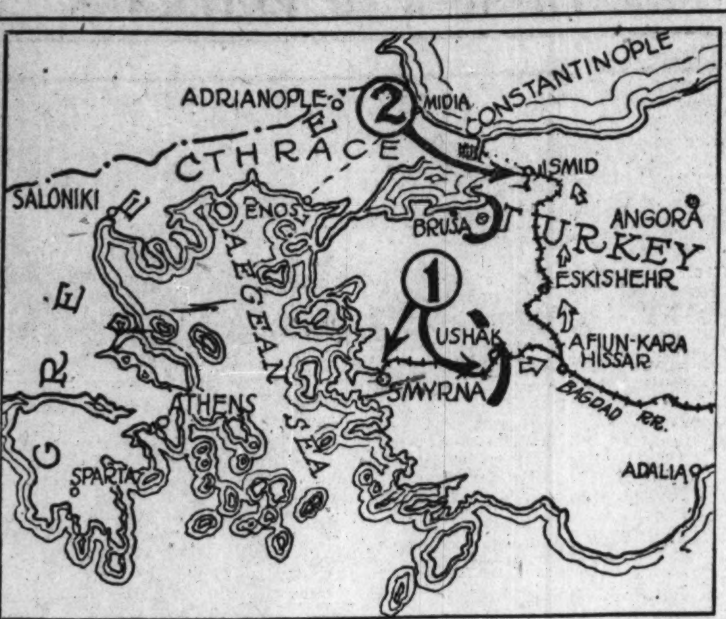
View of President Hadley.

A. T. Hadley, ex-president of Yale university, New Haven, Conn.—If a particular group of orientals will make good citizens and certain groups of occidentals will not make good citizens, why do we admit the one and exclude the other?

A. Lawrence, Lowell, president of Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass.—The question of the relation of this country to Japan and of the orientals to the western hemisphere is certainly one of the most important that now faces us.

George P. McLean, United States senator, Connecticut, chairman of committee on banking and currency—Will say in reply that if I lived in California I should probably feel as the Californians do, and certainly there is no good reason why congress should hesitate to give full protection in the premises.

U. S. MARINES LAND AT ISMID



1—The Greeks have opened their long heralded drive against the Turkish Nationalists in Asia Minor. They art hitting at Afiun-Kara-Hissar, hoping to trap the Turks beyond Eskishehr and out on the Ismid peninsula.

2—The French foreign office has been informed that a detachment of American marines has been landed at Ismid to protect Americans in the area recently evacuated by the Greeks, which has been the scene of atrocities.

DEFENDS HIGH TARIFF RATE ON MEXICAN OIL

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Defending the duty on crude petroleum and fuel oil contained in the Fordney tariff bill, Omer K. Benedict of Tulsa, Okla., reresenting the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association, declared today that the oil producing industry in this country is facing destruction as a result of heavy importations of Mexican oil.

"The policy of encouraging the investment of American capital in the development of petroleum in foreign countries is perhaps wise, and, such investments having been made, no American will question this government's duty to protect them," Mr. Benedict said. "But when, as at the present time, the flood of imported Mexican petroleum, produced at a mere fraction of the cost of domestic production, is destroying the industry in the United States, the first duty of congress is to protect the home industry.

"The market value of the crude oil produced in the United States has shrunk since the latter part of January over $2,600,000 a day, an annual loss to producers of approximately $1,000,000,000."

U. S. SPENDS LESS, REDUCES DEBTS, SHOWS SURPLUS

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Ordinary disbursements of the government for the fiscal year of 1921 ended June 30 totaled $5,115,927,689.30, while receipts amounted to $5,624,932,960.91, an excess of $509,055,271.61 in ordinary receipts over ordinary disbursements.

The total ordinary disbursements for the fiscal year 1920 were $6,403,343,841.21 as against receipts amounting to $6,694,565,388.88, an excess of $291,221,547.67 in receipts over disbursements.

The gross public debt on June 30 totaled $23,977,450,552.54, which was an increase of $24,708,960.11 over the total on May 31. It was a decrease of $321,870,915 from the total a year ago.

INDICT 71 MEN FOR RIOTING IN INDIANA MINE WAR

Princeton, Ind., July 2.—Indictments against seventy-one men were returned today by the Gibson county grand jury, which has been investigating disorders recently which resulted in many foreigners being driven from mining communities near here.

Sixty of the indictments charge rioting at the village of Francis, where a group of vigilantes ordered a mine superintendent and 100 foreign born miners to leave their homes. Eleven indictments charge riotous conspiracy.

After returning the indictments the grand jury adjourned until next Tuesday. The investigation will be resumed then, officials said, with the possibility of additional indictments.

Air Test Bombs Damage Engine of Distant Warship

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Bombs used in sinking the German submarine U-111 off the Virginia capes ten days ago jarred loose one of the engines of the U. S. S. Shawmut, mother ship of the air forces attached to the Atlantic fleet. The vessel was fully 1,500 yards from the bombs when they exploded.

U.S. MARINES LAND IN ASIA MINOR TO SAVE YANKS

Greeks Leave Ismid; Kill Turks.

PARIS, July 2. — United States marines were landed at Ismid, a town about fifty miles southeast of Constantinople in Asia Minor, for the purpose of protecting the Americans there who might be endangered upon the retirement of the Greek troops, which has already begun.

A small French detachment is at Ismid and it is reported that the bodies of a number of Turks, who were killed before the Greek troops started to leave, have been found. The French, however, are said to have saved the approximately 4,000 Turks living in the town.

FEAR EFFECT OF HELP

BY LARRY RUE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 30.—Americans familiar with conditions in the near east feel anxiety over the request of the Near East relief in the name of 25,000,000 subscribers that the state department of the United States interfere in Turkish affairs for protection of the minorities in Anatolia.

High officials and political experts say allied interference, which the United States is urged to recommend, largely is responsible for the atrocities on the part of Armenians against the Turks. The reaction against the Armenians and any request for further interference would aggravate racial hatreds existing between these two peoples.

On Two Fronts.

The Turks are fighting now on two fronts—Smyrna and Cilicia—against allied interference, and the Armenians, by encouraging the allied forces fighting against the Turks are inviting disaster on their own heads.

The Marash massacre in February, 1920, wherein 8,000 Armenians and 2,000 Turks lost their lives, was followed by a long series of abuses of the Turk population in that area by the Armenian gendarmes armed by the French. Gen. Gouraud forced this gendarmerie finally to disarm because of atrocities perpetrated in a Turkish village.

Provoke Turks to New Murders.

The Armenians in Aintab also took up arms with the French against the Turks which did anything but increase Turk love for the Armenians in the territories which were completely in the hands of the Turks.

The Near East relief by grossly exaggerating the Turk atrocities against the Armenians and not mentioning Armenian abuses against the Turks not only is giving Americans a wrong idea of the respective merits of Europe and the Armenians but is greatly embarrassing American representatives in protecting American interests here by creating an anti-American feeling among the Turks.

Armenia Like Others.

Armenia at the present time is occupied by bolsheviki and Turks and is no worse off than other countries around here. The Near East relief in its campaign for funds was showing ghastly pictures of starving Armenians, but the Russians, Turks, and Greeks here are starving, too, probably the Russians—because of their education and refinement, are suffering immeasurably more than the others.

PERSHING ORDERS STRICT ECONOMY RUNNING ARMY

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Gen. Pershing, as chief of the general staff, told his principal subordinates today it was necessary to practice the greatest economy.

Maj. Gen. Harboard, assistant chief of staff, said 75,000 enlisted men may apply for discharge under the order of the secretary of war permitting them to do so in the month of July, in the process of reducing the army strength to 150,000 enlisted men. There now are more than 220,000.

Mexico Silent on Paying Foreign Debt Interest

Mexico City, July 2.—Payment of interest on Mexico's foreign debt was due yesterday, but there was silence in official circles regarding the government's intention to meet this obligation. The only funds available for interest payments would be sums on deposit in the national treasury, inasmuch as the taxes on petroleum exports will not be available until August.

FILIPINO SCHOOL BOOKS SOURCE OF PROPAGANDA

Wood Mission Tiring of Hackneyed Argument.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ALBAY, P. I., June 28.—Over the sweet countryside of Albay the peak of Mayon lifts its perfect cone 8,000 feet to the sky.

Below, green rice fields sweep to the bay.

Cool breezes in the evening make the place as comfortable as Michigan avenue on a summer's night when the wind is off the lake—and it is infinitely beautiful.

The ancient mountain symbolizes in its lifted spires, as a Filipino woman orator told the Wood-Forbes commission today, the dreams and aspirations of the people of the islands for the bright dawn of independence.

Everywhere the mission goes this sort of metaphor is standard. The people far removed from Manila have not heard yet that the mission has given its interpretation of a stable government in such terms that it removes from them possibility of independence at present.

Old Argument in New Garb.

They are still bringing the same old arguments with a few variations. There is no one to tell them what is going on in the world, and even with regard to the doings in their own world their leaders do not tell them the truth.

The question as to where this agitation for independence among these humble people was born was answered today by a girl's school book at which the TRIBUNE correspondent glanced while a meeting was in progress in this village by the sea.

The book belonged to a girl of ten, a member of the fourth grade, and it contained among other things a sketch of Rizal, the Filipino patriot, and excerpts from his addresses. Attention was called to the progress toward a republican form of government made under the leadership of the United States.

Independence Seed Sown.

On another page a paragraph started:

"A real patriot is a boy who is willing to give his life for the welfare of his country."

That tells the story.

In the schools here children are being taught to long for independence and, if necessary, to die for it.

But, although they retain this desire and voice their demand for freedom as they grow older, they have little conception of what independence really means and when pressed for definitions generally say that what they want is a protected independence—just about what they have now.

They seem perfectly willing for the United States to decide for them when the Filipinos are ready for self-rule.

It is from this class of half educated young men and women that most of the speakers before the mission are chosen in each community visited and they are wearing down the patience of Gen. Wood and Commissioner Forbes.

U. S. EMPLOYES DENY BLOCKING ECONOMY MOVES

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—Reports that the National Federation of Federal Employés is opposing the reorganization policy of the administration were described today as anti-reorganization propaganda by officials of the employés' union.

Interpretations placed by those reports on President Harding's recent warning that government employés opposing the administration's reorganization plans would be dealt with summarily were declared to be without foundation.

These reports have stated that President Harding's warning to bureau chiefs was really directed against the activities of employés' unions toward retention of surplus employés.

WAR LESSONS LOST TO NAVY, SENATORS SAY

Object to House Refusal of Airplane Ships.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 2.—Special.]—When the conference agreement on the naval appropriation bill comes up in the senate Tuesday for final action advocates of the "three plane" navy will make a last ditch fight for submarines and airplane carriers the house cut out.

Senators contend the bill at present ignores some of the most important aircraft and submarine lessons of the war. While the bill appropriates $90,000,000 for continuing the 1916 building program, composed largely of capital ships, the provision for aircraft and submarines is considered pitifully small.

Hear Britain Is Active.

The two airplane carriers provided for in the senate bill at a limit of cost of $26,000,000 each have been stricken out by the house, although information from abroad is that the British navy is building six of these carriers, each capable of tending eighty airplanes.

Some of the foremost American naval experts are strongly of the opinion that at a comparatively early date the airplane carrier will displace the dreadnaught as the capital ship of the modern navy.

Recent testimony of high naval authorities before congressional committees has indicated that the American navy is deficient in up to date submarines.

Submarine Plan Rejected.

The house, however, refused to accept a senate amendment authorizing the construction of six fleet submarines of 2,100 tons each. Practically all of the submarines now fit for service are capable only of coast and harbor defense.

Senator King of Utah, Democrat, will make a final appeal to the senate to insist on its amendment and send the bill back to conference again.

DAWES EXPECTS CASH SAVING ON SPONGE SQUADS

U. S. Dry Bureau Must Report to Him.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—The federal budget law is no respecter of government bureaus. Charles Gates Dawes, director of the budget, requires from the prohibition enforcement bureau, as from all others, an estimate of essential expenditures and another estimate of savings possible under present appropriations.

Mr. Dawes believes some of the $7,500,000 the prohibition commissioner expects to spend on enforcement can be saved. Commissioner Haynes is to report on that possibility.

Wayne Wheeler Aroused.

Wayne Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, picked flaws today in Senator Broussard's recent speech against the pending anti-beer amendment.

"The claim," said Wheeler, "that we are trying unduly to interfere with legitimate use of alcohol for medical or other purposes is false. There is less regulation proposed concerning medicinal or nonbeverage liquors in the Volstead act than in the prohibition acts of the states. We aim to secure the minimum of regulation for nonbeverage liquor that is consistent with an honest enforcement of the law. In many of the states even the possession of whisky for medicinal purposes is prohibited.

Up to the Doctors.

"The federal act recognizes it and other liquors under proper regulations to be prescribed by a doctor. If there are no regulations relating to nonbeverage liquors there will be practically no enforcement of the law against beverage liquors.

"Senator Broussard's speech, like the proposed anti-prohibition parade to be held in New York, can accomplish no good purpose. Every bootlegger, rum runner, and law breaker will get encouragement from this booze parade. Every law abiding citizen will be ashamed of it. It is an attack on law and order."

TEN YEARS FOR ARMY FRAUD.

Rockford, Ill., July 2.—Sergt. James Dearing, accused of conspiracy to defraud the government in falsifying pay rolls of the 78th field artillery, was found guilty by court martial at Camp Grant and sentenced to ten years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kas.

STILLMAN, "FLO" QUARREL? GEMS' STORY DIFFERENT

Fresh Gifts (?) Run Into More Thousands.

New York, July 2.—[Special.]—The report that Florence H. Leeds and James A. Stillman had definitely parted, following a quarrel, was discounted today. It was ascertained counsel for Mrs. "Fifi" Stillman expected to prove he purchased gems for Mrs. Leeds within the last two weeks.

According to the defense contention a sales slip from a 5th avenue jeweler records a purchase by the banker on June 25 last. The sales ticket, it was said, disclosed that Mr. Stillman invested $4,000 in a diamond ring on that date, and the allegation will be that the ring was presented to Mrs. Leeds a week ago today.

Another Little Gift.

On June 13 last a purchase in the same shop involved an expenditure of $7,400 for an emerald ring. This gem, the defense expects to prove, was for Mrs. Leeds, as well as a diamond bar pin valued at $2,000, bought at another shop the same day.

In connection with these additional jewelry transactions, it was said the banker probably would be required to reappear in Poughkeepsie for further questioning. According to one report Mr. Stillman may appear before Referee Gleason under a subpœna.

Another Alleged Gift.

A pearl and platinum rosary bought on June 22, 1918, at Tiffany's also is alleged by the defense to have been designed for the former chorus girl. When Mr. Stillman during his examination in Poughkeepsie on last Thursday was asked about this rosary, he declined to answer on the ground that to do so might incriminate him.

"Do you know what a rosary is?" he was asked.

"I think I can say yes to that," he replied.

"Did you give that rosary to Florence H. Leeds?"

Mr. Stillman declined to answer.

Paige Six-66 Performance

Makes You Ask "Why Pay More?"

If you can get for $2,875 a car which holds all stock chassis world's records from 5 to 100 miles—

If you can get for $2,875 a car which holds all hill-climbing records in 100 cities, including slow climbing in high gear—

If this car at $2,875 has style which sets the pace, comfort beyond expectations, low up-keep and proved endurance—

If all this is true—it is time to ask whether any motor car built can be worth more than $2,875 to you. A good many car owners are asking the same question. 25% of the sales of this car are to owners of higher priced cars.

This new Paige Six-66 is a much finer, more powerful car than Paige ever produced before. It puts Paige in a new class, which perhaps you have not realized. It makes this car one to consider in comparison with $4,000 and $5,000 cars.

The astonishing value which you get in this car cannot be spoken of in terms of price reductions. It was introduced only last fall, never was built of peak price material, and was priced accordingly.

Today this car is being built of currently purchased material and with labor on the new basis. Two price adjustments have kept pace with reduced costs. It is, we believe, the only car on the market today so fortunately situated.

"But whence comes this new character of performance, this unusual power, this much admired road balance?"—you may ask. It comes from new design—design so recent and so exclusively protected that other makers are not likely to equal it for a year or two to come.

Most cars offered today were designed from 2 to 5 years ago. To change design under present conditions would cost important makers millions. They must liquidate first. So Paige leadership seems assured.

You can purchase this Paige Six-66 with the certainty that it will not depreciate through changes in style or design within the next two years.

You can purchase it with assurance that you will have the finest performing car America can produce today—a real automobile of 131-inch wheel base, weighing 3,600 pounds, yet giving 14 miles to the gallon of gasoline in the hands of the average owner.

CHICAGO TO HAVE ITS BIGGEST AND SANEST FOURTH

Many Celebrations in City and Suburbs.

While thousands departed from the city yesterday via lake boats, special trains, and motor to spend the Fourth of July at nearby lakes and watering resorts, preparations were being completed for an unparalleled "sane Fourth" celebration in Chicago and its suburbs.

Chicago has planned no civic celebration, but many patriotic and fraternal organizations will celebrate the day in their own way. Everything points to a patriotic festival greater than any held in former years.

Independence day will be observed in the churches by the recitation of the American creed and the pledge to the flag and the Stars and Stripes will be prominently displayed in all churches and Sunday schools.

Howard Agnew Johnston, president of the Chicago Church federation, has written a letter requesting this action by the membership of the organization.

Three Big Fireworks Shows.

Three extensive displays of fireworks will take place in the city. Two of these were given last night and will be given again tonight and tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. One is being held in Grant park on the lake front and the other at Riverview park, entitled "Chicago's Pioneer Days."

The Grant park pyrotechnic display depicts the battle of St. Mihiel in fireworks. This is being conducted by Sol Sai Mar post of the American Legion No. 228, "for forgotten fighters." Entrances to the huge stands are at Harrison and Van Buren streets.

Among the things depicted in the great display at Riverview park will be the Fort Dearborn massacre and the Chicago fire of 1871.

Cubs' baseball park is the scene of the third big fireworks display. Here a "shower of meteors" and the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in fireworks are featured. This display will be given tonight and tomorrow night.

Suburbs Hold Usual Fêtes.

Big celebrations will be held as usual in all suburbs, where the genuine old time "Yankee spirit" will be much in evidence. The Declaration of Independence will be read, with judges and lawmakers as the orators.

Irish organizations will hold three celebrations in Chicago tomorrow. Harry J. Boland, secretary to Eamonn de Valera, president of "the Irish republic," will speak at each meeting.

CUTTING ARMY TO 150,000 WILL BE COSTLY TASK

Washington, D. C., July 2.—[Special.]—It will be expensive for the government to discharge enlisted men of the army to meet the congressional order that the army be cut to a maximum of 150,000 men. Enlisted men must be paid their three year enlistment allowance, and that is one of the obligations which President Harding referred to in his message to congress stating that it may be necessary for him to ask for emergency legislation so that the government may meet its obligtaions to the soldiers.

Secretary of War Weeks in an order to corps commanders today said:

"Supplementing previous instructions re discharge of enlisted men, you are informed that men discharged under the provisions of above telegrams are entitled to three year enlistment allowance, and notation to that effect will be made on final statement. No man will be discharged who is indebted to the United States unless the statement of his accounts shows that he has sufficient credit with the United States to cover his indebtedness."

5 TAKEN IN GUN FIGHT HELD AS BANDIT SUSPECTS

Five men in a touring car, arrested after a revolver battle with the police, are being held at the detective bureau for identification by various victims of robbers.

The men are James Schupe, 1526 West 13th street; Timothy Twohig, 2104 Park avenue; Michael Quirk, 135 South Hamlin avenue; Walter Tracy, 1224 South May street, and James McManus, 4141 Jackson boulevard. All have police records, it is said. Schupe has been arrested many times in the last year. Last February he was held as a suspect in the mail robbery at the Union depot.

They were captured by Sergeant Charles Gratton and his squad, including Detective Sergeants Knowles, O'Neil and Cusack.

One of four burglars who engaged in a revolver fight with Policemen Clifford and Trecker of Maxwell street, is believed to have been hit. But all escaped. They had been surprised attempting to rob a safe in the office of Lauber & Lauber, manufacturing chemists, 1526 West 21st street.

HAMMOND BOY, 9, DROWNS AS PAL TRIES TO SAVE HIM

While enjoying his first swim of the year Frank Myron, 9 years old, 556 State street, Hammond, Ind., was drowned in the Little Calumet river yesterday at the foot of Burnham road, West Hammond. He was swimming with D. Leber, 34 State street, Hammond, and Fred Hornbeck, 73 Kipling street, Hammond, both 9 years old. When Frank went out too far and found himself too tired to return he shouted for help. The Leber boy went to his rescue, but was unable to aid because the drowning boy was larger. He was so exhausted he was barely able to reach shore. Police recovered the body.

The body of a woman about 25 years old was taken from the lake early last evening by the Hegewisch police. South Park Policeman James Hennessy saw the body near the shore. It is believed to have been in the water for about two hours.

His 'Mistake' in Wedding Costs Divorce and $10,000

The "mistake" in selecting a wife cost Bennett W. Cook, an official of the Coyne Trade and Engineering school, $10,000 yesterday when Judge Charles M. Foell ordered him to pay his wife, Laura L. Cook, 549 Surf street, that sum in lieu of alimony. Mrs. Cook testified her husband, shortly after their marriage in 1918, told her he had made a mistake in selecting her for his wife.

CHICAGO HEROES REFIGHT BATTLE OF ST. MIHIEL

Spectacle in Grant Park to Aid Wounded Men.

St. Mihiel was captured once more last night.

It happened in Grant park, and the victory was duly applauded by several thousand persons who streamed across the Van Buren street viaduct to witness the battle and thus helped to aid the forgotten fighters wounded during the great war.

All of the proceeds of the big spectacle, which is being staged by Sol-Sai-Mar post of the American Legion, will go into the service department of that organization and the post fund for crippled soldiers.

St. Mihiel Guns Roar Again.

French 75s, veterans of the bloody fighting at St. Mihiel, roared last night, manned by soldiers who had fought there with the 122d field artillery. Lieut. B. C. Ames, now a member of the 1st Illinois field artillery, was in command.

The spectacle opened with a view of the village under occupation. The boches were there, drinking wine and insulting the peasant girls. Suddenly martial music was heard. The American artillerymen advanced upon St. Mihiel. The 75s flashed. TNT exploded. The Germans were vanquished.

Then the Victory Celebration.

Celebration followed victory. A French ballet of forty dancers performed for the soldiery in token of the villagers' gratitude. Miss Mary Thomas sang. Danny Healy, musical comedy star and composer of "Let's Stick Together," the official American Legion song, gave a selection.

Fireworks, with fancy pyrotechnic likenesses of President Harding, Gen. Pershing, and others, were ignited. The 2d Illinois field artillery band played.

The spectacle will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night.

STANLEY FIELD URGES STUDY OF AMERICAN ART

There is in the United States a slight movement toward the adpotion of native American design in ornaments, but, says Stanley Field, president of the Field Museum of Natural History, it has scarcely touched the surface.

"The producers of art pottery," Mr. Field said, "would find a fertile field for the production of new ideas, both of forms and ornament, by the study of the old master in this line, the Chinese and Japanese, the Egyptians, and particularly the natives of America, from Arizona to the Argentine.

Breakfast
This morning: Why not eat your breakfast, read your paper and smoke your after breakfast cigar at the North American. You will be cool and comfortable—you can't get a better breakfast any place—and the prices are low.

We all have fond recollections of dining places where we have had unusually good food. Perhaps it was chicken, broiled just right; a juicy steak which, so to speak, melted in our mouths; a lobster, or a splendid salad. And when we are hungry how often our thoughts go back to some breakfast, lunch or dinner we enjoyed particularly. And always it is the taste of the food we remember.

Discriminating people tell us repeatedly that our food does taste better. We go to extremes to make that true and so we are greatly pleased that the verdict of those who know good food is so favorable. And we know they mean it, because they continue to dine here.

Take just one item—Broiled Halibut. Countless times we have been told that nowhere else does halibut taste as good as that which we serve. We cook it so it retains its own juice and flavor. It is fresh and sweet and tasty—not dry and tasteless as fish so often is.

And it makes no difference what you like to eat. We have been told just as good things about the taste of all of our food as we have about the taste of our fish.

When you enter the restaurant the first sight to greet your eyes is 360 feet of display on which for your inspection and choice you'll find the biggest possible variety of the finest food you can imagine. If you don't happen to know what you want to eat the sight of the food is sure to suggest something to you. And you will like selecting your food from the food itself rather than from a printed bill of fare.

And because you serve yourself you pay only for food and the necessary cost of preparation. So you get food which, we are constantly told, does taste better and at prices far below what any good restaurant or hotel must charge to include "service."

HYDRO-TORON TIRES

Guaranteed 10,000 Miles Against Stone-bruise, Rim-cut, Blow-out

There is no other tire like the Hydro-Toron. That is why no other tire-maker can guarantee 10,000 miles of service and include stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out in the guarantee.

Hydro-Toron tires are not only as big as cords; they are better, because—

They are made by the wonderful Internal Hydraulic Expansion process, which prevents injury to the tire in the making or while it is being vulcanized.

They are made of Toron (no-rot) fabric, which prevents oxidation, decay, separation of layers, etc., while the tire is in service or on the spare rim.

Chicago and the towns around it have responded remarkably to the story of this tire whose building process and fabric treatment are bound to revolutionize tire manufacture.

Hydro-Toron tires are in use all over this country. We know what they will do. We know that they give the mileage promised. We are safe in guaranteeing that they will give it.

BENNY LEONARD ILL; FREEDMAN FIGHT OFF

HOME RUN RIDES CARDS TO WIN OVER CUBS, 3-2

CHICAGO PLACES THREE NET STARS IN SEMI-FINALS

Hayes, Squair and Hubbell Left in U. S. Meet.

STAR MATCHES TODAY

SINGLES SEMI-FINALS.
DOUBLES SEMI-FINALS.
4 o'clock—Armstrong and Boyden vs. Hayes and Herd; Squair and Green vs. Weber and Weber.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Chicago placed heavily in the semi-finals of the national clay court tennis championships at the Chicago Tennis club, when three local experts beat back the opposition in the fifth round of singles and as many doubles teams passed on through the third round in the team play.

J. ARMSTRONG. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The singles matches of the day groomed Walter Hayes as favorite for the championship again, Walter having landed this title once before, in the flush of tennis youth and ambition, at Omaha in 1911.

In doubles, the title seems more a whim of fancy, for all four teams are well matched, and the two that win today probably will find themselves extended.

Hayes and Squair Win.

Honors yesterday were divided between Hayes and Alex Squair, each of whom figured in a five set victory which was a blow to the out of town contingent. Hayes won from Joe Armstrong of St. Paul, 6—3, 6—8, 0—6, 6—1, 6—1, when the latter tired after great effort in the second and third sets.

Squair defeated Ralph Burdick of Indianapolis, 6—2, 6—1, 2—6, 4—6, 6—2, keeping his accuracy in cross-court shots until the end, while Burdick showed streaks of errors with his scoring spurts.

Two of the doubles contests also made the fur fly, to the delight of a fair sized gallery. Squair and Al Green took the measure of Burdick and John Hennessey of Indianapolis in a match of intercity rivalry, 4—6, 6—1, 6—4, 6—4. Hayes and Herd received more of a battle than some of the fans looked for when they engaged John Benfield and W. S. Miller of the host club, but the Chicago-California combination was too powerful, 6—2, 2—6, 6—1, 6—4.

Armstrong Tires.

Armstrong put up a clever battle against Hayes in the singles, and his favorite chop shots gave the Chicagoan considerable distress. The St. Paul man put up a strong game at the net in the second and third sets, but when he began tiring in the fourth Hayes maneuvered the play to his forte, a baseline duel, and generally worked his opponent out of position for a good placement.

The summaries:

MEN'S DOUBLES—THIRD ROUND.

Walter T. Hayes, Chicago, defeated Joseph Armstrong, St. Paul, 6—3, 6—8, 0—6, 6—1, 6—1. Clifton B. Herd, Pasadena, defeated Jerry F. Vories Jr., Chicago, 9—7, 6—1, 6—3.

Alex M. Squair, Chicago, defeated Ralph Burdick, Indianapolis, 6—2, 6—1, 2—6, 4—6, 6—2. Arthur P. Hubbell, Chicago, defeated Jerry Weber, Chicago, 6—2, 6—0, 6—2.

MEN'S SINGLES—FIFTH ROUND.

Joseph Armstrong, St. Paul, and Preston Boyden, Lake Forest, defeated Harry Vories and A. W. Shaw, Chicago, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3. Walter Hayes, Chicago, and Clifton Herd, Pasadena, defeated W. S. Miller and John Benfield, Chicago, 6—2, 2—6, 6—1, 6—4.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Either the lively ball or the strong breeze from the south might be cited as the cause for the Cubs' defeat yesterday, for they were beaten in the second game of the series against the slugging Cardinals, 3 to 2. A home run wallop by Catcher Clemons in the seventh inning with one man on second was the knockout blow that put the Cubs down for the count.

VERNON CLEMONS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Big Jim Vaughn was on the rubber, hurling one of the best games he has turned out this season and perhaps would have sailed through nicely with the victory except for the four baser. His mates had two runs and St. Louis had one when the deciding punch was delivered. The Cubs couldn't get another and the Cards didn't need another.

Just a Nice Fly.

Clemons' wallop was only a nice high fly that would have been caught easily by Mr. Barber except for the fence. The ball barely cleared the barrier and the damage was done. The breeze undoubtedly helped it and the lively condition of the ball perhaps helped, but it was a good wallop just the same.

Willie Doak opposed Vaughn and hurled a mean spitter at the Cubs all afternoon—when it was necessary. The northsiders knocked the ball about the lot freely, getting a total of eleven blows, but they couldn't come through with a genuine punch on numerous occasions when it would have broken up the combat. With men on the bases waiting for the wallop to send them in, Mr. Doak would spit on the ball and the boys would usually wind up with a feeble bounder that was harmless.

Loose Defense Hurts.

A bit tighter defense on the part of the Cubs might have saved the game for Vaughn regardless of the home run punch by Mr. Clemons. Both runs of the Cubs were properly earned and deserving but the homer was the only one the Cards should have had. In the third inning, Heathcote was able to race to second base when he should have been out at first but Kelleher let loose a wild heave which Grimes couldn't block.

Even then it took another bad heave from Barber to third base to let the run in. Then in that seventh after Lavan had singled with one out, he stole second. O'Farrell's peg was speedy enough to have cut him down by ten feet but it was so high, Terry had to leap up to stop it and Lavan slid safely in. The homer followed.

In the second Barber singled, was forced by Maisel who stole second and came home on O'Farrell's hit. In the fourth Grimes, Maisel and Deal all hit safely producing the other tally.

Noisy Sox Rally of 9 Runs Splits Bill With St. Louis

BY I. E. SANBORN.

St. Louis, Mo., July 2.—[Special.]—Two patched up teams of White Sox and Browns toiled and sweated for over four and a half hours in sweltering heat today and broke even on a double header. Chicago won the first half, 11 to 8, and St. Louis the second semester, 9 to 4.

EARL SHEELY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

George Sisler was knocked out by a fast ball from Davenport's southpaw, getting it in the same place and in the same round that Carpentier got his. Sisler was put out of commission for the rest of the day. Nine pitchers were used, six of them in the first battle.

Great Sox Rally Wins.

The White Sox won the first game with an eighth inning rally which earned nine runs and drove three Brown pitchers off the slab. Up to that time Bayne had held the visitors to two runs and apparently had won his own game with a home run into the bleachers with two pals on bases in the sixth inning.

Falk opened the murderous eighth with a double. Mostil walked and Sheely singled, scoring Falk. Bayne was yanked and replaced by Kolp, McClellan's out scoring Mostil from third. Then Schalk, Kerr, and Johnson singled in rapid succession, scoring Sheely and Schalk and tying the score.

Davis was rushed to Kolp's rescue with two men on and one out. Mulligan scratched an infield hit, filling the bases. Strunk walked, forcing Kerr home. Falk struck out on a fourth bad ball. Davis tried to catch Mulligan napping at second and let Johnson score from third. Mostil's scratch hit filled the bases again, and Sheely emptied them with a triple which bounded over Tobin's head.

Davenport Becomes Wild.

Davenport's work was superfine for three innings, during which nobody got anywhere near first base. But after two were out in the fourth Joubert hit Sisler in the jaw with a wild pitch, putting him out of commission. This unnerved the Sox southpaw, and after Williams singled four successive passes forced in two runs. Seeing Davenport was helpless, Gleason sent Kerr to his rescue. Dick walked the first three men in the ninth, but managed to finish.

In the second game Jacobson's home run came behind one of McWeeny's passes in the second round and put the Browns in the lead, two more runs in the third resulted from a pass, Johnson's muff and a single. That ended McWeeny's work.

Hodge relieved him and did well until the eighth, although Williams tagged Shovel for his daily home run in the sixth. In the eighth the Browns mauled Hodge all over the place and cinched it with four runs.

WINKLER, HUGHES, TIED FOR LEAD IN TARGET TOURNEY

Hitting his last twenty-five pigeons without a miss, A. H. Winkler yesterday shot his way into a tie for first place with 146 birds, with Frank Hughes, the Mobridge, S. D., star, in the first day's competition of the two day registered trap shooting tournament held by the Lincoln Park club. Jay Graham led the professionals with 146, and Mrs. A. H. Winkler was the high among the women with 130.

A. H. WINKLER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Fifty per cent of the net receipts were donated to THE TRIBUNE camp at Algonquin, providing a considerable sum for the summer home for mothers. The second day's shooting will start this morning at 10 o'clock. Seventy entrants lined up at the traps yesterday, and more are expected today. A salvo of 11,000 shells was fired during the afternoon.

Winkler in Great Finish.

When Hughes completed his shooting with a mark of 146 pigeons, he looked like a certain winner, for Winkler, who was in second position, had to shoot from one remaing trap and was three birds down. He nicked every one cleanly, earning a tie. Some remarkable shooting wound up the day, with the last squad of five shooters, including Winkler, hitting 124 out of 125 pigeons.

Frank Troeh of Vancouver, Wash., one of the stars of the nation, had an off day, shooting 141, which gave him a tie for thirteenth place. Many of the out of town experts were bothered by the condition of the air in shooting over the water.

Graham Leads Pros.

In the professional event Jay Graham nicked 146 of the clay targets, winning by one bird over A. H. Ammann of Peotone. Mark Arie of Champaign, star of the Olympic team, was tied for third place with J. Groves with 143 birds. Leading scores:

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Who should be matched with the winner of the Dempsey-Carpentier bout?

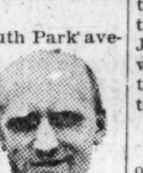
Where Asked.

At Van Buren street and Grant park.

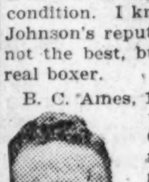
The Answers.

Harry Hollander, 2649 Evergreen avenue, clerk—I would like to see Jess Willard get another chance at the winner. I think he was overconfident in his fight with Dempsey. There is no doubt he has the nerve, and with the proper training he would give the winner a stiff fight.

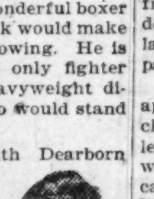
R. Martin, 234 East Chicago avenue, custodian—I am of the opinion that Tommy Gibbons is about the only boxer that the public would care to see matched with the winner. His record shows he is the man who has beaten almost all of the fighters that the champion has beaten.



Alfred Lawson, 7841 South Park avenue, advertising—Jack Johnson is the only man who would be able to have half a chance with either one of them. I don't think Willard could have beaten him if he was in any kind of condition. I know that Johnson's reputation is not the best, but I think he still is a real boxer.



B. C. Ames, 17 West Jackson boulevard, hatter — Tommy Gibbons should be matched with the winner at an early date. He is a wonderful boxer and I think would make a good showing. He is about the only fighter in the heavyweight division who would stand a chance.



F. Webster, 525 South Dearborn street, advertising—Bob Martin is my choice. He is a man who beat all of the soldiers, and anybody who could beat the boys overseas would sure have a good chance with the winner. A bout with Martin and the winner would surely please all ex-service men.

BENJAMIN NAMED AS SUBSTITUTE IN BOUT TOMORROW

Champion Confined with Rheumatic Attack.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Benton Harbor, Mich., July 2.—[Special.]—After Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons had kept the wires hot for over two hours today, Joe Benjamin, weight, was selected to substitute for Benny Leonard against Sailor Freedman in the main bout of the show here on Monday afternoon.

JOE BENJAMIN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The substitution was made after it was found the lightweight champion would be unable to keep his engagement because of rheumatism in his neck. It was not until late this afternoon that Billy Gibson, the champion's manager, notified Promoter Fitzsimmons that Leonard would not be able to go on.

Doctors Veto Fight Plans.

According to Gibson, four doctors worked on Leonard in Chicago Thursday night and after a consultation decided the champion should not fight. Gibson then asked for a postponement of two weeks and unless something interferes, the champion and Chicagoan will meet here July 16.

It was only after some difficulty that a substitute was obtained and it was only an accident that Benjamin was landed. Promoter Fitzsimmons finally got in touch with Jack Kearns at the Belmont hotel, New York, where Dempsey's manager was entertaining after the big fight. Benjamin was a member of Dempsey's sparring corps at Atlantic City.

Dempsey Says He'll Be There.

Manager Kearns not only will send Benjamin to meet Freedman but he will also send Dempsey to act as referee of the bout. Benjamin and Dempsey will arrive on Monday at noon. As Kearns was talking to Fitz over the phone, Dempsey shouted through the mouthpiece he would be on hand if it was necessary to engage a flying machine.

Before landing Benjamin efforts were made to get Willie Jackson, Lew Tendler, Ever Hammer, and Jack Britton. These fighters either had engagements or were not in shape for a battle on short notice.

While Benjamin will not prove a Leonard as a drawing card, it was the best move the promoter could make. There are hundreds of fight fans here now and there will be thousands more on hand tomorrow and Monday.

Benjamin in Dandy Trim.

Benjamin is one of the good lightweights. He is in fine shape after his long work in Dempsey's camp while the champion was training for the Carpentier fight.

Fredman was keenly disappointed when he heard Leonard could not keep the engagement.

"Just my luck," Freedman said when he got the word. "Just when I get in shape something happens. I was positive I would beat Leonard and win the championship. Now I have to wait two weeks to accomplish my purpose. Just to show the fans I was ready, I will beat Benjamin as soon as I can to let them see I am a worthy contender for the title."

Freedman Works Before Crowd.

Freedman indulged in his final workout before a large crowd. It was not until he had finished boxing that news of the postponement was broken to him. He boxed with Jack Blackburne, Sammy Frager, and Johnny Allen, aside from skipping the rope and punching the bag.

Arrangements have been made to take care of a large crowd Monday. Every train and boat, not to mention hundreds of automobiles, brings in a fresh army of fans. Hotels and residences are taxed to capacity. Even last night many slept in their cars parked along the streets.

Although a great many will be disappointed at not seeing the lightweight champion in action, there are numberless fans already here to see the semi-windup between Jimmy Kelly of Chicago and Franklin Mason of Fort Wayne. These little fellows will battle for the American flyweight championship. Mason is an experienced fighter, who will depend upon his ring generalship to win, while Kelly will take a punch to land one.

Al Bloom will run a special over the Michigan Central, which will leave the 12th street station, Chicago, at 10:45 city time Monday morning.

LEONARD TO REMAIN HERE.

Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard was confined to his room at the Hotel Sherman yesterday and would-be interviewers were not admitted. Billy Gibson, the title holder's manager, said that he decided to cancel the Freedman date only after physicians had advised strongly against permitting the fighter to enter the ring. As an effort will be made to stage the bout July 16, Leonard will remain here ad resume training as soon as he is able.

Pasadena, Cal., July 2.—Junior records fell today in the National A. A. U. track and field championship events on Paddock field. Many of the new marks were registered by athletes of the Los Angeles A. C. and gave the local club a good lead for the team victory, although Olympic club of San Francisco pulled up to an even total of 75 points by scoring strongly in seconds and thirds. The two coast clubs completely outclassed the rest of the field.

William Yunt of Los Angeles A. C. established a record of :15 in winning the final heat of the 120 yard high hurdles. Blenkiron of the same club won the 100 yard dash final in time announced at :09 3-5, which is the world's record.

Texas Hurdler Is Star.

Earl Frazier of Baylor university, Waco, Tex., was one of the stars. In a preliminary heat of the 120 yard high hurdles he reduced the junior record 1-5 of a second to :15 1-5, only to have this honor wrested by another when Yunt of Los Angeles won the final of the event in :15. Frazier came back in the 220 yard low hurdles and cut the mark to :24 2-5.

R. N. Emmons of Los Angeles A. C. kept pace with his mates by leaping 12 feet 7¼ inches in the pole vault.

Blenkiron of Los Angeles was automatically eliminated from the 220 yard dash by winning the century, under the rule prohibiting winners from competing in subsequent junior events. When the furlong was called E. Sudden of the San Francisco Olympic club added another junior record by racing the distance in :22.

Chicago Walker Laps Field.

Greenwich, Conn., July 2.—J. Simpson Dean of Atlanta, captain of the Princeton golf team, won the intercollegiate golf championship today, defeating Jesse Sweetser of Yale, defending title holder, 3 and 2 in the final.

Dean finished 1 up at the end of the eighteen holes in the morning, although he took one stroke more than Sweetser's 77. This was due to 6s at the first and eighth holes.

Dean played almost perfect golf in the afternoon, going out in 36 to Sweetser's 37. The Princeton star increased his lead to 3 up at the fifth, but lost two holes in a row. He won the ninth and the tenth, both in birdie 2s, and lost the twelfth when Sweetser got a 2.

A 4 at the fourteenth put Dean 3 up again, but Sweetser held on by taking the fifteenth. Dean won the sixteenth when his opponent got in a bunker. Dean also won the medal in the qualifying round.

TILDEN RETAINS BRITISH TITLE IN BITTER CONTEST

WIMBLEDON, England, July 2.—[By the Associated Press.]—William T. Tilden of Philadelphia, world's lawn tennis champion, successfully defended his title in the challenge round of the British turf court championships here today, defeating B. I. C. Norton, the South African star, in a five set match, in which the latter twice was within match point of victory. The scores were 4—6, 2—6, 6—1, 6—0, 7—5.

MLLE. LENGLEN.
[Und. & Und. Photo.]

Tilden won by a superb uphill struggle. Beaten in the first two sets, he returned to form in the third, winning this and the fourth with the loss of one game. In the fifth and deciding set the play was at first in Norton's favor, the South African leading, 3—2 and then 5—4. Tilden took it to deuce, however, and then captured set and match.

Other American Victories.

The final of the women's doubles was won by Mlle. Suzanne Ienglen, the French star, and Miss Elizabeth Ryan of California. They defeated Mrs. Beamish and Mrs. Peacock of England, 6—1, 6—2, being always at the net attacking with vigorous volleying. Mrs. Beamish and Mrs. Peacock, on the base line, never had a chance.

Miss Ryan also shares the mixed doubles honors, she and Randolph Lycett defeating Max Woosnam and Miss F. M. Howkins of England in the final match today, 6—2, 6—1. Lycett and Miss Ryan won with ease, their hard driving and aggressive volleying overpowering the British pair.

Lycett and Woosnam won the final in men's doubles, defeating A. H. and E. G. Lowe of England in straight sets, 6—3, 6—0, 7—5.

Tilden Starts in Slump.

Tilden beat himself in the early sets of his spectacular match by numerous errors, while Norton was serving and cross volleying to perfection. He even dealt with Tilden's hurricane drives for several sensational points.

In the third set Tilden got the first game on his service and won the third game with four successive aces. He was back in form and raced Norton all around the court. The American played the fourth set as a one-man show. He sent over "whiz-bang" services and steadied himself beautifully. He played hurricane shots all around the court and captured a love set.

Fifth Set a Corker.

Norton captured the first game in the fifth set, but Tilden evened the score and then took the lead at two to one. With Tilden once more beating himself on easy shots, Norton forged ahead and led at 4—2, but the South African also showed a tendency to mistakes, and Tilden drew level at 4—4. Norton then went ahead to 5—4, with mediocre tennis.

Norton twice got within a stroke of the match, but Tilden evened it at 5—5 after several deuce calls. Tilden then captured Norton's service, 6—5. Two fine ace points gave the American 30 love, one being a cannon ball ace, which made it 40—15. The American netted the next ball, but served a whirlwind ace for the last point, winning the set, 7—5, and the championship.

CHICKASHA WINS PENNANT.

Fort Smith, Ark., July 2.—Chickasha cinched the pennant for the first half of the Western association season by shutting out the locals, 1 to 0, today.

For PLAYERS of WHIST by A. R. METCALFE

REAL STRATEGY.

FOOLING opponents is usually a beginner's idea of strategy, and he resorts to one of three methods—playing cards out of order, making an irregular lead, or bidding what he hasn't.

Each of these has been thoroughly analyzed since the days of Rameses and makes the play of the perpetrator easier to read by a good player. But clever false-carding will get almost any one.

A favorite ruse, although not new, is for declarer, when holding ace-queen, to win with the ace instead of queen. But to win with neither is better, as is shown by the deal which follows:

THE HANDS.

S—9, 2.
H—Q, J, 8, 6, 3, 2.
C—10, 7, 5.
D—8, 3.

THE BIDDING.

Score, 0—0. South dealt, and bid one no trump. West doubled, north bid two hearts, east and south passed, west bid two spades, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

West secured six tricks only.

South won by his play at trick two. He could do nothing with the heart suit until the trumps were out of dummy, and the declarer fell hard.

It was also good play for south to get rid of the king of hearts at trick one, although he knew the nine would force the ace.

Incident of Good Counting.

Good play and good counting by the declarer are illustrated in the next deal:

West secured a small slam.

The declarer played well from the first trick. Game was easy, but that was all, and a little slam seemed preposterous. But the declarer saw a chance, provided the same player had to protect both the heart and spade suits.

The play of the ace of spades at trick ten was of the first importance. It would have been useless to force a spade lead from north with ace and one in dummy.

North should have discarded the ace of hearts, but lacked the courage, or was not so farsighted as west.

ARMY POLO TEAM TRIUMPHS, 19-4, OVER HOOSIERS

Camp Grant poloists performed a major offensive on Indianapolis on the Onwentsia club field at Lake Forest yesterday in the second semi-final contest for the Westleigh trophy. The score was 19 to 4 in favor of the 6th division soldiers. At no time was Indianapolis in the running. Camp Grant and Onwentsia will play the final game for the trophy next Monday.

Indianapolis was handicapped five goals. The team started well, Frank Witt cutting this down by a goal in the first period, but King and Rodes scored a couple for the army in the second, while Cooley was getting one for Indianapolis. Two more were notched by the army in the third, King and Holmes doing the scoring.

The massacre began in the fourth period when three goals were added to the army total, making the score at the half 12 to 2. Cooley got one for the Indians in the fifth but the army ran in three more. Capt. Rodes scored his fifth goal and the sixteenth for his team, in the sixth chukkur.

Hassler got one for Indianapolis in the seventh but Capt. Craig got two for the army in that period and finished the scoring for the day when he tallied another in the last session.

The army had it all over Indianapolis, although Jim Cooley at No. 3 played a whale of a game. Lineup:

Camp Grant [19].		Indianapolis [4].
Maj. C. B. King	No. 1	Frank Witt
Capt. P. P. Rodes	No. 2	Robert Hassler
Capt. W. H. Craig	No. 3	James Cooley

QUESTIONS THEY ASK—AND ASK OFTEN.

CHICAGO.—[To the Editor.]—1. What kind of a rod is best for casting, steel or bamboo? 2. What length of casting rod is advisable? 3. Should a casting rod be stiff or limber? 4. How far must one be able to cast to be called a good caster? W. B. W.

ANSWER.

1. The bamboo rod is lighter in proportion to strength; it has better action. The steel rod stands more abuse and requires less care.

2. A matter of personal preference. Our shortest rod is five feet, our longest six and a quarter. The five and a half footer is a favorite length with most casters.

3. Depends on what kind of action you like, kinds of bait used, and waters fished. A whippy rod is excellent for casting light lures for bass or for fishing open waters where the fish may be played; for heavy lures or for fishing very weedy places a stiffer rod would be advisable.

4. The distance you can cast has nothing to do with good casting; the ability to drop your lure in the right spot is what counts.

2. Liver that has been rolled in alum; "stink bait," made by permitting minnows to decompose; "red bait," made by dipping absorbent cotton in blood; pellets of decomposed cheese; live minnows.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—1. What is the best color for a wooden casting bait? 2. What kind of wooden bait catches the most fish? D. C. Z.

ANSWER.

1. The white body with red head is the favorite color with most casters. The comparatively new "scale finish" is becoming almost as popular; it is especially good in fairly clear water when the white body, red head is too conspicuous.

2. The kinds that dart in the water when reeled in.

The scales on the cheek and gill cover make identification positive. All varieties of pickerel have both the cheek and gill cover entirely covered with scales; the pike has the cheek covered with scales, but only upper half of gill cover, the lower half being naked; the muskellunge has the upper half of both cheek and gill cover scaled, lower halves naked. The only pickerel native to the waters of the middle west is tiny, never exceeding a foot in length. The so-called pickerel is a true pike and is always marked with bean shaped spots lighter than the ground color of the fish. The muskie, when marked at all, has spots or bars darker than ground color.

ESSEX

How to Choose a Motor Car

Do you choose an automobile merely by its looks?

Appearances alone often determine the choice.

But the way to judge an automobile is by what it and rival cars are doing after a year's hard service.

So the showroom view and the demonstration we can give you can not reveal the long endurance you get in the Essex.

But from scores of owners you will learn what Essex means in reliable service, in low operating cost, in freedom from repairs.

Our demonstration will show performance of a character no similarly priced car will undertake. It is fine to know that one drives a car that need not give way to any other on any stretch of open road or hill.

It is fine to know you have as sturdy and as good a performer as those who are driving cars costing twice the Essex price.

But the greater delight grows as month after month you learn Essex reliability.

All its advantages cannot be seen in the new car. Many devices which provide for longer wear or for taking up wear at no expense are not conspicuous.

The Essex clutch, as an example, so completely performs its function, owners are hardly conscious that the car has such a unit.

There are many types of clutches.

In a new car they operate equally well. But time reveals the difference and justifies the greater cost put into the Essex in design and workmanship.

Throughout the Essex are found just such items that assure a longer, more satisfactory service.

So when owners tell you of two year old cars and of twenty or thirty thousand miles of service, be not surprised. It is not that they have an unusually good Essex, but that every Essex is so different from other cars of its class that it rightfully holds its exclusive title as "The moderate priced, economical light weight car with costly car performance and reliability."

Would any similarly priced car be as desirable after a year's service?

FAVORITE OF 15 CARS

Have driven 9,000 miles to date and instead of depreciating in efficiency my Essex has increased daily.

It is the greatest of 15 makes I have driven. My next car will be an Essex. And so will the next.

I average in summer driving 19 miles and in winter 15 miles per gallon.

It's Comfort That Says How Fast You Can Drive

COMFORT—that's what controls your speed! And that is why the Holmes, "America's Most Comfortable Car," can outdistance any other mile-a-minute automobile in a day of driving, and still enable every passenger to finish with almost startling freshness.

It is the Aeroduct—an invention exclusive on the Holmes—which makes it impossible for any other car to duplicate Holmes' decisive mastery of road conditions. For the Aeroduct, for the first time, made possible the building of a motor large enough to power this, the world's only full sized, roomy, air-cooled car—a motor with greater power and "pep" on the hills—a motor guaranteed impossible to overheat.

May we prove you Holmes' leadership, on the roughest street in the city? A phone call will bring a Holmes to your door.

TEX RICKARD IN CLASS BY SELF AS A PROMOTER

BY RAY PEARSON.

Where in the world is there another man like Tex Rickard?

GEO. (TEX) RICKARD.

That question was popped at me as I moved on Madison Square Garden a coupe of days ago to visit the man mentioned. It was asked by a New Yorker high in financial circles, who is a keen lover of sporting events. His favorite sport is horse racing, and he may be seen frequently at the Metropolitan race tracks, but he also goes in strong for boxing, and there isn't a big bout staged in the east that doesn't find him a ringsider.

The question naturally made me do considerable thinking while I stepped the two blocks that separated me from this man and Tex Rickard, the promoter de luxe of fistic affairs.

In a Class by Himself.

And the more I thought, the more impossible it became for me to think of any man to be favorably compared with Rickard. He is in a class by himself. The man who popped the question is no particular friend to Tex, and therefore had no reason for boosting the man who w[illegible] end with the million dollar De[illegible] Carpentier fight when other promoters got "cold feet" and stepped out.

Wandering into the Garden, I trudged up the steps to the lower office and found Rickard at his desk, busy; but not too busy to be cheerful. Talking a few minutes, Rickard, who is a man built of nerves, suddenly hopped out of his chair and said:

"Let's go downstairs; I've got something wonderful to show you."

Builds Tank for 1,000 Swimmers.

We went downstairs into the Garden and there saw the largest and most wonderful swimming pool in the world. Rickard, the man who does things, had constructed that gigantic tank, which is a thing of real beauty. We saw something like 1,000 individuals, men, women, and children, splashing around in the green water.

So much for a description of what we saw. What we heard proved equally interesting. Sitting with Rickard in a "pool side" box, he told us something about how that great indoor swimming pool happened to be created. Among other things, he told me that it cost him $280,000 to build it and get it ready for the public.

Puts Through Others' Project.

"Do you know that for several years there had been talk of building a swimming pool in Madison Square Garden?" he questioned.

"Well, it is true, for the idea isn't mine at all. But no one ever would take the chance of losing more than a quarter of a million dollars. Putting this amount into a swimming pool is something that isn't done very often. But I became convinced that such a pool could be made to pay and return the money invested, after which a profit would be insured, so I built it, and there it is in front of your eyes."

Needs $1,000 a Day to Get Even.

Then Rickard explained what getting even meant. It means that this wonderful pool must take in $1,000 every day in order to pay off the "nut." It has been taking in close to an average of $2,000 since it opened, which is making slow but sure progress.

This swimming pool is just one of the nervy plays made by Rickard in the last year. He certainly showed that nothing can stop him, when he staged the great international fight between Dempsey and Carpentier yesterday. It will be remembered that when this match was made, Rickard had for partner William J. Brady of New York and Charles Cochran of London.

Half a million dollars was offered the two fighters at that time, and when criticism was aimed at the bout and the New York boxing commission placed a maximum limit of $15 on fight tickets, making it impossible to hold the big championship in the state of New York, Brady and Cochran experienced cold feet and got out from underneath, leaving Rickard holding the bag.

Not Even Annoyed.

But Rickard wasn't even annoyed. When he starts anything he finishes it, and he took over the interests of Brady and Cochran and ran the show himself. He got Jersey City to permit him to hold the contest there, and Tex now emerges with a profit after establishing a new world's record for money taken in for a ring contest. That record probably will stand for all time.

HARD AT WORK AT EASTMAN SPRINGS

GEORGE ZABEL.

The Fairbanks Morse club from Beloit will be the attraction at St. Rita's field for a clash with the Marquette Manors. Gob Buckeye and Rehor will be in the points for the Manors, while Beloit will depend on George Zabel and Leo Murphy.

Simmons Play Pyotts.

The crack Simmons team from Kenosha will be the opponents of the Pyotts and will bring a delegation of the Wisconsin home folks with their forty piece band. "Suds" Sutherland, former Detroit Tyger hurler, will be on the mound for the Pyotts.

Joe Green's Chicago Giants are billed at John Kozlek's new White Giants' park, 74th and Aberdeen streets. Tommy Mee of the Normals has the K. & I. team from Louisville as opponents. The Colonels are the champion semi-pro team of the south. Paddy Quinn will pitch for the Normals.

Jack Rabbits Play Indians.

At Cicero park two of the best amateur teams in the city will meet, the Jack Rabbits taking on the Indians.

The Chicago Firemen, with Mike Donlin in the lineup, will play the Whitman & Barnes. The Fireos are in training for their big game with the fire fighters of New York during the Pageant of Progress exposition.

RUTH KNOCKS 'EM OUT WITH A PAIR OF CIRCUIT SWATS

New York, July 2.—The New York Americans made it four straight from Boston, winning both ends of a double header today, 5 to 3 and 5 o 1. Ruth hit home runs in each game, bringing his season's total up to thirty. Peckinpaugh also hit his third home run of the series.

Ruth's first home run, made off Russell, came with the bases empty, but his second was made off Meyers with one man on base.

The Yankee slugger has made one home run more this year than he hit during the entire 1919 season, when he set a record of 29, which he surpassed last year, with 54. Ruth is seventeen days ahead of last year's program. In the last twenty-two games he has batted out fourteen circuit hits. Scores:

THREE-HIT GAME BY BABE ADAMS WHIPS REDS, 9-0

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 2.—The veteran Babe Adams was in rare form today, holding Cincinnati to three hits, and Pittsburgh won, 9 to 0. The Pirates batted the delivery of both Brenton and Coumbe hard and often. Adams issued no passes and at bat he got a double and a triple. Maranville's leaping one-hand catch of Bressler's liner was a fielding feature. Score:

VUELTA ARIBA

What have these Spanish words to do with Robt. Burns?

VUELTA ARIBA is a section in the western part of Cuba—noted for its fine filler tobacco.

Vuelta Ariba supplies every leaf of tobacco used in the fillers of Robt. Burns Cigars.

Vuelta Ariba of only the best selection is used. This tobacco costs as much per pound as any filler tobacco grown in Cuba. Last year it cost more. In other words, the filler of your Robt. Burns costs as much as the leaf which is used in much more expensive cigars.

Let the Vuelta Ariba filler of Robt. Burns Cigar (plus special curing) show you how mild a fine Havana-filled cigar can be!

Duplex Springs—another Saxon advantage
You must ride in this car

The application of Duplex Engineering to Saxon's rear springs has effected a remarkable advance—one spring rides on the other. The result insures double riding comfort and a pleasant absence of the disagreeable rocking or sideway usually experienced.

Saxon-Duplex

Saxon's patented Duplex springs also absorb road shocks with only half the "give" required of the average springs, thus doubling their strength. Think how this adds to the comfort and safety of driving.

This is one of the many patented developments which make "Duplex" the only word which accurately describes the Saxon of today. When you see these features in our showroom and hear them explained, you will realize why Saxon is a car at least two years ahead of present standards.

Consider the Cost—Not Merely the Price

You have heard a lot lately about prices. You have seen announcement after announcement of reductions. You have figured saving here a hundred, there a hundred and fifty. But be careful lest you overlook the main issue.

Your first cost is your immediate cost, true. But your later costs—your upkeep and repair bills—determine whether your supposed saving was real or fictitious.

You may buy other cars cheaper than Auburn but have you ever heard of anyone spending much on their Auburn after they bought it?

Think that over carefully before you buy.

MOTOR CARS

A downward revision of LINCOLN selling prices, ranging from $300.00 to $800.00 on the various body types, recently became effective.

And yet, when you ride in the car, and drive it, when you see how much more pleasurable and more fascinating motoring really can be, then the matter of price is entirely lost sight of.

You will doubtless conclude also, how unwise it would be for anyone ever to permit a few hundred dollars to stand in the way of their deriving that consummate pleasure and satisfaction in motoring which the LINCOLN can give.

DAD DEARBORN ALL SET FOR BIG REALTY MEET

"Do Something" Is to Be Convention Slogan.

BY AL CHASE.

[Real Estate Editor of The Tribune.]

Old Dad Dearborn is just beginning to find time to breathe normally again. He's been about the busiest city father in the whole U. S. A. for the last few weeks, getting ready for the world's greatest gathering of business men—the fourteenth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards—to be held, as every one ought to know by this time, in Chicago on July 12, 13, 14, and 15. But now things are pretty well arranged, even to the smallest detail, and Chicago realtors are finding time to get a perspective on the great convention and understand what it is going to do for realtors and real estate.

"We're going to do things at the Chicago convention," explained a nationally known realtor. "Talk and then more talk, with motor trips, sightseeing and other tourist pleasures between acts, and then more talk, with the curtain rung down and nothing accomplished, has been the program at too many realty conventions.

"Let's Go!"

"Everything is set for something doing. We're going to have concrete recommendations made at conferences and indorsed by the convention. A constructive economic program will become the policy of the national association for the year, and steps will be immediately taken to make it effective, working through the 400 real estate boards in the association. It will be a definite program that will be of value to property owners, tenants, and the farm interests."

A plan to relieve the housing shortage, definite revision of the national revenue laws of 1918, and a recommendation for new tax legislation to stimulate building are some of the high lights of the program.

Endless Attraction.

Of course, everyone knows there's no city in the world better able to handle conventions than Chicago. No city has the long list of open air attractions for the visitor during the nonbusiness hours. Beaches galore, magnificent boulevards and parks, gorgeous summer gardens for the dance fans and endless other summer attractions.

A point which seems to have been missed by the majority of the 7,000 prospective visiting realtors is that Chicago's newest and finest hotels are outside the loop. Practically all the large delegations have made reservations in downtown hostelries, ignoring the gorgeous new Sheridan Plaza, Ambassador, Chicago Beach Annex, Sovereign, Plaisance, Somerset, Edgewater Beach, Drake, and others. At two or three of these delegations have during the last few days made reservations, but visiting realtors as a rule will sleep in the loop. Yet in what city will you find a pleasanter preliminary to bed than a ride over boulevards and through parks and along the lake shore on top of a 10 cent bus or in a more luxurious taxi?

Great Program Arranged.

But no matter about little details. The big thing is that Chicago is all set for the convention—both during business hours and after. A great program of both work and play has been arranged—shown in another column—and on the morning of Tuesday, July 12, the big convention gets under way. Every realtor and business man who can attend should be there.

The picture shows all the members of the general convention committee who could be gotten in front of The Tribune's camera. State Senator John Dailey, chairman of the legislative building graft commission, stirred much enthusiasm among the 150 members of the Illinois Society of Architects at their annual banquet at the Edgewater Beach hotel on Tuesday when he declared the investigation, instead of being nearly over, was just getting started.

"The first encouragement our commission got in the first dark days of our investigation," said Senator Dailey, "when sinister interests threatened to prevent the passing of the bill perpetuating the life of the Daily commission, was from the Illinois Society of Architects. Your president notified us of your belief in our work and your determination to stand back of us to the limit. It cheered us mightily."

Calls Indicted Men Cowards.

Senator Dailey called the men under indictment cowards and declared none of them would dare harm any man who has testified.

"But don't forget, gentlemen, that the man who has valuable information on this intolerable situation in Chicago and holds it secret is as guilty as the slugger."

State Senator Willet H. Cornwell and Frank Comerford also spoke.

Administration Ticket Wins.

The administration ticket won a complete victory at the annual election of the Illinois Society of Architects. Results were announced at the banquet. President Frank E. Davidson was reëlected. Other officers who will continue in their present capacities are: First vice president, Herbert Hewitt of Peoria; second vice president, John A. Nyden; treasurer, John A. Armstrong; secretary, Ralph C. Harris, and financial secretary, H. L. Palmer.

Directors elected are: Three years, George Beaumont, Harry B. Wheelock; two years, Emery S. Hall, Charles H. Hammond; one year, Byron H. Jillson and Robert C. Ostergren. The board of arbitration selected is made up of Alfred S. Alschuler, Elmer C. Jensen, Joseph C. Llewellyn, George C. Nimmons, Dwight H. Perkins, Irving K. Pond, and Richard E. Schmidt.

President Davidson in his annual address told of the growth of the Illinois society, which added fifty-six new members during the last twelve months, giving it a membership of 398.

REALTY OWNERS HELPED BY NEW TORRENS LAWS

Registration Cheaper for Poor Man.

BY JOSEPH HAAS.

Some of the most sweeping and beneficial legislation in years has just been made law by the governor signing various bills affecting the Torrens system.

House bill No 395 is the most important to the man of moderate means in that it cuts $10 in the cost of registering property valued at less than $1,500. The examiner's fees are reduced from $15 to $5. We have always felt that the costs of registration were too high for the small property owner and we had this provision inserted in the bill.

Important for Owners.

Probably the most important and beneficial from the standpoint of real estate owners is senate bill No. 451. Heretofore abstracts of title and copies thereof could only be used as evidence of title in Torrens and Burnt Record proceedings. They could not be used in ejectment, in partition, or in any other suits.

There also have been continual suits over the question whether an abstract or copy was or was not merchantable. This bill provides for the certification of abstracts by the chief examiner of titles, and when certified by him, the abstracts of title will be admissible in evidence in any legal or equitable proceeding for proving title. The cost will be nominal, not more than $1.

The double filing of plats for property in Chicago is done away with in house bill No. 396. The old statute of plats was passed before the Torrens act and only provided for filing in the recorder's office. The result was that a double filing in both offices has resulted, since the city map department would not recognize plats filed only in the Torrens office. The new statute provides for the filing of plats affecting Torrens property in the Torrens office, and nonregistered property plats in the recorder's office, doing away with the double filing.

More Time Given Cities.

Municipalities are given additional time for protecting their tax certificates when the property sold is registered under the Torrens act by house bill No. 394.

Senate bill No. 436 takes care of the recent decision of the Supreme court invalidating the placing of certain special assessments, tax forfeitures, etc., upon Torrens certificates, and provides that the registrar shall make a search free of charge for tax and special assessments matter and place the same upon the certificates of title at the time of any transfer or the entry of any memorial upon the certificate of title.

The establishment of an escrow department in the Torrens office commencing March 1, 1922, is provided for by senate bill No. 506. It also provides for new rules of evidence as to abstracts of title in strictly Torrens proceedings.

CHICAGO TO HAVE NEW INDUSTRY; $4,000,000 PLANT NOW BUILDING

Chicago is to have a brand new industry, and one which promises to develop into an important addition to the city's commercial life. It will be the manufacture of news print paper. Work is now under way by the Waterway Paper company on the first $1,000,000 unit of a $4,000,000 plant on South Kedzie avenue, between the drainage canal and the river. The site is 300,000 square feet.

A unique feature of this new industry will be that raw material in the shape of local waste paper stock will be used, largely in the production of news print paper. Three-quarters of the annual output, or 7,500 tons, has been contracted for by the Daily News of this city, on a cost plus basis, for twenty years. Interests identified with the News control the new company. Walter A. Strong is president.

The Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank has issued a $450,000 7 per cent bond issue on the property. Frank D. Chase, Inc., engineers, designed the plant.

$440,000 Paid for Three Big Apartment Buildings

Three big flat buildings, containing 120 apartments, have changed hands. Fred Larson bought the sixty flats at 3751-67 Grand boulevard from Henry W. Austin for a reported $220,000. George W. Short of McKey & Poague represented Mr. Larson and William Murdock the seller.

Archie S. Macfarlane has sold two buildings at 835-43 and 847-55 Barry avenue to Benjamin Hindsill for a reported $220,000. Each building has thirty flats. Rosenberg & Lurie and A. L. Kirk were brokers.

BROADWAY SALE.

An indicated $70,000 subject to $25,000 was paid by Samuel Weinstein to Max Grossman for the 25x72 at 4629 Broadway, improved with a three story store and flat building. Mr. Weinstein gave a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust for $25,000, five years at 6 per cent.

HOOSIERS LIKE IDEA OF MEMORY TREE HIGHWAYS

State Will Do Its Share in the Work.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 2.—Warren T. McCray, Indiana's governor, has declared that his state is in favor of memory roads for the soldiers of the world war. The state will do its share in giving to the country the great avenues that are to mark the services of 4,000,000 of America's men.

The governor's chambers are decorated with numerous pictures of historical trees, hundreds of years old, and the governor talks forestry with a relish. It might be expected he would do just what he did do, indorse the plan that is to make for America roads that will speak, for generations to come, the appreciation of what these millions of men and boys did in the greatest conflict ever known to the civilized world.

Grow Hay Along Fence.

"Of course," said Gov. McCray, "the farmer will say the trees will shade the few rows of his crops next to the fence. What if they do? I am a farmer. I know how they figure these things. But let him plant grass along the first fifty feet back of that fence. It will add greatly to the beauty of the place, and as he must grow hay some place, why not grow it along the fence where those few rows might be damaged? It would make a good turning place on the field and nothing would be lost."

The Illinois and California plan to plant these highway trees sixty feet apart met with Gov. McCray's approval.

Forester Backs Project.

Charles C. Deam, Indiana's state forester and director in the state conservation department, is for the memory roads, with his whole soul, but he declares he has grown pessimistic in regard to Indiana's forestry policy, and he fears they will be like the girl who said she didn't want a book for Christmas—because she had a book. When told that a federal law would be asked for to protect these memory trees, and that national sentiment, coupled with this law, would soon make these great avenues an everlasting reality, Mr. Deams' smile broadened, and he declared that he has 10,000 hard maples that he will sell for about $10 a thousand for planting in the early fall. The American Legion or any organization wanting to plant the trees, can talk to Mr. Deam about them. "Plant young trees," he said. "The older ones don't do so well," which is the advice of other experts throughout the country.

Club Will Plant.

Mrs. William D. Pratt, president of the Indianapolis Woman's club, will present the memory roads plans to her organization, one of the best in the city, "and you may be sure the club will want to plant its quota of trees," she told me, "Indianapolis is intensely patriotic and responsive."

Mrs. Clarence Martindals, who is the leader in the Republican Women's club of Indianapolis, said: "The idea is surely a beautiful one. My sister was in service for two years, and is a member of the American Legion. I am certain that with the Legion at the head of such a plan, it cannot fail, and I wish it all the success it deserves."

Henry Dithmer, president of the Kiwanis club, was quite certain that the Indianapolis branch of this organization would follow the example of the Chicago-to-Milwaukee Kiwanis clubs, who will plant trees from Chicago to Milwauket along Sheridan road.

FLEX-A-TILE HOUSE TOPS

Easily Applied

When you build, or when you replace your old roof, choose Flex-a-Tile asphalt shingles or rolls.

DURABILITY BEAUTY AND ECONOMY

You will like the natural slate green (or red) of Flex-a-Tiles; the ease with which they are applied—for roofing new buildings, or over the old shingles, or for re-roofing old buildings; the absolute protection they give against all weather; their fire-resisting qualities, and the touch of beauty that they add to the home.

The well-known Richardson felt from our own mills is saturated and coated with Flex-a-Tile natural asphalt scientifically processed in our refineries, and then the slate chips from our own quarries are rolled into the hot asphalt.

QUALITY ALWAYS CONTROLLED

Flex-a-Tiles, the product of over half a century of felt and roofing manufacturing experience, will give you complete roof protection for years and years. Every step of production is controlled in our own mills. The quality must be right.

LET YOUR DEALER SHOW YOU

how uniform—how attractive—Flex-a-Tiles are; how simple their application is, for old or new roofs; how all litter and confusion can be avoided by applying right over old shingles.

All this at reasonable cost, with full service assured by the policy of building quality into every foot of Flex-a-Tile.

Come to our mills and see how this roofing is made.

GRAIN TRADERS GO TO COUNTRY TO VIEW CROPS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

All the grain markets of the country and Winnipeg were closed yesterday and a majority of the grain traders of Chicago went to the country to inspect the crops. Weather conditions and crop news are the leading factors at present and are expected to be for months to come.

The winter wheat is cut and spring wheat and other small grains are maturing fast so that an early harvest will be on. Corn is in the best condition in years and like all crops would be benefited by good general rains.

High Temperatures Prevail.

Temperatures continue abnormally high all over the country and indications are for cooler for the northwest. The weather report said:

"Thundershowers have occurred since Friday morning in scattered areas throughout the country, but chiefly in the northern Rocky mountain region and in the northern and central plain states.

"High temperatures have continued between the Rockies and the Appalachians, but an area of cooler weather has overspread the northwest reaching this morning as far east as the Dakotas.

"Showers are indicated tonight or Sunday from the northern Rocky mountain region eastward across the plain states and the Missouri and upper and middle Mississippi valleys to the western lake region, with the possible exception of Kansas, probably continuing Monday in the eastern portion of this area. Cooler weather will overspread the northwest tonight, reaching as far east as the upper Mississippi valley by Sunday night, but high temperatures will continue in the eastern and southern portions of the district over Sunday."

Weekly Forecast.

The weekly weather forecast for the upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys are for showers and cooler at the beginning followed by generally fair at end of week when higher temperatures and scattered showers are predicted. For the Ohio valley and great lakes region occasional showers for the first half with mostly fair in the latter half with warm at the beginning followed by somewhat cooler later.

Responsible Company Seeking Able Specialty Salesman

This ad is designed to come under the eyes of a specialty salesman who really likes to sell things, preferably a man of family and one who is not an habitual job hunter, but an able and ambitious man who wishes to anchor down in a substantial post with a highly reputable organization.

Advertiser is a Chicago Manufacturer selling the highest grade product of its kind made. Proposition is dignified and is sold to the better class hardware and lumber merchants. When you sell our product you don't have to haggle about prices, but rather you must have the true merchandising instinct and so be able to convince the merchant how he can profit by joining us. You really must be a man of courage to fit in here, but the earnings are large and the future assured.

The position involves steady travel in a middle western state. You carry a small sample case only.

Arrangement is a liberal commission on both new and repeat business, and a satisfactory drawing account will be provided for the man we select. TELEPHONE BONDS

There is no time like an era of general industrial depression to demonstrate the sturdiness of the bonds of telephone properties.

Recently it has been stated that 67,000,000 calls went through the switchboards of the Chicago Telephone Company in the month of April. Nothing could be more convincing as to the fundamental, essential factor of modern life contributed by telephone communication. No statement could convey more adequately the consistent earning power back of telephone bonds.

American Tel. & Tel. Co. Conv. 6's	1925	To yield 6.70%
American Tel. & Tel. Co. Coll. 5's	1946	To yield 6.40%

Enforce the New Blue Sky Law.

The securities law just enacted by the legislature of Illinois is a tribute to the versatility and ingenuity of the promoters who have been engaged in the business of selling "blue sky" to investors in this state. It evidently was framed with the purpose of making illegal every trick or device that promoters had invented for evading the old law. The large number of provisions in the new act and the complicated form of some of them give eloquent testimony to the difficulties of the task faced by the law makers.

The new law forbids the sale of shares of common law trusts unless they first qualify just like corporations. Similarly it restricts the sale of unit oil leases and limits the giving of bonus stock or donating any other consideration which could not be sold legally.

The listing of a stock on the Baltimore exchange or some other board little known in Illinois no longer exempts the promoters from the provisions of the law. Only stocks listed on the Chicago, New York, and Boston stock exchanges are now exempted because of their being listed.

The few provisions here enumerated cover a majority of the successful evasions of the old law, but they are far from covering all. The new law apparently goes through the whole list in detail and makes illegal every device that has been used in the last two years to sell "blue sky" in the state. Whether it can be completely enforced or not depends first on the authorities and second on the coöperation they receive from investors. Investors—and all law abiding citizens—have everything to gain and nothing to lose by helping enforce it. The only people who will lose are dishonest or visionary promoters, and their loss is investors' gain.

Hydro United Tire.

C. S., Delaware, Ia.—Hydro United Tire company has not replied to a request for information. The National Rubber company and the National Rubber Products company treated inquiries in the came way, and neither of them ever made public any details. Both sold large amounts of stock, which proved to be purely speculative. Indications are that the Hydro-United is backed by the same people as the other two promotions, and is in about the same class.

Brief Answers.

J. L., Scranton, Pa.—The latest available quotations for Harroun Motors corporation stock was 62½ cents bid, 87½ cents asked. We cannot predict the course of the market. The stock is a mere speculation.

P. L.—National Enameling and Stamping has been reviewed. Send stamped envelope for clipping if you wish it.

CHICAGO SECURITY

For Your July Investments!

THE SAFEST INVESTMENT that any city can offer you is the First Mortgage Real Estate Bond secured by well located ground and an income-earning building. But when the mortgage is secured by Chicago Land and Chicago Buildings—such as those shown above—you obtain the very highest degree of safety. Why?

BECAUSE—Chicago is a great, growing city—destined to be the metropolis of the world. The loyalty of its people, its steady, rapid gains in population and the wide and populous region it serves not only create an unequaled demand for REAL ESTATE but constantly increase the security of good mortgage investments based on REAL ESTATE.

BECAUSE—Chicago, the greatest railroad center on earth, enjoys both superior rail and water transportation. Its commerce is world-wide and constantly gaining in volume. Thousands of industries and the resources and wealth of the territory tributary to Chicago provide the financial power that keeps the city prosperous and growing.

BECAUSE—Chicago is carrying out the broadest, most progressive plan of city development in the history of the world. No other city, excepting perhaps Paris during the reign of Napoleon Bonaparte, ever attempted city improvements that could be compared in magnitude with those on which Chicago is now working. And as Chicago advances, so must its REAL ESTATE VALUES INCREASE AND ITS REAL ESTATE SECURITIES GROW SAFER.

WE BELIEVE IN CHICAGO. For thirty-four years we have offered Chicago securities. Our July list is the largest and finest offering of Chicago First Mortgage Bonds ever made by any investment house. The most satisfactory investment you can make this July—or any other time—is one secured by Chicago land and buildings. Place your order or reservation now. Or call, write or phone for this unusual booklet. Ask for Circular T73 or simply mail this coupon.

You may purchase these bonds with your savings, paying for them on the Installment Plan, 10% down, 10% a month. Bonds in amounts of $100, $500 and $1,000.

An Unusual Opportunity

We represent a client, closed corporation (two stockholders), established late in 1919, paid up capital $90,000, specializing in commercial vehicles, which made a profit during 1920 of about 40% net and has done better so far during 1921.

Because of its enviable record this client has been offered a very valuable pleasure car franchise for the Chicago district which will require more capital. This, coupled with the retirement of one of the principals, lends an opportunity for one or two, possibly three, sales executives who can control singly or jointly cash or credit to the extent of $50,000, to take over the interest of the retiring stockholder and become actively associated with our client in an executive capacity, with liberal salaries and large earning power on investment.

The BOGIE of FEAR by Arthur Somers Roche

FEAR is a bogie which pursues its victims relentlessly. When they struggle to escape it hems them in. As they yield to its demands for their life blood it demands more and more, until they are driven to destruction. Only by facing fear can they best it and reveal its emptiness.

This new Blue Ribbon serial is the story of Allayne Guernsey's fear—the fear of scandal—and how a venturesome crook played upon it, seeking a "big killing." It is a stirring tale of love, adventure and romance, with a thrill in every chapter. Start reading it today. If you have read "Plunder," "The Sport of Kings," or "The Eyes of the Blind," by the same author, you know that you have a treat in store.

MISS MARY SMITH, a Blue Ribbon short story, by Elizabeth Jordan.

WHEN Harley B. Guernsey slipped from grace by way of the cocktail-chorus girl route he did not, being a gentleman, intend to punish for his sins any one but himself. He had led for fifty-five years a life of simple decency. Then, without warning, he had changed from a home loving husband to a rounder.

Had Mrs. Guernsey been a trifle less stainless of soul herself Harley B. might have redeemed himself. But she had been born in the mid-Victorian age. She had a simple creed: sin was sin and goodness was goodness. Her husband committed sin, wherefore she put him from her.

Philosophers and physicians understand that there is a dangerous age in man precisely as there is in woman. Between forty and fifty-five the mildest man may turn over night into the wildest roué. But Mrs. Guernsey was neither a philosopher nor a physician. She was a woman whose pride had been affronted. To do her justice, she never realized this. She thought that her virtue had been insulted when her husband was discovered to have been maintaining another ménage for the last half year.

Harley B. recovered from his madness when his lawyer informed him that the courts had granted his wife a decree of divorce. He said to his lawyer:

"I seem to have made a lovely mess of life, don't I?"

His lawyer tightened his thin lips; he made no reply. None was necessary. Harley B. puffed contemplatively at his cigar.

"Mrs. Guernsey won't take a nickel, eh? She sticks to that?"

The lawyer nodded. Harley B. shrugged. Shortly the lawyer departed. His client picked up an evening paper that shrieked from black headlines of the shame of Harley B. Guernsey. He thought back, perhaps, to the days when his recent wife had shared with him the trials, the defeats of early business struggle. He had five million dollars; she, at fifty, wouldn't take a cent of the money which she had helped—he was just—to earn.

He was a simple minded man. A certain boredom of late years had led him away from home. He had sinned. He realized that. And he had never intended that Mrs. Guernsey should know. That, the excuse of every sinner, he clung to. He had hurt her in her pride, in her faith in him, in her right to expect from him that unswerving loyalty and devotion that she had given. But he had not meant to.

And now, at fifty, scorning his money. . . . Another wrong can never right a previous wrong. But Harley B., frantic with regret, remorse, horror at what he had done, suddenly clinched his teeth. She'd live on nothing because of her outraged pride! She'd refuse to take a cent of the money that they had jointly earned. O, well, he'd make her take it.

The window—it was a pleasant spring day—was opened wide. Had his wife seen the dreadful smile upon his tired, grief stricken face she would have forgiven him. But she did not see it. No one saw it save God, and he understood and doubtless forgave the rash, unhappy man. For Harley B. Guernsey stepped through the window, twelve stories above the ground.

Mrs. Guernsey had never ceased to love her husband. Pride, the source of more evil than money, had moved her. And when the news of Harley B.'s demise was brought to her she realized what had been her motivating impulse. Three weeks later they laid her beside the man to whom she had been married and whom she had loved. And Allayne Guernsey, twenty-one years old, became the mistress of five millions of dollars, a palace on a side street on the correct side of the Avenue, and herself.

Twenty-one is an immature age at which to become mistress of millions; ninety one is an immature age at which to become mistress of one's self. But life is laid on certain laws, the most important of which is that we must break all the rest of them in order that by experience we may learn.

Allayne Guernsey at twenty-four was somewhat different from the girl of three years before who, by a double tragedy, had become an orphan. At twenty-one she had been a light hearted, gay thing, with a beauty of soul that rivaled her beauty of feature. For she was, even in New York, where all the pretty girls come, something for which, to gain a longer look, one gladly risked one's life in traffic.

Olive skinned, with a touch of red over the cheekbones, black hair demurely coiled over her ears, its demureness denied by the glint of mirth in her gray eyes, and with a lightsome manner that attracted and held, she had been something of a belle in the decent circles of Manhattan to which her mother's lineage had admitted and Harley B.'s money sustained them. This at twenty-one.

At twenty-four she was outwardly—save that mirth never gleamed in her eyes and that demureness had given way, ever so slightly, to severity—the same girl. But inwardly she was another person. She had been carefree, unconcerned with those heavy moralities which belong to age and repentance; now always at her elbow, shadowing her countenance, was the wraith of scandal.

Scandal! It had broken up the Guernsey home, had driven her father to a self-inflicted death, had caused her mother, broken of body and mind, to join him.

Wherefore this afternoon in her boudoir her olive skin was white, her gray eyes were stern, and her lips were a thin, straight line. Once again she read the afternoon edition of the Star; rather, read that column which was headed:

SOME ONE ALWAYS TAKES THE JOY OUT OF LIFE.

"Summer time," wrote the reporter, "was in the winter of its discontent last night. Out at Dan Grady's roadhouse on the Post Road, known poetically as 'Summertime,' a few brave spirits gathered for the purpose of showing each other how contemptible they considered the Eighteenth Amendment. Dan Grady, bless his innocent heart, of course knew nothing of the nature of the party being held in one of his private dining rooms. Those cases which had been carried—by dry lipped, parched throated chauffeurs—into 'Summertime's' cloistered precincts had, Mr. Grady naturally thought, contained books.

"Books stimulate. Therefore, when sounds of revelry by night assailed the ears of passing Post Roaders, Mr. Grady, if he thought of the matter at all, assumed that mental exhilaration caused the sounds. But Officer Reilly of the Pelham precinct, being a practical man, bethought him to investigate. Reilly has his points, but he will never be popular on Broadway.

"He ventured near to the door, where was being held the private party. A modest man, the cries—so certainly feminine—that reached his ears made him decide to send for help. He did so. The police station responded with a patrol wagon and, to use a vulgarism, the house was pinched.

"It is true, concedes Officer Reilly, that no liquor was found upon the premises. He hazards the observation, offered for what it may be worth, that the liquor had been consumed before his arrival. That, however, is the judgment of one man. Officer Reilly doesn't care a hoot, he says, about the liquor end of the affair. What bothered him, as a family man, was that a Post Road restaurant was being turned into a Tenderloin Dive.

"Lieutenant Struthers, on duty at the station-house, is more of a cosmopolitan than Officer Reilly. Little matters of innocent amusement, such as ladies dancing upon tables, annoy the broad-minded lieutenant not at all. Whereupon he advised Officer Reilly to stuff his ears with cotton wadding when braving the night air hereafter. A man of gallantry and savoir faire, the lieutenant apologized to the ladies and gentlemen of the arrested party, bade them God-speed and happy days, and they left, bestowing upon Officer Reilly glances that contained more of pity than censure.

"The Star's representative, happily chancing by, was introduced to the members of the interrupted joy party. He never met so many persons named Smith and Jones in his life. It was a real pleasure to him to meet one who belonged to neither of those distinguished families, one Spenser Bourke, well known in fashionable New York circles.

"Mr. Bourke condemned the outrage of the arrest in warm terms, which will not be repeated in this family newspaper. So nearly as the Star's representative could gather from Mr. Bourke, a pleasant time had not been had by all."

She crumpled the newspaper into a ball, and tossed it into a waste basket. Then, bending over, she retrieved it. For the third time she read each word in the account. Its would be wit, its vulgarity, its cheap cynicism—each word was a knife that cut, not merely her flesh, but her soul. And the insinuations hurt more than the statements.

A maid entered.

"Mr. Bourke," she said questioningly.

Her mistress rose to her feet. Then, as suddenly, she sank back into her chair.

"Show him in here," she said.

A moment later young Bourke entered. A decent seeming boy, well enough built, not bad to look at, though certainly not handsome, the usual candor of his expression was obscured today by a shame faced embarrassment that made him appear hobble-de-hoyish. He noticed the newspaper in the girl's hand.

"'Lo, Allayne," he said. "Hope that rotter's write up in the Star hasn't annoyed you."

The girl ignored his extended hand. She did not motion him to a chair. Instead she looked up at him through hard eyes.

"Annoyed me? I wouldn't use that word," she replied. "When a newspaper tells in detail of one's fiance's—" she sought for the correct and bitter word—"debauchment, one is hardly annoyed."

The young chap colored. "Oh, Allayne, be easy with a man. If you knew——"

The resentment, the outraged pride, the broken faith, that she had kept under control until now, burst their flimsy bonds.

"Know? I don't wish to know," she cried. "I know enough. You were at that—that party, weren't you? Why? What right had you to go to such a place, with such people? To disgrace, not just yourself, but me! And to have the insolence to call upon me . . . Here."

From her finger she took the ring that had declared their betrothal. She held it out to him. Bourke smiled wryly.

"Aren't you being just a bit—just the least bit—melodramatic, Allayne?" he asked. "After all, I have a right to offer an explanation. You have a duty to listen, at least, even if you won't accept it."

"I don't wish you to tell me my duty," she retorted. "In fact, I don't wish you to tell me anything. A man who would do what you have done would also lie."

"I think that's enough, Allayne."

He nodded his head in an attempt at a bow, an attempt that by reason of his great chagrin became a brusque jerk, turned, and left the room.

He was not much older than she. His pride was as great as hers. Greater. For when Allayne Guernsey had discovered, in ways that women know, that Bourke loved her and withheld a proposal because of his own comparative poverty, she had made advances to him that brought the avowal to which she had yielded.

Memories of this hardened her pride now. She knew him; knew that he would not return. Yet she did not call out the word that would have brought him back. When it trembled upon her lips she was conscious of the ghost that stood always at her elbow, the ghost of scandal. She had seen what had happened in the domestic life of her parents; it would never happen to her. How could she, a girl of twenty-four, know what only the wisest have learned: that that which most we fear pursues us always, to catch us in the end?

The Star, the following morning, contained a brief item to the effect that the engagement that had existed between Allayne Guernsey and Spenser Bourke had been, by mutual consent, broken. Fear of the libel laws prevented the newspaper from making open connection between the raid on "Summertime" and the dismissal of Spenser. But that portion of the social world in which the young couple moved read the connection. Some condemned Bourke; a young chap beloved by so charming a girl as Allayne Guernsey should be more decorous in his behavior. Or, at least, more cautious, added the cynical. Some condemned Allayne. Boys will be boys, and girls should realize the condition.

Only one person laughed. His name was Bennett Halsey; at least, under that name he had entered, by means of letters of introduction that bore some of the best names in English comercial and social life, a circle of New York society which grudgingly yields place to any American.

There is magic in a foreign name, however. Americans, because they are hospitable, are gullible. Halsey had presented his letters to a firm of bankers. He had deposited a comfortable sum to his account, and spoken vaguely of future huge deposits. Because his manner was good he had been given cards to various clubs; his banker's wife had, at dinner, approved of him; in less than a fortnight of his arrival in New York he had secured an entree that, he estimated, would be worth millions. Exactly how, he had not planned in advance. He was no ordinary crook, who makes the minutest calculations and then, because there is a hitch in one detail, sees his whole edifice tumble to the ground. Rather, he was a good general, who can advance or retreat as the moment and the event seem to demand. He asked merely an advantageous position. Grant him that and he would take care of the rest.

Now he had the advantageous position. This morning's paper strengthened that position. His laugh became a guffaw. And the rather pretty—in a sullen way—woman who sat across the breakfast table from him looked up inquiringly.

"Why the ha-ha stuff?" she asked.

Halsey smiled condescendingly upon her. "It worked," he announced.

"What worked?" she demanded.

He yawned. He did not take this woman, who called herself, and was called by certain of his acquaintances, Rosa Halsey, always into his complete confidence. Rosa was all right, but she was a woman, and women sometimes kicked holes in things. In that circle of New York where for the last four months Halsey had been something of a social idol Rosa was not known at all. Halsey was supposed to be a bachelor. But this morning, things having come his way, he was not averse, after the masculine fashion, from dazzling a woman with his brilliance.

"You've heard me speak of the Guernsey girl, haven't you?" he asked.

"Uh-huh." Her utterance was somewhat impeded by omelette.

"You know—the one whose father bumped himself off, and whose mother kicked in a month later, leaving her pretty nearly all the jack in the world." Halsey's speech was most un-English when he and Rosa were alone.

"Uh-huh," said Rosa again.

"Well, you know I've been laying myself out to land a slice of that kale. I like it legal when I can get it that way, Rosa."

She nodded again.

Halsey lighted a cigaret. He leaned comfortably back in his chair. He had eaten a good breakfast, success was smiling his way. . . .

"I got some perfectly good stock in a perfectly rotten mine. It would be a fine investment for her—and for us." He chuckled. "I've been around a bit; I know things, Rosa. Young girls find me—er—interesting."

The woman's smoldering eyes leaped into flame.

"You take damn good care, Benny Halsey, that they don't find you too interesting."

"Lay off," he snapped. "You know I'm strictly business with 'em all, Rosa. Well, anyway, the minute I meet this girl I see I can frame her. Then I run into the fact that she's engaged to young Spenser Bourke. He's a nice young boob, dead from the neck up, but a regular watch dog. This Allayne girl ain't going to part with any jack without hearing young Bourke's say-so. Well, I do a lot of thinking."

"You didn't tell me any of it," she snapped.

"I'm telling you now," he said good humoredly. "Well, I inquire about this Allayne Guernsey girl. I learn all there is. She's hipped on scandal. Father raised Cain, mother dies of broken heart. She hates anything off-color. As near as I can figure it, the guy that marries her must have St. Anthony lashed to the mast. If he's ever been tempted he's out of the picture with her.

"So night before last I give a little party. And I tip off a newspaper man I know to hang around the police station up Pelham way. Then I reach a cop. I give him a century note to raid us. Then I go to young Bourke. I tell him that I'm giving a little dinner to some American friends who've been kind to me. Stag affair, you know. He's a nice kid, and agrees to come. When he gets there it ain't stag. Dear me, no. I have a flock of girls from the Jollities—easy, Rosa!" His voice was suddenly stern. "This was business."

The woman's mouth closed, and the fingers that had tightened over the handle of her coffee cup relaxed. "All right, if you say so," she said surlily.

"I do say so," said Halsey. "Well, Bourke wants to quit the party. Nice little mamma's boy he is. But we kid him out of it. He's young. He didn't want to seem too much of a hick. And we were all his friends. He didn't want to be rude. So he stayed, the unhappiest youth I ever saw. And Reilly the cop pulled the pinch and we all took a ride in the hurry-up to the station."

"You took a chance," she interrupted.

He shrugged. "These eastern flatties wouldn't know me. And a million or so is worth a chance. Well, the newspaper boy, all set by me—and a crooked guy in that profession is hard to find, I'll tell the world—recognizes Bourke, has a little talk with him, and—you saw yesterday's paper? The raid on 'Summertime'?"

"I glanced at it," she told him.

"Well," he assured her complacently, "that was my little party. The girl—this Guernsey girl—read it, and—it's 'out' for Mr. Bourke."

"She's through with him?" asked Rosa.

"You said it, kid," laughed Halsey.

The woman eyed him. She shook her head. "I didn't know," she said slowly, "that any one could be as low as you are."

He was not offended. He beamed upon her.

"I told you, old dear, that sooner or later you'd wear diamonds if you came with me."

"H'm." She eyed him thoughtfully. "Don't you ever forget, though, Benny Halsey, that any time I find you mixing it with a dame in anything but a business way something will happen."

"Why do you talk that way?" he demanded, aggrievedly. "Have I ever double-crossed you?"

"Not yet," she said.

He smiled at her, reassuringly. He wondered just how much trouble Rosa would stir up if he pursued certain vague plans to their conclusion. Allayne Guernsey was a handsome girl. . . . He could handle Rosa. He always had handled her. . . .

Outraged pride had caused Allayne's mother to send from her side and to his death Harley B. Had Mrs. Guernsey realized whither she was sending her husband she would never have given the command for his departure. Had Allayne Guernsey known, definitely, beyond a peradventure, that Spenser Bourke would not return, to plead again and again his cause, there is the slight possibility that he might not have been sent away.

Every queer mental quirk in humankind nowadays has its psychological label. It is this or that kind of "complex." Allayne's was the scandal complex. She had seen to what great evils might lead any pathway that was not the road of strictest rectitude. Wherefore when Bourke came to see her her indignation flamed. She was a very feminine creature; possibly she meant that her lover must undergo proper penance before their relationship was renewed. Inasmuch as she was only twenty-four, and that her years, because of the "complex" that ruled her, lacked that sophistication which may be unadmirable but which surely makes certain phases of existence rather more endurable, she may not have herself exactly known what her intentions toward Bourke were.

We rarely, any of us, have definite and permanent opinions that are full-born within us. We make a weak decision; events bolster us up; we brag blatantly of our strength of character. When Allayne Guernsey, a few days after her dismissal of her fiancé, learned that Bourke had accepted the superintendency of a factory in Hillstown, in Northern New York State, and had taken up a permanent residence there, her mind seemed suddenly to go blank, her eyes to envisage a cheerless and empty future. Then pride, the mother of self-deception, came to her rescue.

Wasn't that exactly what she had wanted? Hadn't she hoped that she would be able to avoid running across him at the various functions at which both of them might have been reasonably expected to be present? She was glad, glad! And to show that Spenser Bourke meant exactly nothing in her young life, she proceeded to step into a course of social gayety much livelier than anything that had heretofore occurred in her life.

Had any one told her that she was pursuing almost exactly the same course as the man who drinks to forget, she would have been highly indignant. Nevertheless, there would have been some truth in the assertion. And had any one quoted to her the old adage that hearts are caught easily upon the rebound, she would have been still more indignant. And there would have been some truth in that insinuation also.

For Bennett Halsey, who had intended to get hold of a portion of the Guernsey estate through chicanery, began to wonder if marriage might not encompass the same ends more fully.

Complications had arisen in the Halsey life. Halsey was well known in such cities as San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Denver. He had also a wide acquaintance in London and Continental Europe. But to New York he was, in his propria persona—that of a crook—unknown. At least he thought so.

As a little boy eats around his layer cake, saving the juicy chocolate icing for the final tidbit, so Benny Halsey had saved New York. It was the icing on his cake; so long as his appetite was satisfied with the plain cake,

"Aim the roman candles right at them—and chuck some squibs to go off at their feet! They won't be hurt, but I fancy they'll stop!"

So they stood, roman candles in their hands, pouring out threatening balls of fire, flinging lighted squibs and giant crackers. There was no harm in the false fire they flung, but the moral effect was tremendous. It took more than boyish nerves could furnish to face that barrage; furiously the school broke, wavered, gave ground. And all the time, behind the improvised fort, the great American flag burned brightly and the rockets rose.

"Come out, you sneaks! Fight fair! You're trying to put our eyes out!"

"We'll fight fair if you will!" That was Ted. "We'll take you on, three at a time!"

There was another rush, but again the roman candles and the exploding crackers checked it.

"Come on—come on, you cads!" Bill cried. "Who's afraid now?"

Turf was flying; stones; fives balls, small and hard, that some genius in the attacking force had thought of bringing up. But the spirits of the Americans soared high, like the rockets they sent skyward; they were above feeling pain. And so it went, until, at last, they had made good their boast, and the last rocket had flown upward, the last candle been discharged. The flag was fading out now, as star after star, stripe after stripe, burned out.

The school scented its chance; charged again, and swept over the barricade, this time, to victory. But it was a victory hollow and cheap. The numbers were too great for discrimination when blows were being dealt; friend struck friend as often as foe. And then the masters, who had been strangely deaf to all the tumult, came, and discipline came into its own again.

"O, come on, fellows!" cried Bill. "What do we care for these cads. They can't fight unless they're a hundred to one!"

Arm in arm, untouched in spirit, defiant still, they swaggered across the field. It was Ted Little who began to whistle that air his ancestors had transformed from a taunt into a boast:

"Yankee Doodle came to to-own,
Riding on a pony.
Stuck a feather in his cap
And called it macaroni!"

They heard laughter before them; saw three men who were coming to meet them.

"Dad!" Ted sprang forward; Murray was at his heels, greeting his father, too. There was a lump in Bill's throat. And then, amazed, incredulous, he stood still, unable to believe his ears.

"Hello, boy!"

It was his father.

"Father!" he cried. "How—I never dreamed you were here——"

John Halliday chuckled, ruefully.

"Sam Little told me what you fool youngsters were up to," he said. "I—well, I thought I'd come down. By George—you sure did hand it to those Englishmen, boy! I—I've been talking to your mother, Bill. Do you still want to go—home?"

GINGER DAN

By Jack Lait

HIS right name was something like William Tecumseh Sherman Pike, but they called him Ginger Dan. It came about through one of the other alley darkies trying to say "Gunga Din." And why Gunga Din? Because W. T. S. Pike was the bhisti of the precinct.

He neither dressed like Kipling's immortal carrier of the goatskin water bag, nor did he dispense water. The uniform he wore was a pair of overalls faded and worn down to the warp, a khaki shirt with half the collar torn off, and a cap that had once belonged to a chauffeur, a fireman, a mail carrier, or a commodore, judging from the portion still left; the visor was gone.

When some learned "smoke" first referred to him as Gunga Din, Bill wanted to fight. It was explained to him that Din had left a splendid name behind, and Bill calmed down. Some one who had heard the poem (in vaudeville, most likely) started to recite it:

"You may talk of gin and beer——"

"Tha's right," said Bill. "You may talk of it—an' that's about all."

But that wasn't all that Bill, who thereafter was known as Ginger Dan, did about gin. He peddled it. That was how he made his scant living. He had a source for procuring small quantities of villainous alcoholic fluid, colorless and rich with a "kick" that would have jarred a garage.

He carried his stock in a hip-pocket pint bottle which he never let out of his own hand. He sold "swigs" out of it at a dime a swallow, tearing the lips of the bottle from the lips of the consumer as soon as a mouthful had passed. It was bootlegging on a rather small scale, but Ginger Dan's whole life had not been cast on a broad scheme, so he found it easier and more profitable to retail camouflaged vitriol than to shine boots or cuspidors.

In due time word passed through the area of the "black belt" that Ginger Dan was the answer to prohibition, and he found knots of purchasers awaiting him in conveniently dark spots in the alleys. He laid out a nightly schedule and followed it, serving and returning to replenish his bottle, serving and refilling, serving and reaping dimes.

Dan, with the foreseeing eye of big business, allowed no man more than two gulps during any evening. He realized that if his patrons became drunk there would be a hue and cry and upon the air would sound that favorite American query-accusation, once applied to boodle, now to booze: "Where did you get it?"

Dan had no wish to bump his head and break his bottle against the brass buttons of authority. He was satisfied to let the matter run on as it was. While he had pronounced opinions on the injustice of the eighteenth amendment, the amendment had been a friend to him, and he was saying nothing against it—not a thing. A national movement had placed him in the way of a fortune; well, almost every white millionaire in the country could have said the same. Ginger Dan had merely been shrewd enough to turn a general disaster into an individual triumph. He was no crusader, had no passion in the matter; just a dealer with a line of goods strongly in demand.

But it couldn't last, of course. Whisperings, then loud talk, then an anonymous complaint by telephone to the authorities when a certain prominent porter was hilariously affectionate and 20 cents short to his bride one night, then instructions to a policeman to take in Ginger Dan, then the hefty hand of law and order upon the quaking shoulder of the gin bhisti as he was in the act of holding his bottle to the eager facial funnel of one of the foremost waiters in the district. Ginger Dan, caught black handed, so to express it, came along peacefully. His head was ringing, for he saw not only a fine in the offing but curtains on the splendid business he had worked up.

He was "booked" and he spent the night in a cell. Next morning he was brought before a prohibition enforcement official. Time was when a police sergeant was regarded with terror; time is when a prohibition enforcement officer is the bugaboo employed to scare naughty children who play hookey or twist the cat's tail. And to Ginger Dan above all, this was the bad man, the jinx.

"They tell me," said Deputy Jones, "that you've been a parambulating blind pig."

"They tells you?" said Dan. "Say, if you had to pay a fine for ev'athing they tells me about you, you'd be gone, mistah—gone."

"Do I understand you plead not guilty?"

"Aw, wha's the use o' pleadin'? You're in the pro'bition business. They's a look in yo' eye what says to me: 'Fare thee well, Ginger Dan, you's goin' on a long, long journey.'"

"No, not at all. I want to do justice. It's my business to ascertain the facts before we prosecute."

"I ain' got nothin' to say till I sees my lawyer."

"O, you don't need a lawyer. We have hundreds of cases like this a day."

"Hund'eds? Is they that many peddlin' gin up an' down the alleys?"

"In one way or another—bootlegging. Selling liquor is against the law. It's as much against the law as stealing or shooting or swindling. Most people refuse to look at it that way, thinking it clever to break the law. But it is just as wrong to violate one law as to violate another."

"You mean fo' to say it's as crooked fo' to ease over a li'l mild gin as fo' to lahceny a watch or somethin' downright low like such as that?"

"Most emphatically."

"Caihn't be. They's somethin' in the Bible about I mus'n't steal, but they ain't no nothin' in the Bible what says how I caihn't slip a friend a li'l shot o' refreshment. They ain't nobody gonna tell me somethin' what the Bible don't say nothin' against is as bad as somethin' what the Bible do say somethin' against, no sah!"

"The Bible is, of course, the basic structure of our laws. But as men advance they find it necessary to amplify the commandments, to provide for new needs as they arise."

"What right anybody got fo' to go foolin' aroun' amplificatin' on the Bible? I ain't never done nothin' what it says in the Good Book in black an' white fo' me not to do, epsep' mebbe to shoot a li'l craps, that's all. An' if I was a lawyer I'd walk right up in co'ht an' I'd show the judge where thisyare law ain't no shucks."

"No, Dan. You're wrong. Some of the best and greatest lawyers in America have gone before the courts, from the lowest to the supreme, and in each instance they have been denied their pleas that the amendment and the enforcement statutes are unconstitutional or illegal."

"Mebbe. Mebbe not—I don't know. But I bet them never pulled thisyare Bible ahgument what I jus' tapped you on the head with."

"What has the Bible to do with it?"

"Ev'athing. The Bible has to do with ev'athing."

"In a way, yes. But, though the Bible doesn't say you mustn't sell gin when it's against the law, the Bible doesn't say you must, either."

"It don't have to say you must. The Bible ain't fo' what you kin do, it's only fo' what you caihn't do."

"Yes, and I suppose law runs the same one-sided way. Be that as it may, the law is clear and thoroughly established. The sale of liquor is prohibited, and you have been detected in the act of selling it."

"No, sah. When I was detected, I was feedin' it—I was all through sellin' it. If you knew them south side black an' tan ginhounds lak I do, you'd un'erstand. An' I wasn't detected, neither. Since when is Kelly a detective? He's jus' a plain, flat-foot, beat-walkin' bull, that's all."

"I mean you were discovered in flagrante delicto."

"I was discovered in the alley. I never been in that place whah you says I was. Somebody's been an' tol' you lies about me. That there Kelly, boss, I wouldn' b'lieve him under a swear. He's prej'diced against us cullud folks, though I don't know fo' why, him bein' of a oppressed race hisself."

"Who's oppressing you?"

"Who? Who? Say, mistah—are you gonna sit thah an' look me in mah dahk complected face an' ask me that thah question?

"Who's oppressin' us? What chance have I got to go in a rest'rant whah you eat an' ohder me a po'terhouse steak smothered in onions an' a li'l speed on the service, please? They'd chuck me through the rear door.

"What chance have I got to go in a theayteh an' get two on the aisle in the sixth row centah, even from a ticket scalper?

"What chance have I got to go whah it's nice an' cool in summer an' nice an' warm in winter an' rent me a flat with steam heat an' fancy trimmin's up alongside o' whah you-all live, even if I was to pay down a yeah's rent in million-dollah bills?

"What chance have I got to go get a job sellin' haberdash'ry or pianolas in some swell store downtown?

"What chance have I got belongin' to one o' them gen'lemen's clubs on the bullyvard, where I can entertain my side-kicks an' my out-o'-town guestses?

"What chance have I got to belong even to your church, though I'm a membah o' the same religion?

"No. They ain't nobody oppressin' me. On'y they herd us in whah we are, an' if one of us wants to move twenny feet outside o' whah another of us is livin' they toss bombs in through our winders to show us we're free an' equal an' as welcome as smallpox.

"No. They ain' nobody oppressin' us—much. I see lowdown white loafers flirt with white ladies an' half the time the ladies winks right back. Now, suppose I done that—on'y suppose it. Ahah—yo' shudderin' at the thought, but you didn'd shudder when I says I see white trash a-doin' it. Say, if I was to walk up to a white lady an' tip my hat nice an' p'lite an' say, 'Howdy, cutie—it's a pretty day fo' a taxi ride,' I'd get lynched, even up hyare in the no'th.

"But the cons'itootion that you points to says I got the same right to be a no-account scalawag what a white bum is got. It says so in a couple o' 'mendments, the fo'teenth an' fifteenth, I b'leive.

"That cons'itootion is law, ain't it? You says it's law what tops the Bible.

"That thah law wasn't written like the pro'bition law. It didn' put no 'Don'ts' in, jus' a few lukewahm 'Do's,' an' when they ain't no fines an' sentences on the don'ts the dos don't 'mount to much. Now an' then one of us cullud fools takes them 'mendments of ouahs seriously till some white man punches us in the nose or hangs a few of us, after which we take up them 'mendments as far as the thirteenth an' jus' forget the rest for a while.

"That's jus' how I been, boss. I been runnin' up as fah as the thirteenth an' then stoppin', see?

"That's how come I jus' clean fo'got about the eighteenth.

"At that, I been observin' the eighteenth 'mendment about as good as white folks does the fifteenth.

"I been a-sellin' gin at a dime a drag—a black man's drink at a black man's price. What fo' you white people wanna get het up over that fo'? Is you afraid I'm gonna send some black soul to perdition? Don't make me laugh. Our souls ain't no moh to you—all than ouah society.

"What do you say, we call it a day, huh?"

"If I let you go this time will you promise not to peddle any more gin?"

"Promise? Will I? I'll promise anything."

"But will you keep your promise?"

"Yes, sah."

"And promise to live up to all the laws—and all the amendments?"

"Yes, sah—all the 'mendments—epssep' the fifteenth. You—all caihn't conscientiously ask a cullud man to observe that one. Thisyare ain't much of a head, but I don't want it knocked off yet. Good night, boss."

THE BOGIE OF FEAR

was being born in her mind. She pushed, half consciously, Halsey's greedy lips farther away from her.

"Why—why, Ben," she said. "You—you—when she screamed—and you looked so queer—you said something, too. I remember it now. You said, 'Rosa.' I heard you."

Now Halsey had waited all his life for the big killing. It was at hand at last. He had that infinite patience which people, nations, sometimes possess until the sought for goal seems near at hand. Then patience leaves them and they are impetuous, casting away in a moment of rashness the thing for which they labored, perhaps, years.

Allayne Guernsey had been married to him an hour ago. Her lips belonged to him; her fortune was his. But at the moment he thought of her lips more than of her money. She was enticing, attractive, irresistible. That she had dismissed Bourke because of a carefully engineered scandal was all very well. But Bourke had not been married to her. He, Bennett Halsey, was.

"You heard nothing of the sort," he said. "You imagined it."

Once again he tried to take her in his arms, and once again she avoided him. He laughed impatiently.

It had never been his hope to hide from her all evidences of his past, among which Rosa must stand foremost. But he had known that not for the wealth of New York would Rosa permit him to marry, even for a moment, another woman. However, once the deed was done Rosa would be enough of a philosopher, when she had time to think it over, to forget it and pocket her share of the loot. So Halsey firmly believed. To avoid trouble he had arranged a quiet marriage. But now that trouble had not been avoided, why worry? Why, his bride's hatred of scandal would in itself act in his favor!

"Well," said he, "suppose that I did know her? I don't owe her anything, you may be sure of that."

rather; their speech was shot with strange and highly colored bits of foreign idiom.

"Say!" Ted would cry, hailing some one; never "I say!" And if you asked him a question to which the answer was affirmative it was always "You bet!" instead of "Rather!"

There had been, in the beginning, impertinences about Indians in the streets of New York; sneering comments concerning the crudeness of American life. But Ted had fought a few times, in the classic ring near the fives court, and the school had become strangely reluctant to harry him upon his nativity thereafter.

But what was right and natural and according to kind in the case of Ted or Jim was rank swank and accordingly to be put down when it proceeded from Bill—from young Halliday, who had grown up in the school, and was, to all outward seeming, as English as any of them. There was bewilderment in the attitude the school took toward him, of course, too; why in the world should any fellow keep insisting he was an American when no one would know it unless he admitted it?

Every morning, through the long winter, Bill struggled to wakefulness a full fifteen minutes before the rest of the dormitory, slipped on a bathrobe over his pajamas, and padded through long, dark corridors to the shower bath near the fives court, where he and Ted and Jim submitted themselves to the shock of icy water. Ted had proclaimed his wonder and his dismay at the discovery that the bathrooms were open only at a stated time, when the school bathed in groups, once a week, and had gained permission to use this almost forgotten shower.

"We bathed whenever we liked in school at home," he told Bill. "Golly—you hear a lot about the way an Englishman takes his tub every morning, but look at 'em here! A bath once a week—and that's a rule!"

More swank! Especially in Bill's case. Freakish customs were allowable in a real foreigner like Ted, but it was plain cheek when Halliday did the same thing. Bill, who had never before, in all his years at the school, been prominent, began to be distinctly unpopular.

Restraints that had never irked him before began, in the light of what Ted and Murray knew of freedom at home, to be intolerable. In the Sixth, to be sure, the bounds were wide. You could walk for miles along roads lined with hedges full of blackberries, even in late November; even Ted approved of British berries, and conceded their superiority to those of home. You could go into Beds any afternoon, and drink coffee and eat cake in a dingy shop, with its mock magnificence of red plush cushions. You could stare at the jail in which John Bunyan had been confined—for that matter, though, you could see John Bunyan's house at Elstow by looking across the fields from the dormitory windows. You could hire a boat and row on the sluggish Ouse. But that noble stream, that the British called a river, provoked ribald laughter in Ted and Jim.

"It's not a river! It isn't even a creek! It's a brook!" said Jim. And Ted agreed, and they talked of rivers a mile wide, until Bill groaned.

Christmas came, and for Bill two weeks at Swaythling. There was good Christmas cheer. But he longed for snow; he couldn't even skate! He had wanted to ask Ted home for the holidays, but his mother had written that it would not be convenient. Yet the house had been no more than half full of guests. Back to school after that, and the long grind till Easter in London, when he did see something of Ted. Bill hated the second winter term at school. Football was all over; hockey had never appealed to him; he thought it a girl's game. And Ted talked of what he called real hockey, which you played on the ice, skating after a puck endowed with life as it slid across the frozen surface of a rink.

It was at Easter that Ted spoke out frankly.

"I thought you were coming home some time soon, Bill?" he said. "You and your folks?"

They had been having lunch with Mr. Little, and he, having business, had suggested a matinée and furnished tickets.

"We are—directly my father finishes his business here," said Bill, a little flushed.

"Well—but—say—Dad—he says your father's going to stay here and turn Englishman! He says he's never going home—says your mother won't let him——"

"My mater——" Bill wanted to say something in her defense, but he choked on the words. He stared at Ted, dismayed, horrified. For the first time the secret fear that had been mounting in him had been expressed. "The governor won't do that!" he cried, fiercely. "He's an American—you bet——"

"Well—that's what everyone's saying—that's all I know," said Ted. "All the men my Dad meets—Americans here. I guess he heard it first from Mr. White. He's a newspaper man, and I guess he knows what he's talking about."

"I guess he doesn't!" said Bill. "Not if he says things like that! You mind your own business, young Ted!"

"Oh, all right—I was only telling you what I'd heard! You needn't get stuffy. Keep your shirt on—as you'd say!"

Bill dined with his mother, alone, that evening; an unusual privilege. And he gained the courage to speak to her.

"Mother—we are going home, aren't we?" he said.

"Why—I don't know——" She looked at him curiously. It was hard for Mrs. Halliday to realize that Bill was growing up; that before so very long she would have two men, instead of one, to manage. "Do you want to, so very much, Bill? How do you know you'd like America? You can't remember it."

"No. But—it's home——"

She frowned.

"It's home here, too, isn't it, Bill? You've grown up here. You like school, don't you?" He nodded. "And Swaythling? All your friends are here. Don't you want to go to the university when they do?"

He shook his head.

"I want to go to Princeton."

"You must talk to your father," she said. "You don't quite understand, I suppose, Bill. But your father is a very important man. Some one has to live here to look after business for his firm. Some one will have to do that, always. We've thought that you could do it, when your father retires. And it will be better if you're really an Englishman——"

"But I can't be that, Mother! I'm an American!"

"Do you know what it means when any one is naturalized, Bill?"

He just stared at her.

"If your father were to be naturalized, for instance, he'd be an Englishman, afterward. And you and I would be English, too, because we belong to him."

"But—he won't be, Mother! He—he couldn't——"

"He's thinking about it, Bill. I suppose you will have to decide for yourself, later, when you're twenty-one. But just now your father has to do what seems best to him."

"It—it's not fair!"

"Bill! That's rude. Your manners haven't been very nice since you have been going around so much with that American boy—Little, isn't it?"

"I'm sorry, Mother. But——"

"We won't talk any more about it, dear. Your father will talk to you, when he has made up his mind."

Bill tried to see his father before he went back to school for the long term. But it was almost as if Mrs. Halliday sought to prevent a meeting between them. Nor did Bill see much more of Ted. Never had he seen so much of his mother during his holidays. He lunched with her at the Carlton; once she took him with her to Paris for a week-end; he must go with her in the motor when she went shopping; be home when people came in for tea.

He was glad to get back to school. He was made a prefect; Traill major had not come back, having gone to Sandhurst. The Head talked to him soberly of his new responsibilities, and Bill was rather awed. It was something to be one of those to hold in charge traditions that had come down through centuries. The school was a medieval foundation.

The quarrel between him and Ted was forgotten. Ted imparted all his knowledge of the art of curving a ball, so that Bill, who had always been a good slow bowler, became almost invincible. Then, too, he and Ted played tennis together, and in long hours of practice Ted grew accustomed to turf courts, and taught Bill to come up to the net and hold his place, volleying always, and how to kill a rising ball. In doubles they soon proved themselves the masters of the school; Bill's conservative game, quickened by Ted's teaching, fitted in well with Little's dashing play.

This was to be the last term for Little and Murray; Bill could not see enough of them. Both were going home that summer.

"It's a crime—the way we have to stay here all through July," said Murray. "Lord—at home we get through early in June. Ted and I'll get back just about in time to get ready to go back in September."

"That's a sell," Bill agreed. "But you're going home——"

"You bet we are! Wish you were coming, too, old scout! Say—come on! Make them let you. Come on up to Exeter with me and to Yale next year. You'd have a good chance to make the freshman team—and I'll bet you'd make the 'Varsity afterward."

"Forget it, Jim! He's booked for Princeton."

Bill sighed. He was losing hope. His mother had told him that he had been entered already for Magdalen College at Oxford; he should be ready to go up after one more year at school.

April passed into May; May, swiftly, into June. Bill could begin to count the days that were left of companionship with Jim and Ted. They had formed a triumvirate; one for all and all for one, against the school. Bill would have to pay later, he knew, when they were gone; the school would neither forget nor forgive. But he clung desperately to his last link with home. And on a day late in June, in the same post, letters came to Little and to Murray that set them to cheering.

"We're going home!" Ted shouted to Bill, waving his letter. "On the same ship! We're sailing from Southampton on the third of August! Oh, boy—I'll see a ball game at the Polo Grounds in less than two months!"

"You're coming to stay with me," said Jim. "We're going straight to Maine and open the house! I've got a motor boat——"

Bill turned away. But later he went into Beds, loyally, to join in the celebration. Coffee, and cake, and a surreptitious cigarette, to be smoked with a duly watchful eye for stray masters who might be passing.

"Wish we were going to be home for the Fourth," said Ted. "This makes twice I've missed that!"

"I've never seen any fireworks for the Fourth!" said Bill.

"Say——"

They turned to look at Murray. He was one broad grin.

"Can't we pull something off next week?" he said. "We might get hold of a few fireworks! Glory—wouldn't they be sore——"

Bill lifted his head. His eyes were shining; his cheeks were flushed.

"Those French chaps—they got a half holiday last year for Bastile day!" he said. "Suppose we asked the Head——"

For a moment Little and Murray were silent, awed by the sheer splendor of the thought. They they whooped.

"Would he? Would there be a chance? Let's ask! Oh, Lord—think of the school—how they'd hate us!"

"We'll ask," said Bill. "After call-over today. And then—if we could get some fireworks." He emptied his pockets. "I've got nine and threepence—and we all get some pocket money Saturday——"

They pooled their wealth. They had nearly two pounds among them. They left half filled cups; hurried to Sadler's, the shop that lived on the school's trade.

"Fireworks? Ho—yuss—when fireworks time comes, boys! Fifth of November there'll be plenty!"

But for the Fourth of July—not so much as a rocket or a squib!

"That's all right, too," said Ted. "I'll write to my father."

"So'll I!" Jim echoed. Bill would have given anythng he possessed to be able to say the same. But he dared not. But he pressed his money upon Ted; begged him to send it to his father, and ask him to spend it for his share. This—why, this might be his last, as it was his first, opportunity to celebrate the Fourth!

The letters were posted; Sadler could furnish paper and envelopes, pen and stamps. And later the three of them filed into the Head's study and made their request. He received it without a smile. But then, his long beard hid his lips.

"I might call this Yankee cheek," he suggested. "Have you thought that the school would not be—er—pleased?"

"You gave it to Blanc and Michaud last year, sir," said Bill, stoutly.

"So I did—so I did! On your own heads be it! You shall have your half holiday. You may be excused from afternoon call-over and from games."

Now—if Mr. Little and Mr. Murray would do their part! And they did. There were two great packages, wrapped in brown paper, for Ted and Jim, on the third of July; the school, hovering about, eager in the anticipation of tuck that night, was disappointed when the parcels were carried to the study that Bill enjoyed by virtue of being a prefect. But that evening they transfered everything to an unused wooden rick in Elstow, for the use of which a smocked rustic had thankfully accepted a shilling.

They lived through school, somehow, on the morning of the Fourth; it wasn't easy, but they had no choice. They were free with the ending of the morning's last lesson, and set out at once along the Bedford road, leaving an unsuspicious school, incapable of imagining so dire an insult, behind them. But when they had gone a quarter of a mile they heard an outbreak of shouts and cries behind them.

"I guess they've seen it!" said Bill—and was proud that he had guessed and not fancied.

"Seen what?" said Ted.

"Oh, I forgot to tell you! I put up a notice on the board. Just this: 'The school is invited to attend a display of fireworks, to celebrate the Fourth of July, Independence Day, at 9 o'clock tonight.' And I signed our names!"

"That's the plu-perfect touch!" said Ted. "Oh, Bill—don't you ever let any one make an Englishman of you!"

"I don't believe our dear schoolmates love us very much just now," said Jim. "Bill, if I were French I'd kiss you!"

They lunched at the hotel in superb state; money orders had come for Little and Murray, as well as the fireworks, from fathers who remembered not only their own boyhood but certain evidences of British condescension of more recent date.

A cinema was tempting, but Bedford was no safe haunt for them that afternoon. They could trust the school, they knew; that threatened show of fireworks could never come off if they put themselves in the way of being captured. And so, after lunch, they were off, circling the school widely, striking out into open country, out of bounds for all save those who were, like themselves, of the Sixth. They had tea in an old thatched farmhouse; eggs warm from the nest, foamy milk, strawberries with clotted cream; rock cakes.

Later, as the shadows grew longer, they made their way back, with infinite caution, toward the school. Scouting parties were out looking for them; they avoided roads and made their way through fields of mangel wurzel and potatoes, sinking deep into the soft earth. Twice they watched parties of the enemy, lying hidden behind thick hedges. But they came to Elstow at last, somewhere near eight o'clock. It was not dark. But then, indeed, real darkness would not come at all that night, and it was dark enough for the fireworks to make a show.

They had chosen their spot and prepared it against their need. It was in a remote corner of the playing fields, with the embankment of the Midland railway at the back and a brick wall at one side. They had contrived a sort of barricade of branches to protect their front; the other flank was covered by a jungle of thorny bushes. Their approach with their burden involved a double crossing of the railway and a double breach of the sternest of all school rules, since to step upon the embankment was strictly forbidden. But they were dealing in sheep, now, not in lambs.

Slowly they made their way. They had to wait for two trains to pass. But they were ready at last. Rockets were planted in the ground; roman candles, giant crackers, squibs were piled up; to the brick wall was affixed the set piece that was their crowning glory—a thing contrived to set a great American flag ablaze.

Eagerly they studied their watches. They could hear a murmur of voices from the direction of the fives court; the school was waiting. They might have set off their display at Elstow and escaped before pursuit could reach them. But it had seemed to them that their honor was involved in staying on school ground.

"Time!" said Bill, at last, and lit the fuse of the first rocket. For a moment it hissed and sputtered; then a streak of fire shot upward, and a minute later, with a bang, the rocket burst, high above them, in a constellation of red and green and yellow stars. Ted had lighted the set piece; already, as the rocket burst, stars and stripes were appearing on the wall.

There was a yell from the fives court; at once they saw a dark mass charging across the field.

"They're going to rush us!" said Bill.

why gorge himself? But when the western part of the United States and the capitals of Europe had become a bit too hot to hold him, and when three eminent specialists had told him—believing in his assumed character of a busy financier—that he must soon look forward to retirement, Benny Halsey decided to eat the icing.

When he had successfully removed young Bourke from the pathway to the Guernsey fortune, Halsey had not seen himself definitely in any closer relation to Allayne than that of financial adviser. Of course, Allayne was a beautiful girl . . .

One week after the breaking of her engagement to Bourke, a hand had been slapped heavily upon Halsey's shoulder. He had wheeled, his right hand dropping to a side pocket. Long he had anticipated the clutch of the law, and always he was prepared. Then his fingers relaxed upon the automatic pistol. He essayed a grin as he looked into the leering countenance of one Abe Gelstein, who, at the moment, he had thought to be safe in far-off California.

"Tossed a scare into you, Benny, eh?" chuckled Abe.

Halsey breathed heavily. His face, that had gone dead white, resumed a bit of its normal color.

"Got a bad heart, Abe," he said truthfully. It was that heart that had brought forth the medical advice.

"And a bad conscience," said Abe. "And a gun." He shook his head pityingly. "You're gettin' old, Benny. Time was when you'd 'a' drawn before you turned. I coulda bumped you off easy."

Halsey's grin became less forced. "Thought it was a copper, Abe. But an old pal—Let's go some place where we can have a little drink."

Gelstein's smile was crafty. "Last time I did that with you, Benny, was a matter of five years ago. You were going to pay me a little percentage matter. Remember? It ran up to ten thousand or so. And I took the drink, and when I wake up, two days later, I don't have the money. I have nothing but a headache. Well, well! I been lookin' for you a long, long time, Benny. Now I got you—I suppose you been takin' care of that money for me all this time, eh?"

If Halsey had dared, he would have put to the test Gelstein's boast that he was quicker with a weapon. But this was crowded New York. Murder was cheap in Manhattan, but only to one who knew the ropes. Halsey had purposely refrained from learning the ropes. He wished no intercourse with the criminal element of New York. He was playing a lone hand, and did not wish to be forced to divide. And here, leering at him, was Abe Gelstein, one of the foremost receivers of stolen property that San Francisco had ever produced. Gelstein! Who could, by a word, put Benny Halsey in jail; not merely for the ten thousand dollars that Halsey had avoided paying him, but for half a dozen other offenses. For the first time in his life Halsey felt regret for his career. He did not regret that he was a crook; he regretted that he had been crooked with crooks.

And he didn't have ten thousand dollars with which to placate Abe Gelstein! That was the terrible weakness of his position!

He knew the man. He was a man who never forgot an enmity. Without the slightest hesitation he would expose Benny Halsey, send him to jail. . . . That weak heart began to throb and pound in his breast. Jail life would kill him out of hand. . . . This very afternoon he had had tea with Allayne Guernsey, had exercised upon her all that charm that wide experience and travel had given to him. More definitely than when, a few days ago, he had smiled reassuringly at Rosa, he began to see certain tremendous possibilities. The girl had been tremendously interested in him today. This evening she was to be one of the occupants of a box at the opera to which he had also been invited. She was distrustful of men: the very time when she could be most easily captured. The shyest animal is always the most curious; therefore the crafty hunter nets him most easily.

Big visions had flitted before him. Not to be a fugitive from justice—even though a wealthy one—but to be the lord and master of a woman who was mistress of five millions. . . . To surrender these visions for lack of a paltry ten thousand. . . . He took Abe Gelstein into his confidence.

"I haven't your ten thousand," he finished. "I've been spending up to the limit, trying to set myself right. Well, I am right. If you'll let me alone——"

Gelstein looked at him with keen admiration, tinged with the faintest incredulity.

"And you honestly think you can marry her?" he demanded.

"That's what I've been telling you," said Halsey.

"And I get a hundred thousand if you do?"

"That's my word," said Halsey.

"Let's put it in writing," suggested Gelstein.

There was nothing for Halsey to do but acquiesce. In Gelstein's room in a Broadway hotel the agreement was drawn up and signatures affixed to it.

"Of course," said Gelstein, his voice holding an iron hint, "we both know that his document ain't legal. But if you should try to welsh on me——"

"I won't," Halsey promptly vowed. "You let me alone, don't queer my game, and you'll sleep under a blanket of century notes."

Gelstein nodded, unconvinced. But he was taking a long chance of recovery of what was due him. To cause Halsey's arrest meant surrender of hope of that recovery. He'd waited years; he could wait weeks. But he was a curious, prying person.

"How about Rosa?" he asked.

Halsey lied hastily. "Oh, Rosa? Oh, Rosa shook me years ago for a Frenchman. Living in Paris, I understand." He did not wish Gelstein to meet Rosa, to drop some incautious word that would arouse her suspicion, her wrath.

"That so? Nice gal," commented Gelstein. "Funny. I'd have thought she was the kind to stick. Oh, well, they're all alike. You're lucky not having her around on a deal like this. She might raise trouble."

Had Gelstein dropped dead as he pocketed Halsey's agreement, the latter would have borne the blow with cheerful stoicism. He was a crook who liked to play his cards in his own way. Having his hand forced was most distasteful to him.

Still, walking away from Gelstein's hotel, his philosophy came to his rescue. Gelstein might have had him jailed at once, or, at least, have forced him to flee the city. As it was, he had a limited time. . . .

He played his game very carefully. Provided that he came home some time during the night, and squandered a few caresses on her, and gave her a reasonable amount of money, Rosa had no quarrel with him. His time was practically his own. She understood that she could not understand his various schemes, therefore she asked no enlightenment.

She was a woman with one ambition: she wanted to retire with Halsey to a farm. She had heard the reports of the specialists who had examined Halsey, and lived in continual fear. She had, however, his promise that once he had acquired a "stake" he would quit his present mode of living. She believed him. She spent hours each day in poring over farm catalogues, in planning the design of their future home. In short, she dreamed exactly as women of a higher social and ethical station are sometimes wont to dream.

Halsey had planned to go slow. But Gelstein would not wait forever, and so he hurried his courting. Circumstances conspired in his favor, not merely the circumstances which he had arranged, and that had resulted in Bourke's receiving his congé. But Allayne's lawyer, the thin-lipped man who had drawn the Guernsey will, who had been with Harley B. in the last hour of his life, was ill. He who was in the habit of dropping around frequently, to drink a cup of tea with Allayne, did not do so nowadays. Shrewdly he was accustomed to draw her out, to find out who were her intimates, to give her advice sorely needed by any young heiress to millions, and especially so by such a girl as Allayne Guernsey.

She was heartsore, disappointed, just out of love. . . . It took Halsey exactly six weeks to win her consent to marry him. It took him four days to persuade her that a quiet wedding, unknown to their friends, was advisable. He showed her a cablegram announcing the death of an English cousin.

"Lord knows, dear girl, I won't pretend to you—I couldn't pretend to you, Allayne, no matter how much I wanted to—amazing the influence a girl like you can have upon a man like myself—uplifts—inspires—I won't say that Balchergaff and I were chummy. But he was my cousin, dear girl, and that sort of thing—family—tradition—it means a great deal to us English, you know. Well, it wouldn't be quite the thing for me, under the circumstances, to have anything but a private wedding. Oh, extremely private.

"Of course, we could postpone it, but—I simply must run over to England within a fortnight. Have to attend the settlement of old Balchergaff's affairs, you know. May be kept there a year—wills, chancery, all that sort of nuisance. Have to do it, though. So I was thinking, dear girl, that if we were quietly married, slipped away for a honeymoon of a week or so, and then sailed for dear old England—what a pleasure it will be to show you the Old World. London, the Cathedral towns, Paris, the Riviera——"

The Great War had broken out in 1914, just as Mrs. Guernsey had completed plans for a tour of Europe with Allayne. In the seven years that had elapsed Allayne had thought hundreds of times of the day when she would visit Europe. Halsey's glowing plans, so carelessly uttered, awakened a response in her. To see Europe in company with this charming, distinguished Englishman sought after by all of New York that counted . . . Having decided to accept Halsey, he became colored with that glamorous romance with which lovers are invested.

If deep down in her heart she was regretful of young Spenser Bourke, the iron pride that she had inherited from her mother made her refuse to recognize regret. If her quick acceptance of Halsey was due in part to her sudden severing of her engagement to Bourke, if she even subconsciously wanted to show Bourke how little she cared, she was not aware of it. She agreed to marry Halsey as he wished.

Gelstein had become the least bit restive. He wanted action. But when Halsey showed him the license, and told him where the ceremony was to occur, the Gelstein suspicions evaporated. He even insisted on sharing a pint of champagne, procured from some illicit source, with Halsey shortly before the ceremony. Thus started, Gelstein found it difficult to stop. The share of the pint was followed by a quart. His heart was mellow and his tongue was loose when he ran across, about the time that Allayne Guernsey was becoming Mrs. Bennett Halsey, Rosa.

Gelstein had not seen the woman for five years, but no one who had ever seen her lithe figure, slim, catlike, surmounted by the sullenly beautiful face, could ever forget her. It was on Broadway, near Times Square, and she was hurrying, apparently for a Subway entrance. Gelstein interposed his formidable bulk squarely in her path.

"If it ain't Rosa," he exclaimed cordially.

The woman started. For a moment it seemed as though she meditated flight. Gelstein read her mind. He waved his hand.

"It's all right, Rosa," he said, "me and Benny fixed up that money matter."

The color came back into her cheeks. She had been cognizant of the affair between Halsey and Gelstein. She could not be involved in it, nevertheless it was unpleasant facing Gelstein if he happened to be in a bad humor.

"I'm glad of that," she said cordially. It was true; she much preferred peace to war, honesty to dishonesty. "Benny never told me about it."

Gelstein waved a chubby hand; his huge diamond ring glinted in the sunlight.

"Oh, it's been since you quit Benny that we fixed it up," he said.

"Oh," said Rosa. Her jaw dropped slightly, so slightly that Gelstein did not notice the expression.

"Come in—have a cup of tea," invited Gelstein.

Rosa followed him into the corner hotel. She permitted her host to order tea for her, the while her sharp mind pondered on the meaning of what he had said.

"When'd you leave Paris?" asked Gelstein, as the waiter went off to fulfill the order.

"Oh—a while back," said Rosa vaguely.

"You and Benny, he tells me, didn't hit it off very well," said Gelstein.

Rosa shrugged. Also, her glance was coy. Beneath it Gelstein felt his pulses beat a trifle faster.

"Kind of fun showing you the town, Rosa," he suggested.

"I've heard worse propositions," she admitted. "How is old Benny?" she asked. If Benny Halsey was telling old acquaintances that he was through with her, she wanted to know why.

Gelstein chuckled. "He's the same old live one," he said. "Can you imagine him bein' married?"

"What?" Only by an effort did she refrain from screaming the question.

Now, even liquor could not ordinarily make Gelstein incautious. But Rosa was, he thought, a very beautiful woman. Also, she was unattached. But in the past she had been devoted to Benny Halsey. Might not there still lurk within her breast some spark of attachment to Halsey? If so, it would interfere with his own sudden desire for her. So he forgot to be cautious.

"Sure. Today," he asserted.

"You're crazy," she sneered.

"All right, then I'm crazy," said Gelstein. "Only, I left him half an hour, and he was on his way to the minister's then, with a ring and a license and everything, and tickets on the Montreal Express—you can get a drink up there without risking jail, you know. Oh, he's married, all right."

"Who's the woman?" demanded Rosa.

Gelstein looked up. Something that he saw in her eyes frightened him. He pushed back his chair.

"Say, look here, Rosa, what's eating you? What difference does it make to you whether Benny Halsey gets hitched or not?"

"Answer me," she said.

Gelstein was afraid of no man who walked. Women were different. Sometimes they cried and ran away, and sometimes they cried and ran right over you. Rosa's hand was resting on the teapot. She might, as he phrased it to himself, "crown" him with it.

"Gal named Guernsey," he said sullenly. "Got a load of jack. What difference does it make to you, anyway?"

But Rosa didn't hear his question. Before Gelstein could interpose his fat bulk she had passed by his chair and was on the way from the restaurant.

So! Benny Halsey was double crossing her, going off with another woman. This was why he was going away on a business trip. . . . Her brain seethed as she crossed the sidewalk and stepped into a taxi. But when wrath assailed her most strongly her brain was most clear. She did not know from which station the Montreal Express departed. She knew little of New York. But she did know that there was a ticket office, the Consolidated, on Forty-second street. Rather than waste time going from one station to the other, or by braving the telephone service, she drove to the ticket office. There she learned that the Montreal Express left the Grand Central in ten minutes.

A traffic block at Fifth avenue delayed her. She reached the train gate just as Halsey and his bride were passing through. Halsey turned. Allayne did likewise. She saw the flaming eyes of the woman who seized Halsey's arm, shrank from them as though they were the fire that they seemed. Incoherent, stumbling, Rosa could not make herself clear. Allayne heard the words—"No right to marry—mine—belongs to me."

Then Halsey's arm broke loose from the woman's. Rosa fell back into the crowd about the train gates, and the bride heard her husband's cool voice say:

"Better remove her, officer. Insane, I take it. Never saw her in my life before."

Then, dazed, shamed by the scene, Allayne stumbled along the platform to the train. They had arrived at the last minute. Before they were settled in their drawing room the wheels beneath them had begun to move and they were gliding toward the tunnel.

"Sorry, dear girl," said Halsey. "Most embarrassing situation I ever encountered in my life. Demented woman annoying us that way! An outrage, an outrage."

Allayne stared at him. She had not the slightest doubt of Halsey. But her forehead puckered slightly.

"I wonder," she said, "how she happened to know your name?"

"She didn't," he said.

Allayne frowned again. "I distinctly heard her cry 'Benny,'" she said. "I remember it now."

Halsey frowned now in apparent bewilderment.

"That makes it more amazing," he declared. "I declare, the woman is a menace," he cried.

Allayne, shaken, sank down upon one of the seats. Halsey knelt beside her; his arms went around her lissome waist. He drew her close to him. She interposed her hands before his eager lips. One remembers, after the event, things that one did not know one saw while the event occurred.

"I thought," she said slowly, "that you recognized her when she screamed."

Halsey laughed. "How could I recognize her when I never saw her in my life before?"

Allayne's laugh joined his, only hers was shaken, uncertain. Doubt did not shake it, make it uncertain. She was unnerved, unstrung, but still no suspicion of Halsey clouded her heart. But Halsey, himself dishonest and therefore always suspicious, read into her natural reaction following so violent, even though brief, a scene, the thing that was always uppermost in his own heart, suspicion.

"Don't you believe me?" he demanded harshly.

Allayne stared at him. Of course she believed him; was he not her lawfully wedded husband? But even as she was assuring herself that she did believe him, doubt, the doubt created by Halsey's own insistence,

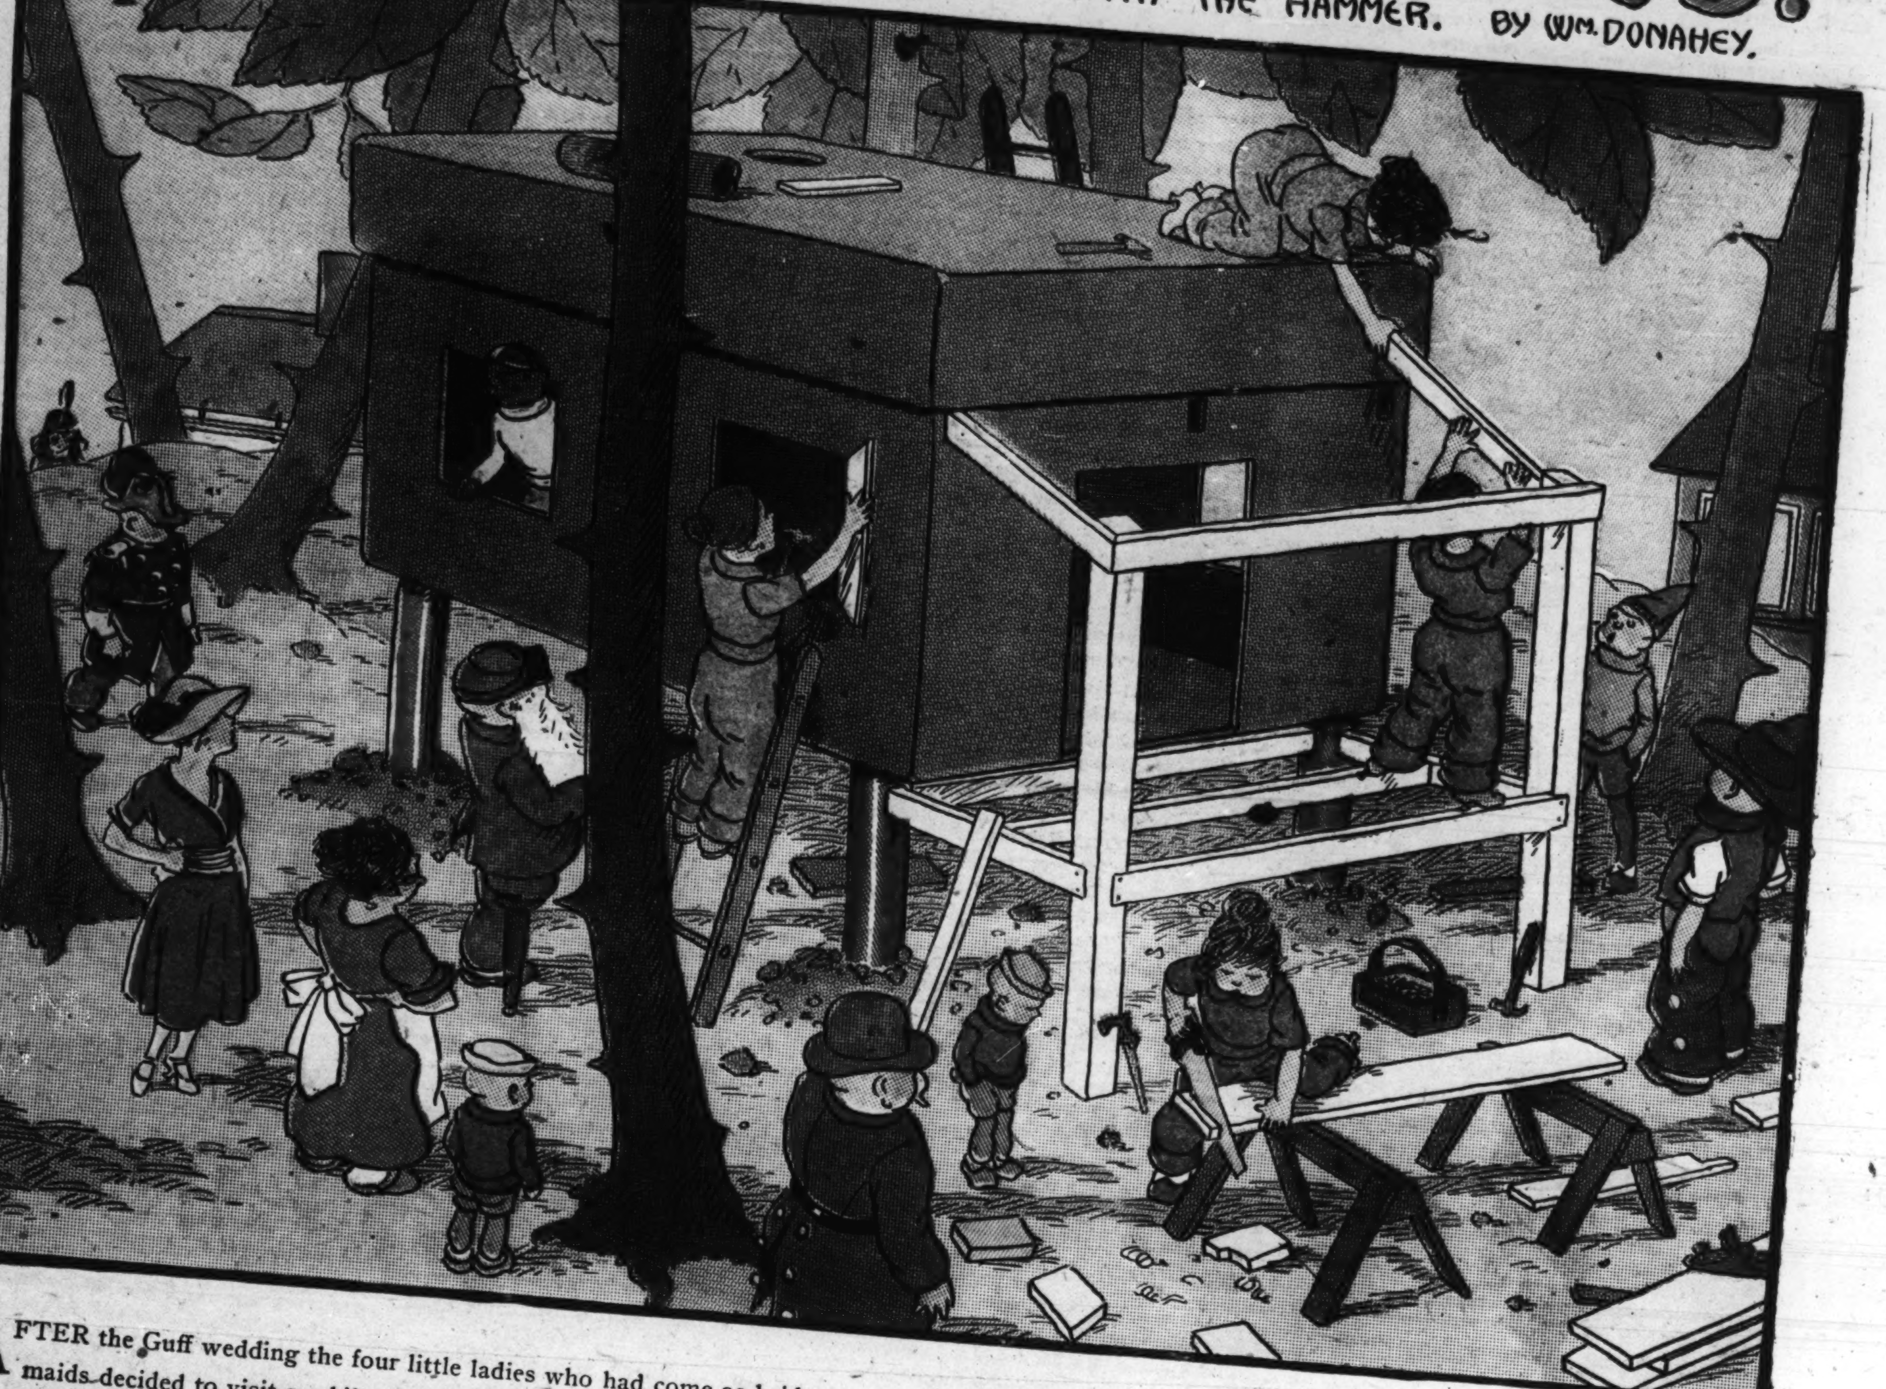
THE TEENIE WEENIES.

FOUR TEENIE WEENIE LADIES PROVE TO BE HANDY WITH THE HAMMER. BY WM. DONAHEY.



AFTER the Guff wedding the four little ladies who had come as bridesmaids decided to visit a while at the shoe house.

They were made most welcome under the rose bush, for they were all charming little ladies and the Teenie Weenies enjoyed their company.

Three of the girls were sisters of Buddy Guff. Miss Guff was the oldest of the three, and she kept a watchful eye on her two younger sisters.

She was quite tall, very prim, and in spite of her appearance and short, bluff way of talking, she was a most lovable person.

Patricia Guff, the next sister, was quite plump, full of fun, and popular with all the Teenie Weenies, who called her Pat for short.

Sally Guff was the youngest and most romantic Teenie Weenie that ever came under the rose bush.

Josephine Bone was Tess's sister and much like her in appearance and nature.

"I wish we could live here under the rose bush," said Miss Guff one morning as the little folks were seated around the breakfast table. "It's such a lovely place."

"Why don't you make your home here?" answered the General, with a bow of his bald little head. "We'd love to have you."

"Couldn't think of it unless we could build our own house," said Miss Guff. "You are already crowded in the old shoe for room."

"We would be mighty glad to put up a house for you," smiled the General.

"How lovely," cried Sally Guff.

"Sarah!" exclaimed Miss Guff, frowning at her sister. "Please show a little more independence."

"General," continued Miss Guff, "we would be glad to stay and make this place our home, providing we can build our own house. I believe in everybody doing his or her share, and I can inform you that I am rather handy with a hammer. My sisters will help and we can soon build a neat little house for our abode."

The General readily consented to Miss Guff's plans, and after the little ladies had made themselves each a set of overalls they set to work.

Jo Bone was included in the partnership, and after much looking for material a paper box was chosen to be made into their home.

The little ladies found the box a short distance from the rose bush, and after a great deal of work it was finally moved to a spot near the hospital and quite close to the shoe house.

For many days there was much hammering, sawing, and scraping around the box. The Old Soldier gave a great deal of valuable advice, and there was sure to be a Teenie Weenie man or two about whenever a heavy object was to be moved.

"I'd advise something heavier than a paperbox for a home," said the Old Soldier. "A strong wind might carry it away."

"It will be quite safe," answered Miss Guff.

"Well, I wouldn't set it up so high from the ground," suggested the Old Soldier, "for it makes it much easier for the wind to carry it away."

"It's set up on these lead pencil posts to keep ants and bugs away," answered Miss Guff. "I'd rather be blown away by the wind than to have ants come prowling around the place."

A tiny porch was built on to the front of the box, windows and a door were cut, and when the box had had a coat of waterproof paint it was as cozy as could be desired.

Paddy Pinn built the little ladies a tiny stove out of a salve box, and with a few pieces of furniture which could be spared from the shoe house the three girls soon settled down to housekeeping.

Boxhal was the name the little ladies gave their home. "And every one will be welcome," said Miss Guff, "when they're invited."

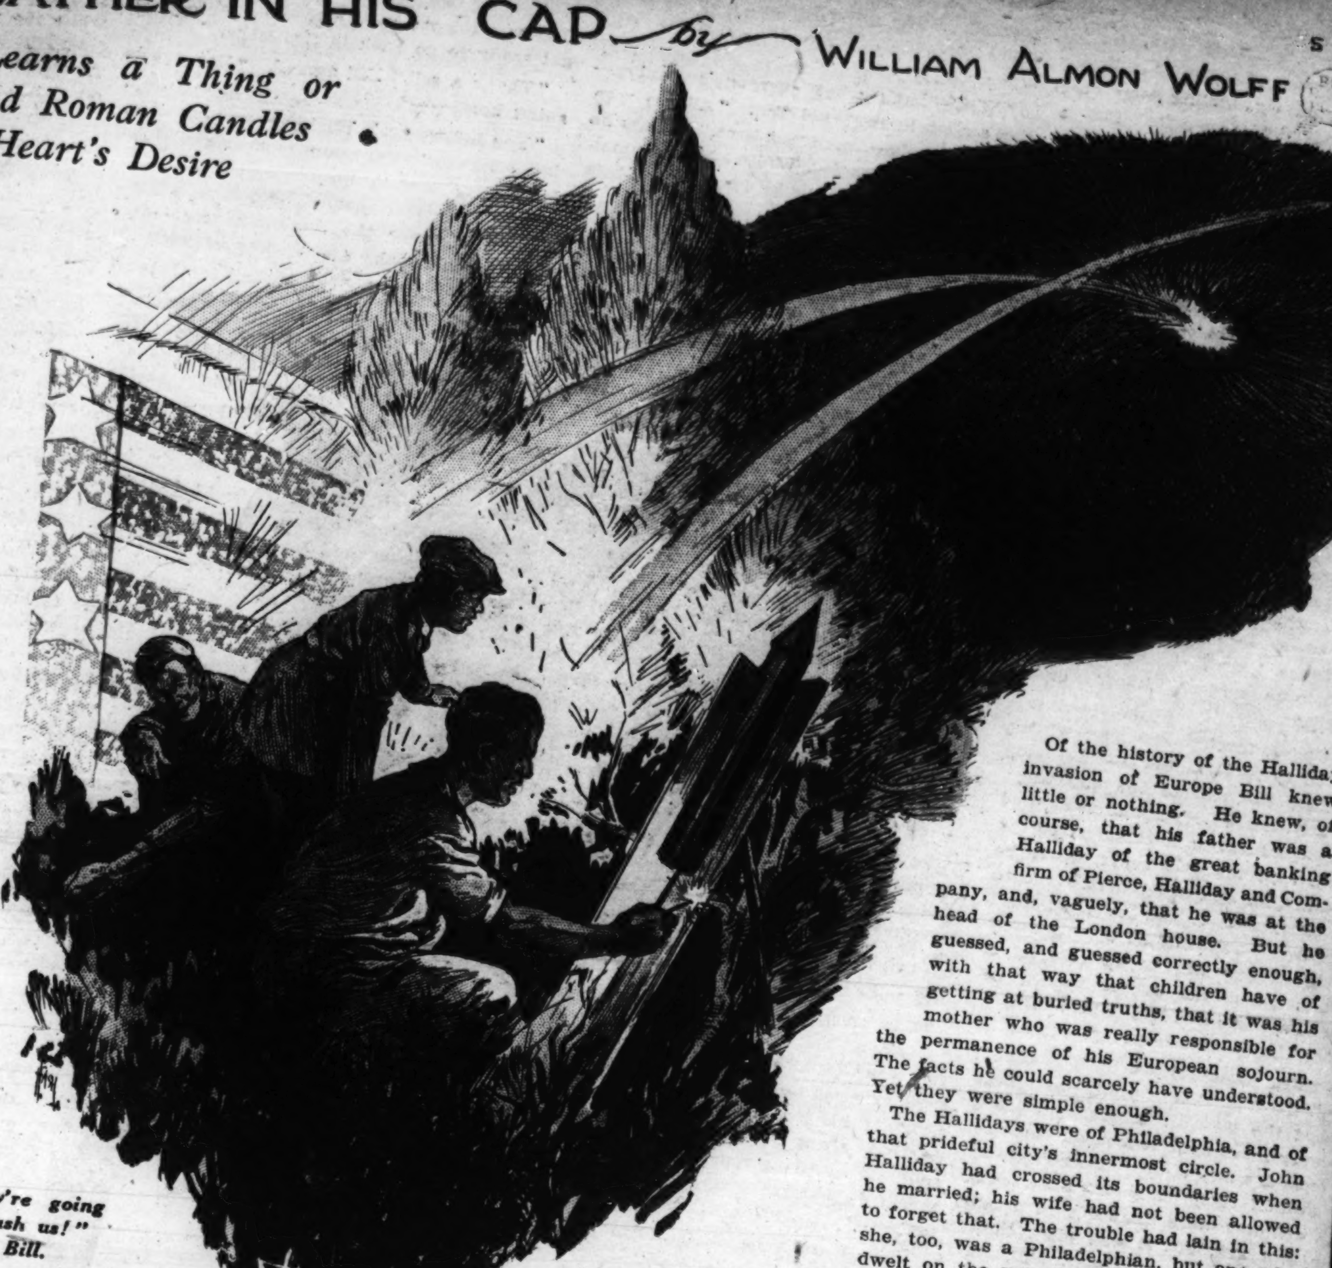
STUCK A FEATHER IN HIS CAP

By WILLIAM ALMON WOLFF

Bill Halliday, Exile, Learns a Thing or Two About Rockets and Roman Candles and Achieves His Heart's Desire



"They're going to rush us!" said Bill.

BILL HALLIDAY sat straight up in bed as the door opened. He stared at his father, who, blinking a little, came in. Mr. Halliday was in evening dress; he seemed to be vastly surprised. So was Bill; he hadn't supposed that his mother and father would be back from the theater for another hour. They must have seen the light in his window, he reflected, bitterly; that was what had betrayed him. That he had forgotten to lock his door didn't matter.

"Bad for your eyes, reading in bed," said Mr. Halliday. "Your mother tells me she's spoken to you about it before."

He came over and sat down beside Bill. He wasn't angry; he didn't speak harshly. It surprised Bill a good deal that it should be his father, rather than his mother, who had come to deal with him. He saw very little of his father, and didn't know him well; that man of great affairs had little time for his son.

"What's this?" said Mr. Halliday. He picked up the paper covered book Bill had been reading. "Hello!" he said, and stared down at the boy, more surprised than ever. "Spalding's Football Guide?" Swift suspicion came into his eyes. "Got another book under the covers? Nick Carter—or——?" His memory failed.

"No, sir!" said Bill. "I—I was just reading about the teams at home, Father! Yale had a great team last year! That Coy—he kicked two goals against Harvard! Did you know that? Eight points, that was. They don't count the same way in America that we—I mean—that they do here, do they?"

"I believe not," said Mr. Halliday. "It's a different sort of game, Bill."

"It must be. There aren't but eleven on a team, instead of fifteen—like soccer, that is. Soccer's a muff game, though. It's more like rugger, isn't it, Father—at home, I mean?"

"Yes. You'd better get to sleep now, though, Bill." He picked up the book; stood, looking uncertainly down at his son.

"Father—let me keep that book, please? I won't read any more to-night, if you will—I promise. But it's not mine——"

Mr. Halliday dropped the book at once.

"Where did you get it, Bill?"

"Ted Little lent it to me."

"Who's he?"

"He was a new boy last term. He's from Chicago, Father. He's going home next summer. He's going to Princeton. Father——"

"Well?"

"When are we going home? We've been over here an awful long time, haven't we?"

"Why—I don't know, Bill," Mr. Halliday said, slowly. "You've been here most of your life, haven't you? I have a good deal to do here. And your mother isn't so well in America. We may stay here."

"Always?" Bill had to fight to keep from choking. "Father—I want to go home. I want to go to Princeton. And Ted says—he says I ought to go to Lawrenceville or some school like that for a year, anyway, first."

"We'll have to see, boy," said Mr. Halliday, slowly. "Your mother thinks you can get a better education here. She's talked to me about sending you to Oxford. A good many of the boys at school are going there, aren't they?"

"But they're English, Father. And I'm American."

"Well, we'll have to see," said Mr. Halliday, again. "We've settled down here, you see, Bill. And it's where we came from, in the beginning. There have always been Hallidays near Swaythling, ever since the time of William the Conqueror."

"I don't care!" said Bill. "And—I don't believe you do, either, Father! Weren't there Hallidays in Washington's army, too? Weren't there, Father?"

"You bet!" said Mr. Halliday, before he thought. "It's pretty late, Bill. Your mother'll be looking for me if I don't put out your light. Good night, boy. We'll talk about these things some other time."

"Good night, Father," said Bill. And when he was alone, in the dark, he sighed. He wished he could talk to his father—really talk to him. The way Ted Little did to his. He had lunched with Ted and Mr. Little one day, and gone to a cinema afterward. And Mr. Little had talked about baseball and things Bill hadn't been able to understand at all, until, later, Ted had explained. About Giants, and Cubs, and White Sox and Tigers.

It was a long time before Bill slept that night, even though the light was out, and he kept his word about reading any more. He wanted to go home. He had wanted that for a long time, but lately, since Ted Little and Jim Murray, who lived in New York and disputed violently with Ted, because he was going to Yale, had come to school it had been worse.

Ted Little, who had never played cricket in his life, had been on the first eleven, and every one expected him to be on the first fifteen, too, next term. Bill hoped to get his cap, too; he had been three quarter on the second fifteen a year earlier. Ted had amazed every one with his bowling. He could make a ball curve in the air before it struck the ground; no other bowler Bill had ever seen, even the great county players, whose pictures were in the Graphic and the Illustrated London News every week, could do more than make it break afterward. It was all in the way you placed your fingers against the ball; Ted had shown him, and explained that in baseball the pitcher could make the ball do what he pleased.

He was homesick—as desperately homesick as only a boy who cannot so much as remember home can be. They had brought him over when he was very small. Such memories as he had of home were vague, fragmentary. Trains, running on a high platform; a tall tower, in the centre of a city, with the huge statue of a man in a broad brimmed hat on top of it; a beach, where he had played with other children; policemen in yellow helmets and long coats. . . .

He had pieced out his memories with scraps and bits of pictures out of books that he had read almost surreptitiously. His mother had not approved of American stories. But he had spent long hours in his father's library. There was dull reading on those shelves for a boy, you might have thought. But Bill would have challenged you fiercely on that score. He knew John Fiske's "American Revolution" almost by heart before he was twelve; Hay's great life of Lincoln was like the Bible to him. And he had found, and lost, and found again the most precious of all his books—"The Story of a Bad Boy," by Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

It was in the pages of that book that the America he had never known had lived for him. Through Aldrich's eyes he saw long winters of snowy roads and fields, and frozen ponds, as unlike as they could be to the open English country of the midlands where his school was; glowing autumns, when the woods and hills were painted in a thousand colors; days and nights of mischievous delight.

His mother, when he asked her, innocently, about this and that, was appalled; she had taken the book from him, condemning it to be burnt. Its very title was anathema to her; a glance at its pages confirmed her fear that it shrieked with the blatant crudity of the America that she had put behind her. But he saved it, and had gained, through its peril, the knowledge that his secret hopes and longings must be forever hidden from the mother, lovely, remote, he worshiped.

His life had been odd, confused. There had been a time of wandering about in France, Germany, Italy; a time when he had seen much of nurse and governess and little of his mother. He could remember her, radiant and shining, dressed for theatre or opera, stopping in to bend over his bed for a moment. Sometimes, on rare mornings, he had been allowed to go into her room before he was dressed. Then school; an English public school. He had taken his knocks as a youngster; fought his way up through the lower school, till now he was in the Fifth and reasonably sure of landing in the sacred precincts of the Sixth next term, with the prospect of being a prefect, perhaps, before so very long.

And to the long wanderings on the continent, when he had moved back and forth across Europe, seeing Paris, Dresden, Vienna, Munich, Rome, Naples, Venice there had succeeded the ordered and settled life in England. School always, in the foreground; the house near Swaythling, in the lovely Hampshire country, which he really liked; the smart little town house near Hyde Park. He was happy enough; he had everything a boy could be supposed to want, Heaven knows!

But he had never quite stopped wanting to go home. It had been a great day when he had discovered that the docks of Southampton were open to a boy who rode in on the tram from Swaythling. He used to spend hours there, after that discovery, watching the great steamers come and go. And it hurt him whenever he saw a liner bound for home. He envied the careless people who lined her rails so much that he hated them.

Of the history of the Halliday invasion of Europe Bill knew little or nothing. He knew, of course, that his father was a Halliday of the great banking firm of Pierce, Halliday and Company, and, vaguely, that he was at the head of the London house. But he guessed, and guessed correctly enough, with that way that children have of getting at buried truths, that it was his mother who was really responsible for the permanence of his European sojourn. The facts he could scarcely have understood. Yet they were simple enough.

The Hallidays were of Philadelphia, and of that prideful city's innermost circle. John Halliday had crossed its boundaries when he married; his wife had not been allowed to forget that. The trouble had lain in this: she, too, was a Philadelphian, but one who dwelt on the wrong side of Market street. She had expected her marriage to ennoble her. Her disappointment had angered and embittered her. Originally there had been a project, suggested first by her husband, perhaps, of a year or so abroad, with the vague prospect of a triumphant return.

But Mrs. Halliday, a shrewd woman, had not been long in making up her mind to change that plan. In England her husband's wealth, his importance in the financial world, had opened all doors to her; her own beauty and charm had helped her, too. She found that English people were simply amused by the idea of class lines among Americans; one American, to them, was much like another, so far as such things went. If they had money, if they were amusing, they were welcome.

Her eyes were set upon certain precedents. Americans like her husband had stayed in England before; had become, in effect, Englishmen. She could contemplate a future in which she should be Lady Halliday. Her real hopes and ambitions she never confided to her husband. But she saw, with a quiet satisfaction, the way the sane English life appealed to him; the way he sank, insensibly, into its comfort. She could manage John when the time came; she was sure of that.

Of all this Bill had no inkling. But after that night when his father surprised him Bill was afraid, as he had not been before. Always, until then, he had regarded his exile as temporary; he had been sure that, sooner or later, they would go home. Now, for the first time, he had to face the possibility of staying away always—or, at least, until he should be old enough to shape his course for himself. And he was at an age when a few years loom up like as many decades.

During the autumn term he had small time for worry. He was in the Sixth, with Ted Little and Jim Murray. Bounds were relaxed; the three of them could go into Bedford, now, when they were free from schoolroom or from compulsory games. There was football, too, to keep them busy. Ted Little's play was a revelation to Bill—to the whole school indeed. With the fiercer, closer American game behind him—and already, at home, college scouts had had their eyes on Ted against the day when he should matriculate—the old Rugby game was a holiday for him. He ran with a fierceness unknown to the school backs, shaking off tacklers one after another, and he followed the ball like a hawk.

Bill really proclaimed himself an American that term, for the first time. The school was surprised, and inclined to be offended. It took Little and Murray calmly enough. They were real Americans; you couldn't mistake them. Ted talked through his nose,

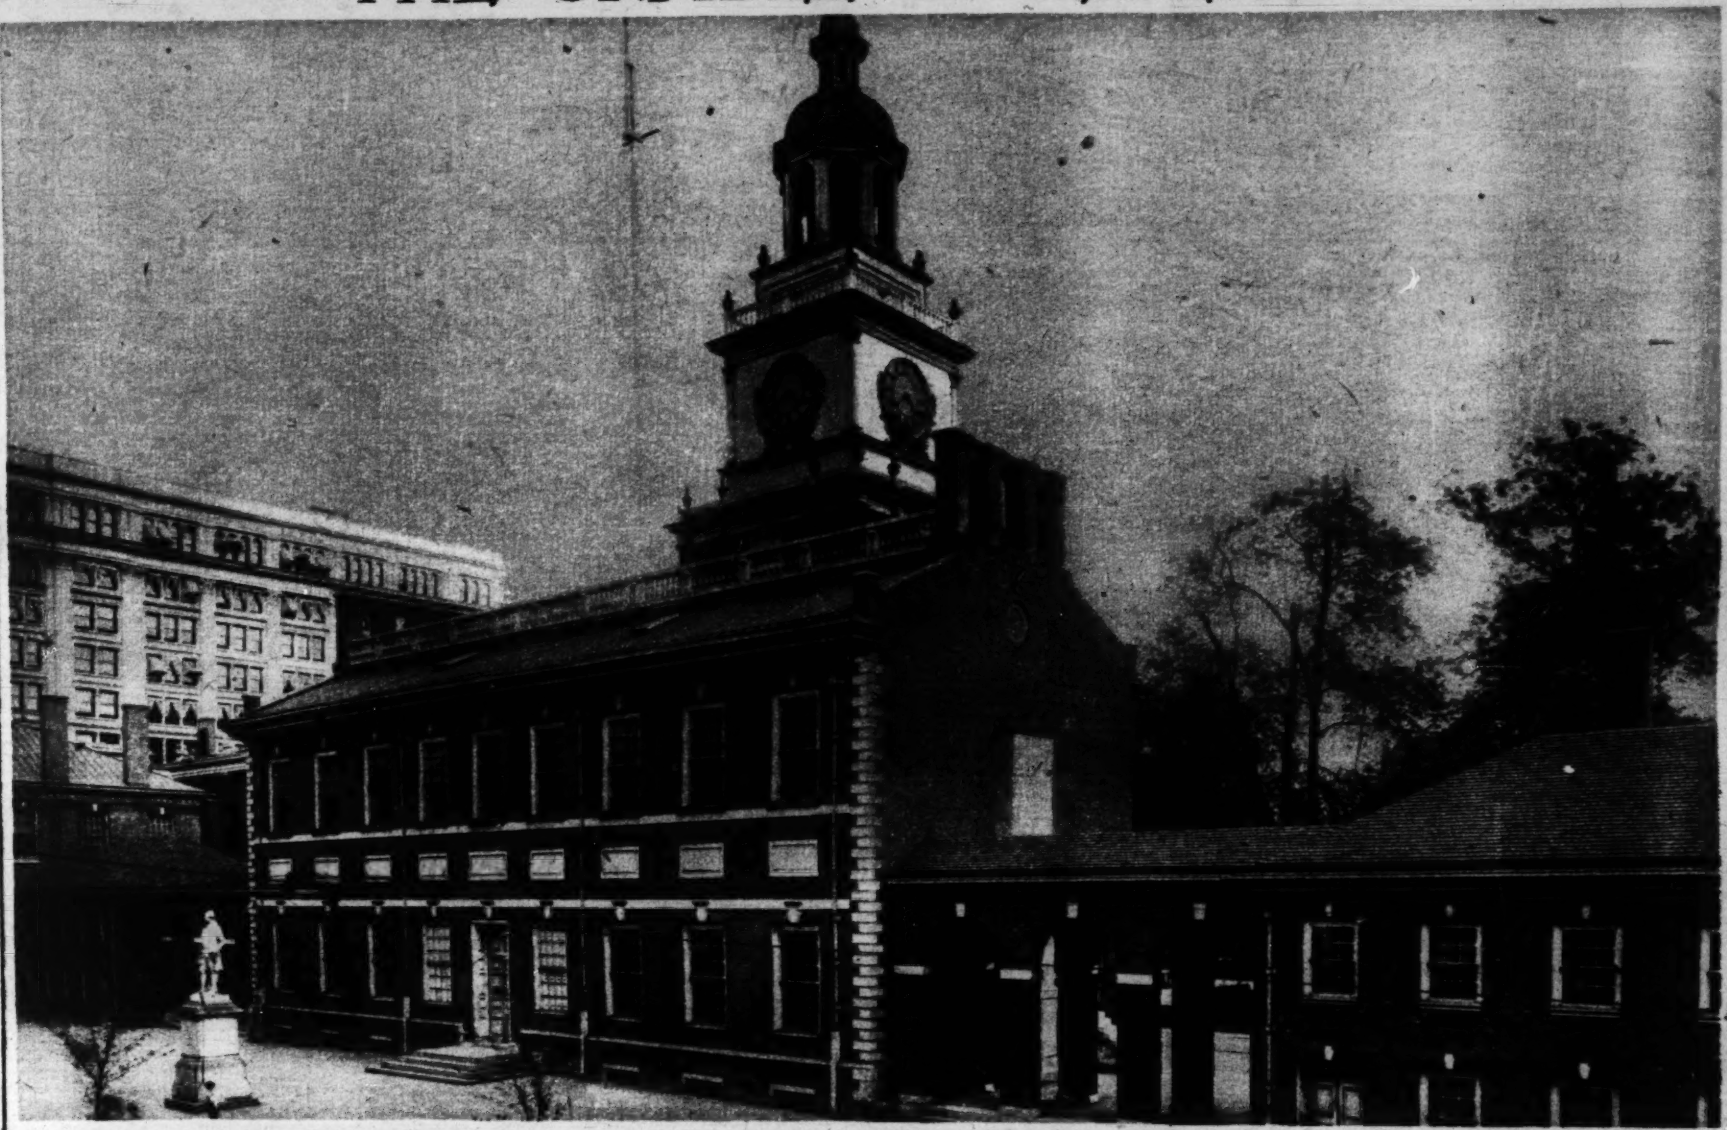
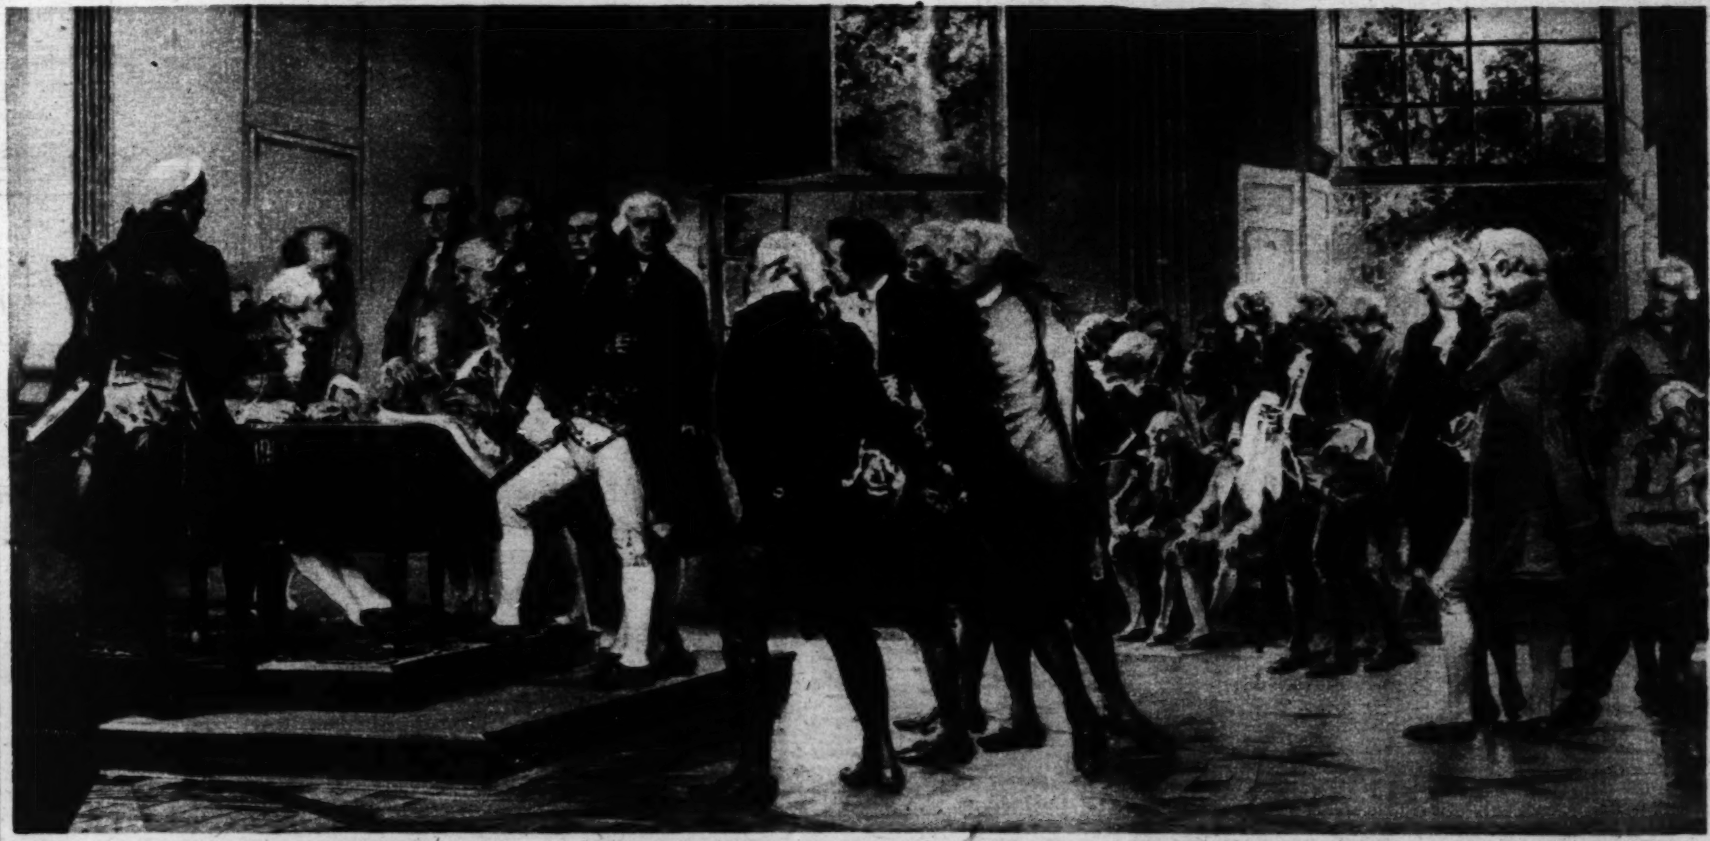
THE CRADLE OF LIBERTY



INDEPENDENCE HALL, where Uncle Sam was born 145 years ago tomorrow, stands four square and defiant in historic Chestnut street, Philadelphia, while modern buildings grow up around it. Erection of the old brick building was begun in 1732 and completed in 1747 to house the Continental Congress. It was here that Washington was appointed commander-in-chief of the Continental armies; here that the stormy debates prior to withdrawal from England's rule took place; here that the Declaration of Independence was passed and announced to the world by the Liberty Bell in the old clock tower. The bell was removed from its tower, but in all other respects Independence Hall stands as it did on July 4, 1776.



ON THE DOTTED LINE: FOR FREEDOM—Stirring scenes were enacted in the heat of June and July, 1776, but none of them compared in dramatic interest with the tense moment of July 4 when, one by one, the thirteen colonies ratified the Declaration of Independence and it won through the Continental Congress. Here is pictured that mighty event, reproduced from a painting which hangs in Independence Hall. The Declaration was read to the people from the old building's steps after it had been signed by the president and secretary. It was several weeks later that the document was signed by representatives from each colony.

REPELLING U. S. BOARDERS—Boston authorities had a lively battle with 1,200 Italian and Portuguese immigrants when they ordered them held at Deer Island pending interpretation of the new immigration restriction act. Friends waiting at the pier joined with the newcomers in attacking the guards when the landing bars went up. The picture shows some of the resentful aliens transferring from the S. S. Canopic to the Mayflower for their sojourn on the island. Note the contrasting emotions shown by their faces.

ADMIRAL SIMS AT CAMBRIDGE—A glimpse of the stately ceremony for which the American naval officer made his now famous trip to England. The picture shows the Prince of Wales and the admiral, in full naval uniform and wearing their robes as Doctors of Law, marching from the senate house after receiving honorary degrees.

TOP O' THE WORLD AND TIPPING—If seven Wrigley buildings could be placed on top of one another they would still lack something of reaching this eerie sentinel crag of the Sierra Nevada mountains. The photographer has climbed to the famous balanced rock of Half Dome to put a thrill into his picture. Five thousand feet beneath him is the floor of Yosemite valley.

A SEA-GOING TANK—This gun mount tractor refuses to let a little water interfere with its operation. It hauls a three-inch field piece through streams ten to twelve feet deep by use of a " periscope " which carries air to the submerged carburetor. The artillery officer seems convinced, but a bit timorous.

MAY McAVOY already has her picture in your albums, I am sure. Here's a new one—prettier than the last, I think.

Miss McAvoy, as you probably know, was born in New York in 1901 and educated there. Her screen career started with Goldwyn in "The Perfect Lady." She has played with various other companies since then and Realart now boasts her as their own. Mae Tinee.

THIS IS —— ? And whom does he resemble?

A while ago we showed you a picture of Priscilla Dean, asking you to guess her identity, and only two proved themselves regular Yankees. Now, try again! The man he is and the man he looks like are both famous film stars. Mae Tinee.

NORMA TALMADGE bought a new evening gown in London. It is a fish skin gown made of shaded blue and green fish scales. It is trimmed with sapphire tulle at the sides and the girdle is of jet and rhinestones woven into the robe. Lines of gold and jet beads stripe the tulle.

It would appear here that the lady had just risen from a siesta. All wrong, of course! This dress was not meant to rest in. Mae Tinee.

MARY MILES MINTER sailed on the S. S. Olympic June 4th for Europe. She will spend several months there resting and sight-seeing. She expects to return home full of pep for another year's hard work. Mae Tinee.

BABE RUTH'S FAME has been shadowed a bit by the penumbra of the Dempsey-Carpentier incident, but the populace should be free now to sit up and take a little further notice of the great slugger for the New York Yankees. Meanwhile, Babe has not been idle. Not content with keeping consistently ahead of his home run record for 1920, he has been setting some new marks for long distance hitting, one noble clout on the Polo grounds in New York having landed in the center field bleachers, a distance of 470 feet from the home plate. Another of his hitherto undreamed of feats, accomplished last month, was the poling out of seven home runs in five consecutive games.

DIRECTING TRAFFIC from the SKY

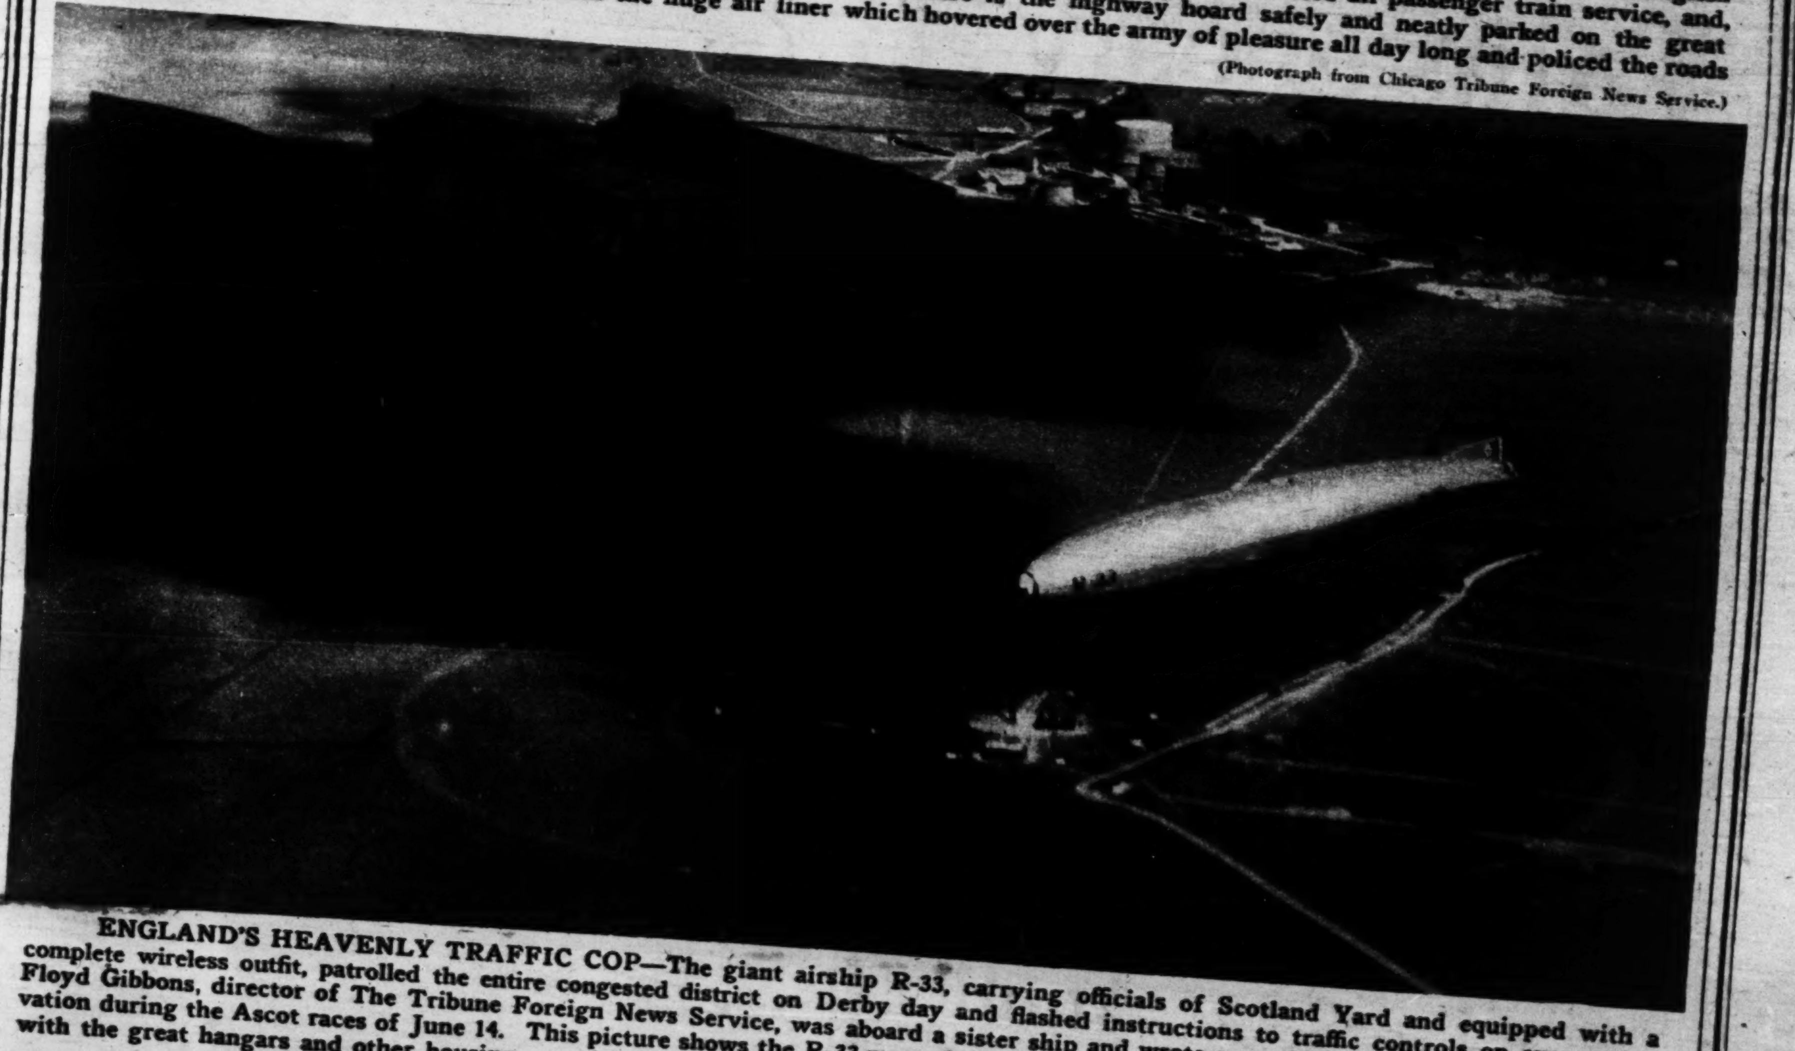
ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND VEHICLES filled every road leading from London to Epsom Downs and the annual English Derby on June 1. The colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady went by road because a coal embargo restricted all passenger train service, and, as a result, heroic methods were required to untangle traffic snarls. Here is the highway hoard safely and neatly parked on the great race grounds. The picture was taken from the huge air liner which hovered over the army of pleasure all day long and policed the roads via wireless.

(Photograph from Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)



ENGLAND'S HEAVENLY TRAFFIC COP—The giant airship R-33, carrying officials of Scotland Yard and equipped with a complete wireless outfit, patrolled the entire congested district on Derby day and flashed instructions to traffic controls on every road. Floyd Gibbons, director of The Tribune Foreign News Service, was aboard a sister ship and wrote a graphic story of the policing innovation during the Ascot races of June 14. This picture shows the R-33 moored to its steel mast at the Howden airdrome, its "home port," with the great hangars and other housing paraphernalia in the background.

GLEN VIEW GOLF CLUB from the AIR

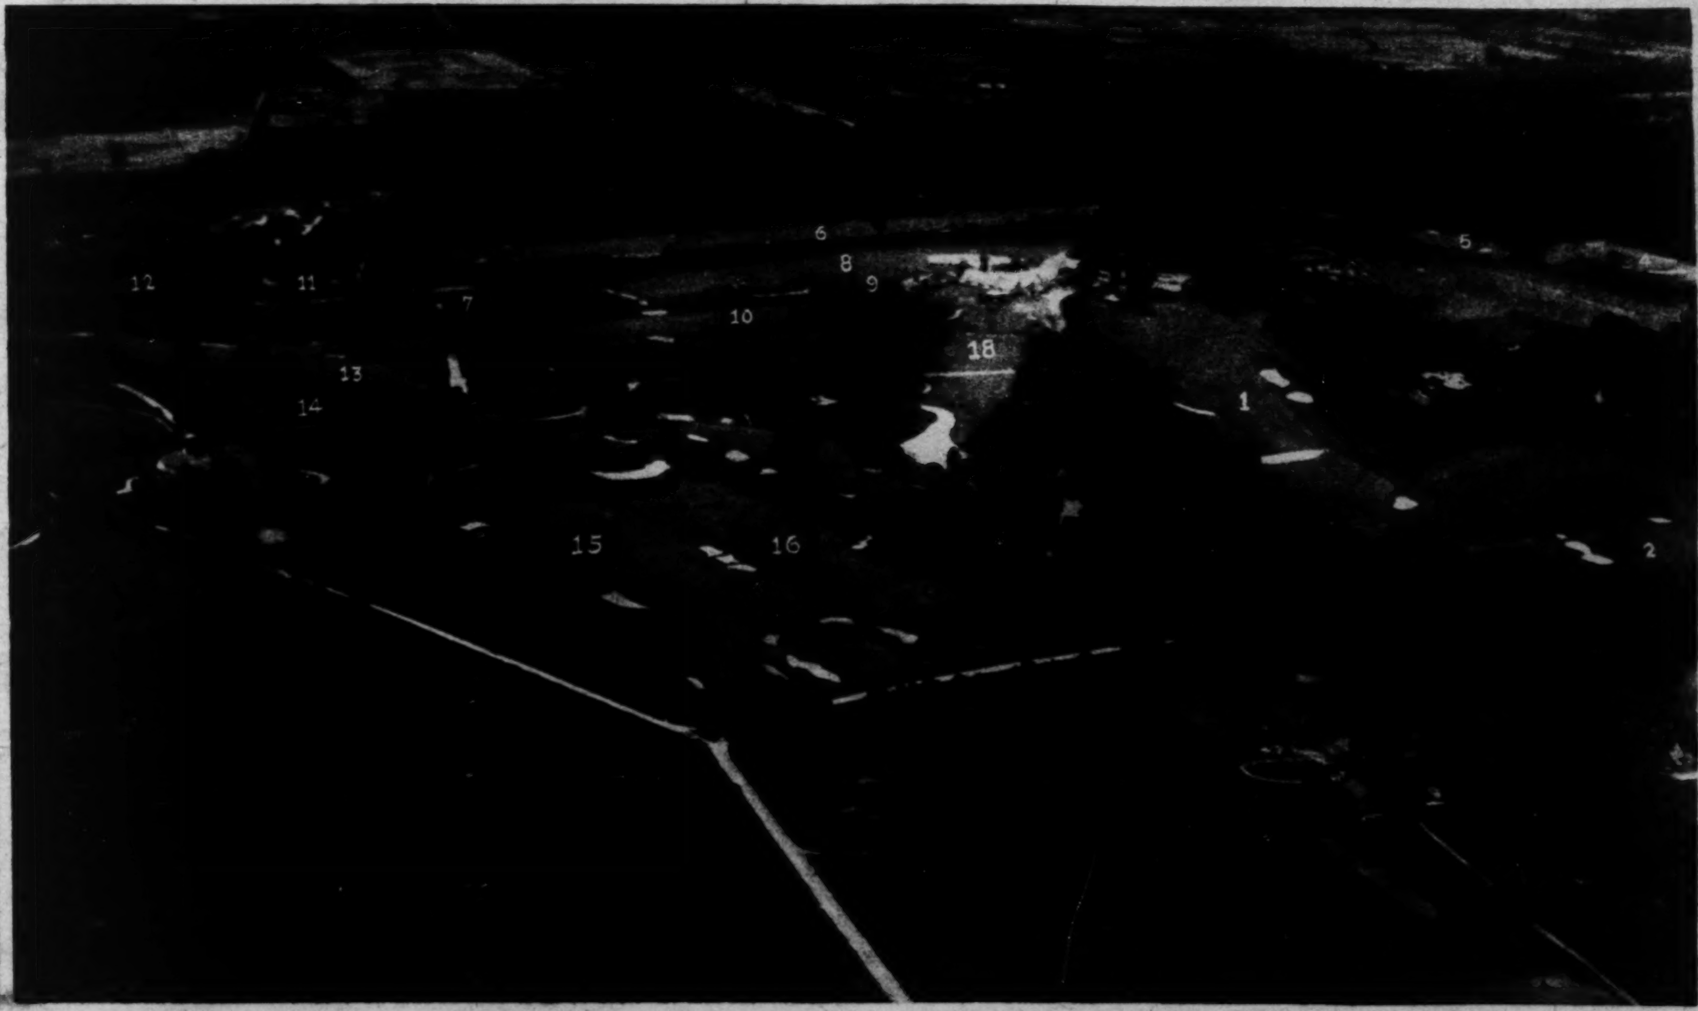
HERE IS A STRIKING "CLOSEUP," taken from the southeast, of the famous golf course which lies five miles west of Evanston. Near the center of the picture is the new clubhouse, built to replace the old one which was destroyed recently by fire, and through the background winds the north branch of the Chicago river, which the players must cross seven times in negotiating the last nine holes. The numbers indicate the fairways of the various holes that are visible. The open space in the right foreground is the old polo field, and the conspicuous white spots visible here and there are sand pits and bunkers.



A GENERAL VIEW OF THE COURSE, taken from the southwest, and showing, as the numbers on the photograph indicate, every hole except the third. The open spaces in the foreground, to the right and left, are farm lands. The Glen View club was organized and started playing in 1897, thus being one of the oldest organizations of its kind in the middle west.

HEIRS TO "SAHARA"—Crowding events of two years have so far dimmed public memory that few people recognized Mme. The Theaters

PROSPECTS of the coming season in the theaters are charged with dynamite, and there may be ructions. George M. Cohan has quit, or says he has, the Actors' Equity association is girding its loins and talking of producing its own shows, managers are wailing of "impossible conditions" and "ruinous salaries," and the amusement world is all het up and waiting to see what will happen next.

Says Variety, one of the trade journals which usually knows whereof it speaks: "Only level-headed leadership on both sides can avert a new mixup, more far-reaching in its disaster to those who earn livelihoods in the theater than the original scrimmage, from which the business hasn't yet recovered."

Whether other producers will follow Cohan's lead is problematical. As an independent, and not a member of the Producing Managers' association, Cohan gets no protection from an agreement which delays the closed shop crisis for association members until 1924. But some of the other managers are restive, agreement or no agreement.

"Cohan's move," says one, "is in no sense temperament, but cold, hard, common sense. He knows next season's forecast indicates a moneyless market. He knows that even in most prosperous times it is hard sledding sometimes to bring profit in from the road. He has shrewdly analyzed the conditions every producing manager will have to meet between the opening of next season and its end, and can see only struggle with losses sure. I am but one of several other managers in the producing managers' body who are narrowing our road interests. I know of a manager with three theaters who is considering the immediate surrender of his houses to a big picture corporation until conditions change. The producing managers as a body will not close up. But the curtailment of investments all along the producing managers' lines will be so radical that so far as excess players on the actor market is concerned the effect will be almost as bad."

In two quarters open declarations of war have been made. The American Federation of Labor has indorsed the "Equity shop" and is requesting all unions affiliated with it to give the embattled players support. On the other side, the producers and theater owners who control the Columbia burlesque circuit have declared for the open shop and announced that it will be the rule wherever their entertainments appear during the coming season.

That means war, as you may not know if you are not a patron of burlesque. It is an efficiently organized branch of the amusement business, its affairs move like clockwork, and it knows its way about. And there are few cities in the eastern half of the United States in which there is not at least one commodious playhouse whose destinies are in the hands of the Columbia "wheel."

The directors of this organization have formulated their own rules as to the employment of stage hands, electricians, and the like, and have been registering applicants to man their theaters and productions for the season. They now have, they say, enough men on their lists to face any emergency that may arise. An example of what they propose is their plan to eliminate one of the two leaders who have always presided in the orchestra pits at burlesque shows. Hereafter there will be no "house leader," and all the conducting will be done by musical directors provided by the traveling companies. Under the old régime the two conductors sat side by side, one directing the overture, entr'act, and "out march," and the other the rest of the program. This duplication exists in no other class of theaters, and it was one of the principal reasons for the open shop declaration.

So now it remains to be seen what will happen when an open shop burlesque organization breezes into a strongly unionized town—Chicago, for instance. The theater folk are curious to know.

MISS LOUISE BRUNNELL — AND — MISS FLORENCE HEDGES in "UP IN THE CLOUDS"—GARRICK.

"Up in the Clouds," which comes to the Garrick tomorrow night, is heralded as a musical entertainment of hybrid tendencies, having an intelligible story to tell, but inclining in the telling of it to a scenic elaboration not usually manifested by plays with plots. Thus, among other items, a picturesque dance allegory having to do with the march of the seasons is named as one of the high spots of the proceedings. The words were provided by Will B. Johnstone, who did a like service for "Take It from Me," and the tunes are by Tom Johnstone. Included in the list of principals are some with whose names you may not be familiar. They are Hal Van Rensselaer, Arthur Cunningham, Miss Florence Hedges, Miss Louise Brunnell, Mark Smith, Page Spencer, Miss Gladys Coburn, "Skeet" Gallagher, William N. Bailey, Miss Patricia O'Hearn, Miss Gertrude O'Connor, Miss Marjorie Sweet, Van Melino, John J. Weis, William Rhodes, Angelo Romeo, and Arthur Corey. Boston liked the show, and it is hoped Chicago will care for it sufficiently to keep it here until the Shuberts are ready to remodel the Garrick for their new vaudeville venture.

Sarah Bernhardt, the incredible, is in the news again. Now she is to appear in "Adam and Eve," a new play by Sacha Guitry, acting the rôle of Eve to the Adam of Lucien Guitry, father of the playwright. The scene, of course, is to be the Théâtre Sarah Bernhardt in Paris. Just what the play is all about is yet to be revealed, for it is still in the writing.

Gabriele d'Annunzio, through with the affairs of Mars for the time being, has turned his attention to writing comedies for marionettes. Just before the war he signed a contract for some plays of this kind to be produced at the San Moise theater in Venice, famed a century ago for such performances.

Recitals Spring Up on All Sides; Gossip of the World of Music

By Edward Moore.

OUR village is having an unusual amount of music this summer. The silver throats of Ravinia are with us until Labor day, of course. They were expected. They have come for many summers back, and they will, it is hoped, return for many summers to come.

But recitals to an extraordinary extent are showing their heads, not as single specimens, but in series. The Ziegfeld theater has its Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday mornings scheduled ahead for a number of weeks. During this month there will be piano recitals there by Edward Collins, Mollie Margolies, Louis Victor Saar, Rudolph Reuter, and Glenn Dillard Gunn, as well as a two piano program by Mr. Collins and Rudolph Ganz; song recitals by Florence Hinkle and Burton Thatcher; and other events not definitely specified.

The Bush conservatory recital hall—mostly Saturday afternoons, these—announces, among the pianists, Ella Spravka, Jan Chiapusso, John J. Blackmore, and Moissaye Boguslawski; such singers as Boza Oumiroff, Gustaf Holmquist, Mae Graves Atkins, and Charles W. Clark; and Bruno Esbjorn, violinist.

Walter Spry sends word that he will play a series of piano programs at the Columbia School of Music during the Thursday mornings of July. These will be in the nature of lecture recitals, with explanations of the musical material to be interpreted.

Finally, the University of Chicago bulletins a Friday evening series of concerts and lectures at Mandel hall. Frances Ingram, the contralto, and the Emmanuel choir of La Grange have already appeared there. Others to appear are Lorado Taft and Carl Sandburg, lecturers; Christine Langenhan, soprano; Mina Hager, contralto, and Leo Sowerby, composer-pianist; Lillian Eubank, mezzo-soprano; Louis Kreidler, baritone; and a joint appearance by Edna Swanson ver Haar, contralto, and Vera Poppe, cellist.

Miss Sundelius Is a Personality.

Quite a number of new figures are in the compact opera company out at Ravinia this summer, and some of them are more than commonly interesting. In contemplating an organization one endeavors to estimate the values of its component members according to vocal footage, emotional intensity, and general artistic avoirdupois. The estimates are probably inaccurate, but human nature is fallible.

But once in awhile after an artist has been considered in terms of an analytical laboratory, the discovery is made of a residuum not to be classified in ordinary terms. That is one of the most pleasant occurrences in the practice of attending musical events. The residuum is commonly termed personality. It is worth observing.

In only a pair of appearances at Ravinia this summer Marie Sundelius has made herself an outstanding figure. One likes to follow her progress around the stage to see what she is going to do next, to follow her song, to hear how she is going to handle a certain phrase. Vocally and pictorially, she can be demure or mercurial by turns. In this respect what she does has little concern with the technique of singing; at the same time she would seem to be one of the several good reasons for attending the opera on the north shore.

certs last season, has been presented with a fine violin.

ANITA MALKIN

It was made by Carlo Bergonzi in Cremona in the year 1732, and is distinctive enough to have a name of its own, the "Tarisio." According to the account, it is valued at $6,500. Because of its modeling it is easier for a child to handle than an ordinary violin, although it is not of diminutive proportions.

Little Miss Malkin is 8 years old, and is the daughter of Joseph Malkin, the first cellist of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Her success in her recent appearance was so great that the gift was made so that she might pursue her musical studies. Among the donors were Mr. and Mrs. Francis Neilson.

Items from Ravinia.

The blithe servants of song at Ravinia are prepared for another busy week. They got away to a good artistic start, probably the best, all things considered, in the history of the park. New achievements are now confronting them.

Four more operas will be added to the season's repertoire this week. They are "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Carmen," "Tosca," and "La Boheme." This is one item. Another refers to a special celebration of the day of independence tomorrow. A third has to do with the reopening of the children's series of concerts on Thursday afternoon.

The children's concerts attracted much favorable comment last season. Like Mr. Stock's delectable series at Orchestra hall during the winter, they are so conducted as to describe and clarify music and then play it. Mr. and Mrs. Marx E. Oberndorfer will give an explanatory lecture on the program, which will then be played by the Chicago Symphony orchestra. After the intermission there will be a special program by the Jean Van Vlissingen dancers.

Other concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra are regularly scheduled for Saturday and Sunday afternoons. There will be an extra and rather elaborate one tomorrow afternoon, directed by Louis Hasselmans.

The operatic list for the week follows:

Tomorrow night—"Pagliacci," with Anna Fitziu, Kingston, Graham Marr, Picco, and Paltrinieri; and "Cavalleria Rusticana," with Miss Peralta, Mario Chamlee, Marr, Philine Falco, and Anna Correnti.

Tuesday night—"Faust," with Marie Sundelius, Charles Hackett, Leon Rothier, Marr, Margery Maxwell, and Miss Correnti.

Wednesday night—"Carmen," with Miss Gentle, Miss Sundelius, Miss Maxwell, Miss Falco, Kingston, Picco, D'Angelo, Ananian, and Paltrinieri.

Friday night—"Tosca," with Miss Fitziu, Riccardo Stracciari, Hackett, Ananian, and others.

Saturday night—"La Boheme," with Miss Sundelius, Miss Maxwell, Kingston, Stracciari, Rothier, and D'Angelo.

Here and There in Music.

Andreas Pavley and Serge Oukrainsky, premier danseurs of the Chicago Opera association, have returned from Europe, where they conferred with Miss Garden and observed the operations of other ballet companies on the continent. Their plans for next season with the opera company include Beethoven's only ballet, "Creations of Prometheus," up to this time heard only in concert form here; a production on the Botticelli order to Liszt's "Les Preludes," and "La Fete a Robinson," to some old songs by Beranger adapted and orchestrated by Gabriel Grovlez. They will also revive Felix Borowski's "Boudour." John Alden Carpenter's "The Birthday of the Infanta" is likewise scheduled for revival by the company.

The National Federation of Music Clubs has issued a statement of its biennial convention recently held in Rock Island, Moline, and Davenport. Among its accomplishments was the performance of the prize winning oratorio, "The Apocalypse," by Paolo Gallico, and the selection of winners in the national contest for American taught young musicians. These were Enrique Ros of New York, pianist; Devora Nadworney of Bayonne, N. J., contralto; George G. Smith of Evanston, baritone, and Herman Rosen of Cleveland, violinist.

By the payment to Mrs. MacDowell of $2,575, the MacDowell fund was raised to $8,500 and the league for the purpose was disbanded. The federation voted a resolution supporting the amended Fletcher bill for a national conservatory of music.

Margaret Matzenauer, the opera singer, was married in Munich a week ago to Floyd Klotsbach, a former New Yorker. This was her second marriage, her first husband having been Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, also of the operatic stage. Mme. Matzenauer belongs to the Metropolitan forces, though for several seasons she sang mezzo-soprano and dramatic soprano rôles, principally Wagnerian, with the Chicago company at the Auditorium. She has appeared here frequently in concert.

Mme. Raegen Talbot, formerly of Chicago, will sing one of the rôles in Mozart's opera, "The Marriage of Figaro," at the Greek theater of the University of California on the 23d of this month. Mme. Talbot before her music student days here was Dorothy Dauncey. The opera will be given under the direction of Paul Steindorff.

It would seem to be the open season for press agents. Read it and weep.

There is a young man in San Francisco, says the tale, who never sang before he went into the war. After sustaining shell shock at Lassigny, where he was driving an ambulance, it continues, he suddenly developed a baritone voice with a natural range of two octaves. It is said that his voice delighted both Giorgio Polacco and Mary Garden when the opera company visited the Golden Gate city, and that Miss Garden has written to President Harding, asking for his release from further army service.

In case the announcement, should follow that he has been engaged by the Chicago Opera association, his name is Hyacinth P. Killikelly.

The Flonzaley quartet, those ideally lovely chamber music players, have been appearing in Paris and Liege, where their reception is spoken of as being a triumph. At Liege people stood in line for three hours before the doors of the concert hall were opened. Among the auditors was the veteran violinist, Cesar Thomson, the former teacher of Betti and Pochon.

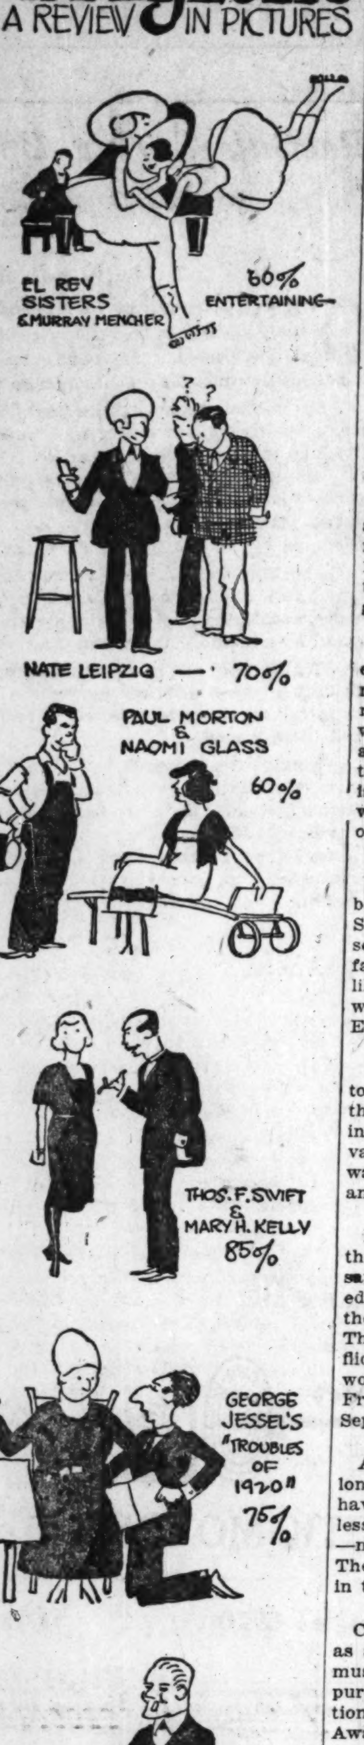
A REVIEW IN PICTURES



The Theaters

World events intervened, but now he has taken up the scheme once more and is anxious to revive an art almost lost to Italy.

George White's third annual review, "Scandals of 1921," will be revealed in Atlantic City tomorrow. The principals include Miss Ann Pennington, George Le Maire, White himself, Lou Holtz, Lester Allen, George Bickel, and numerous others.

William A. Brady's first production of the season, "The Teaser," will open at Stamford, Conn., on Friday with Miss Jane Grey and Miss Faire Binney playing important rôles. The piece had its trial in Brooklyn recently under the title, "Dreamy Eyes."

The Shakespearian summer festival at Stratford-on-Avon will be in session for seven weeks this year, from July 18 until Sept. 3. Five evening and three matinee performances will be given each week.

"Chu Chin Chow" approaches the end in London after one of the longest runs in the history of the theater. Announcement that its "absolute death" was at hand resulted in crowded houses at His Majesty's theater and delayed the demise considerably, but the show is soon to make way for "Mecca," which for some reason was produced on this side of the Atlantic first.

Mme. Lina Abarbanell is reported to be organizing a revival of "Madame Sherry," in which she appeared some seasons ago with notable success. So far as possible, it is said, she would like to reassemble the original cast, which included Ralph Herz and Miss Elizabeth Murray.

"A Pantomimic Faux Pas," a pantomime in which Miss Dorothy Gish of the movies appeared at a recent benefit in New York, is being made ready for vaudeville without Miss Gish. She wanted $5,000 a week for her services and didn't get it.

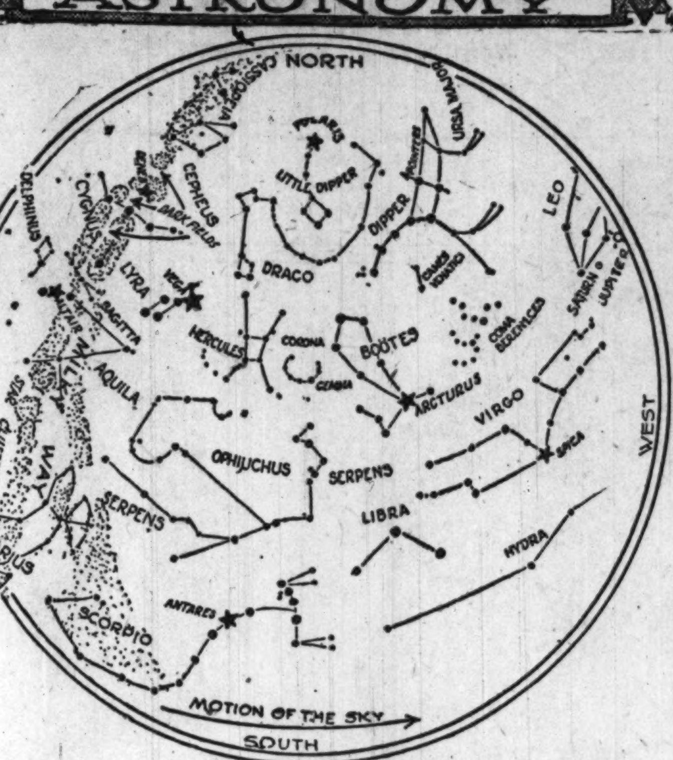
Miss Elsie Janis is coming back to the United States next month, they say, and plans to produce an American edition of her revue in the fall under the auspices of Charles Dillingham. This announcement would seem to conflict with a recent report that she would play "Peg o' My Heart" in French for a Parisian manager in September.

Al Jolson has at last completed his long engagement in "Sinbad," after having appeared in the show more or less continuously since February, 1918—nearly three and one-half years. There will be something else for him in the fall.

Charles Dillingham, known hitherto as a producer of entertainments with music, now has no less than seven purely dramatic offerings in preparation for next season. "Two Blocks Away," designed as a starring vehicle for Barney Bernard, has gone through its preliminary tryout and has been retired temporarily, awaiting a New York presentation in the early autumn. "The Scarlet Man," a comedy by William Le Baron, was "tried out" in Atlantic City last week. Rehearsals will begin soon for the Rida Johnson Young comedy, "The Wise Child," in which Miss Vivienne Segal will have her first nonmusical rôle, and from England there are to come "Brown Sugar," "Bulldog Drummond," and "Old Jig," a trio of British plays which Mr. Dillingham purchased recently. The seventh venture is Lennox Robinson's comedy of Irish life, "The White-Headed Boy," which will be presented with the original cast from the Abbey theater of Dublin.

Miss Helen Hayes, whom we saw and liked in "Bab," is off for a motor trip through France and Italy. When she comes back in the fall she will have her name in the electric lights as a star for the first time in "The Wren," a play written especially for her by Booth Tarkington.

ASTRONOMY



THE JULY SKY MAP

THE MILKY WAY.

Did you ever watch the sky on some still, clear summer night, when there was no moon or street lighting to dim the view? Were you ever in a place where the trees about appeared in the blackest silhouette against the lights, blue-black above, and where the stars seemed almost near enough to touch? If you should ever chance to find these conditions realized, and they often occur at this time of the year, you should take an extra good look at the Milky Way.

You will see it rising in a shimmering band of stars in the east, go crossing the sky from north to south as the earth turns on, and finally swinging over into an east to west position before sunrise comes. Astronomers call it the galaxy, and it is one of the grandest and most impressive objects in the heavens.

If you can get an opera glass, you should look at the knots and clusters which stud its length. In the south, down in Scorpia and Sagittarius, in particular, are many islands of cosmic fog, which upon a little magnification are resolved into twinkling clouds of stars.

Astronomers, with their huge telescope cameras, take photographs of these regions which reveal clusters of stars whose light beams are so delicate as to never stir a human eye, and yet whose numbers are so thickly strewn that there is hardly a spot of clear sky to be seen for their swarms.

When we look out toward the Milky Way we are seeing the universe in its thickest diameter. The bright stars of the sky are distributed all around us approximately uniformly because we are near the center of their swarm, but the Milky Way is so sharply located in the sky because even the nearest parts of it are far beyond the stars. In reality it lies about the starry skies in two great coiled arms, relatively thin through, but stretching far out into space on either side.

The approximate dimensions of the universe are known. The Milky Way is thought to be about 300,000 light years from side to side. Compared to this, the starry sky is small indeed, because it is barely 7,500 light years through at its greatest diameter. And remember, on this scale the sun is eight minutes eight seconds away in light year distance, and the moon two seconds in light years.

Stop and notice those dark, starless patches and streaks which occur here and there all along the Milky Way. They are dark star fields, lying in great sullen obscuring clouds, veritable snares and traps for stars.

Many suns have been seen to go to their doom in these dark patches. Perhaps one is at this moment being destroyed, and we will know nothing of it for centuries, because its light will be all those years in coming to the earth.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE
The Mo-lyb-den-um Car

No. 5—The Motor Fan Release

WHEN the motor fan reaches the speed necessary properly to perform its cooling function, the fan clutch is automatically released and a large saving in horse power is achieved. Tests show that the ordinary motor fan uses 6 to 8 horse power when operating at high speed.

The Wills Sainte Claire self releasing fan cannot use more than 2 horse power.

Next week we will explain what makes Wills Sainte Claire gears so smooth and silent in operation.

In the meantime we invite you to see the car itself—Ride in it—Drive it. You'll find it its own best spokesman.

Again Mr. Lytell Proves That He's There!

"THE MAN WHO."

THE CAST.

Bedford Mills	Bert Lytell
Helen Jessop	Lucy Cotton
Mary Turner	Virginia Valli
St. John Jessop	Frank Currier
Bedford Haynes	Clarence Elmer
Bing Wharton	William Roselle

By Mae Tinée.

AGAIN Bert Lytell demonstrates his right to a place among the seats of the mighty. He is THERE, I tell you, he is THERE! There with just about everything a man needs to be a successful screen star. And he DID start out so badly! Well, as in a prize fight, you never can tell!

The picture under discussion takes a punch at the high cost of living in a merry and original way. Shoes are the target, and your hero goes barefoot through the streets of New York as a protest against $28 oxfords.

It is not his interest in the old H. C. that sends the barefoot boy forth, however. He has up to the time of his venture managed to struggle along and wear shoes at the same time. But he becomes enamored of the "exclusive-" and haughtah Miss Jessop, who says that when she marries it must be a man WHO—O, starts a revolution, or does something that proves him a SOMEBODY. Miss Jessop is one of THE Jessops, according to subtitle. As seen she has the appearance and manners of a show girl. I do her the justice of imagining that she deliberately caricatures her rôle most of the time.

Your hero doesn't know what to do until a shoe ad flashes its message to him. Abetted by a pal who is also a newspaper man and knows a story when he sees it, Mr. Bedford Mills sets out to tan the hides of the shoe trust. (Pretty neat, what?)

In the course of his painful experiment he meets a girl so different from Miss Jessop! A girl who soothes his wounded feelings with kind words, his inner man with tea, and his poor, martyred feet with basins of cooling fluid. She also is for him to the extent that she goes forth barefoot with him. What a regular fellow she is develops in the last reel when you discover she is none other than—? Ah, guess!

It's a picture that will tickle your risibles, hold your interest, and inspire you with added respect for that able young man, Mr. Bert Lytell—whom we do not think praise will spoil.

CLOSEUPS

Constance Talmadge, via her press agent, declares that this is what she thinks about herself:

"What I think about myself depends upon my mood! If the day is sunny, and the country green, and the sky blue, and the daisies beckoning, I hate myself because I am a motion picture actress and cannot run away and lie under a tree all day and dig my heels in the sod. Then again, when I am feeling awfully peppy and ambitious and energetic, I love to shake off my own personality and become some one else, and go about the studio doing all the amusing and amazing things that happen in comedy pictures, and then I adore my work.

"This really sounds more like 'What I Think About My Work' than 'What I Think About Myself.' But, you see, with me, my work and myself are one. When it comes right down to cold facts, I would not have chosen any other profession for anything in the world. And if there are moments when I am terribly tired and seized with the desire to chuck it all and go to parties and dances, I suppose that is just the natural reaction of youth and health.

"There is a wild primitive something in me somewhere that makes me want to caper in the woods, climb trees, and let out yells like an Australian bushman. I love to scream. It gives me a thrill that I can't explain. Once I thought I'd cultivate artistic temperament, and when something went wrong at the studio, I let out a war whoop, but no one took me seriously. The director and the players just howled with mirth, and said approvingly: 'Connie's in good spirits today.' I guess I am pretty good natured on the whole. I cannot help seeing the funny side of everything, and it is impossible for me to stay angry long. I think it is because I love gaiety and life and music and laughter and jokes and peace and goodwill that I prefer to play comedies."

When George Arliss is seen in the screen adaptation of his famous stage success, "Disraeli," with him will be E. J. Radcliffe, whose stage and screen career extends over a period of more than forty-five years. Mr. Radcliffe will have the rôle of Sir Michael Probert, governor of the Bank of England.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

MISS ANNIE R. S.: We gladly forwarded your inclosure, and your request was not "imposing" on anybody's good nature. Any time you think we can help you, let us know. Of course, maybe we can't, but we'll do our durndest anyhow.

S. E. W. D.: Of course, I'd like to do something for the children. Your letter, however, does not make things clear to this obtuse mind. Couldn't you be a little more explicit, please?

J. D. C.: You sure have your own ideas on all subjects from mesilf to the muscles of Miss Murray. Well, that's right. THINK! But, said she, it took a long time to learn that writing letters might be classed with the dangerous sports.

K. R. McMackon: You have your titles mixed. The picture your sister saw may not have been the one that you did. Certainly there are not two pictures by the same name. We do not send out any photographs from this department. Sorry to disappoint you.

PHILIP S.: Wanda Hawley is with Realart, Los Angeles; Mary Thurman may be reached at 133 Edgecliff drive, L. A.; May Allison, Metro, Hollywood; Katherine MacDonald, Georgia and Gerard streets, L. A.; Dorothy Gish, Mamaroneck, Long Island, New York; and Billie Rhodes, 1341 Wellington avenue, Hollywood. Glad to oblige you.

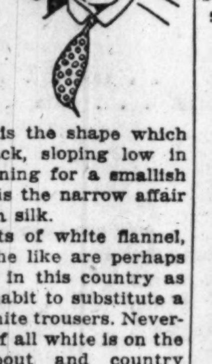
The WELL-DRESSED MAN

Cool Caps for Sports— The All White Suit

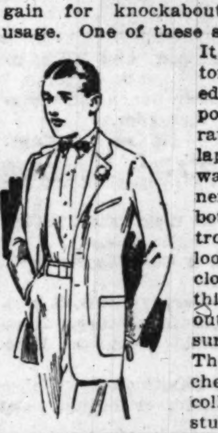
By Alfred Stephen Bryan.

NEW YORK.—There is a venerable jest bandied about regarding the man who, asking his hatter to show him the latest fashion, was bidden to be seated as "the fashion is just changing." It is self evidently fatuous to attempt to follow every whim and winding of style and to discard the things of one season merely because the things of a succeeding season differ slightly in color, cloth, or cut. Rather should one select what automobile engineers are fond of terming "a stabilized design," so that one's clothes will stay in fashion throughout several seasons. Fineness of material, excellence of handiwork, and symmetry of fit are far more important than chasing the will-o'-the-wisp of advanced fashion. In truth, the best clothes makers deliberately avoid exaggerated or faddish touches, because these soon become obsolete, leaving the wearer a marked man, with the mark of the past upon him.

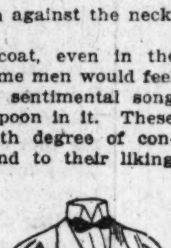
Some wag has defined a gentleman as one who can wear a cap and still look like a gentleman. Certainly, a cap is trying to most faces and, therefore, special care should be taken to obtain a becoming effect. The cap portrayed is of cool linen or crash or silk or drill particularly suited for wear at field sports. It has a broad spread of crown, which is often plaited for added elasticity, and a flexible visor. The collar is the shape which is high in the back, sloping low in front, with an opening for a smallish knot. The cravat is the narrow affair of foulard or poplin silk.



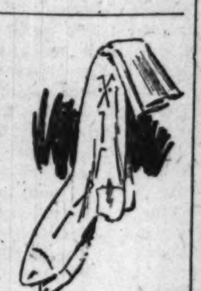
Hot weather suits of white flannel, white serge, and the like are perhaps not so much worn in this country as abroad. It is our habit to substitute a dark jacket with white trousers. Nevertheless, the vogue of all white is on the gain for knockabout and country usage. One of these suits is pictured. It is a three button, single breasted and patch pocketed with rather small, high lapels and cutaway front corners. The cut of both jacket and trousers is more loose than town clothes, as befits this sort of turnout for one's leisure moments. The shirt is white cheviot and the collar is of ditto stuff with a bow knot tie drawn high against the neckband.



Without a waistcoat, even in the thick of summer, some men would feel as incomplete as a sentimental song without June and spoon in it. These sticklers for the 'nth degree of conventionality may find to their liking waistcoats of silk, linen, or cotton like that illustrated here. Its suppressed waistline, peaked bottom points, together with the full chest and cut away scyes [armholes] lend to the garment a distinctive look. The wing collar, now by way of coming back, is set off with a long, narrow bow-knot tie having pointed ends.



Wool sport hose embroidered with a design favored by golf sticks cannot, to be sure, be termed a fashion. Rather are they a foible of the golfiac, who must cry his hobby to all who'll listen, and such golf hose can certainly be heard.



Light woolen hose for the links are not only procurable with feet, but also footless for those of us who cannot endure the warmth and friction of wool next to the skin. Lovat, green, brown, and gray heather blendings are most sought.

As a Matter of Fact.

By Guy Lee.

A fellow verse maker and I
  Attended a feast of the soul;
'Twas classical, very, and quite literary,
  And each of us shone in his role.
We personal-pronouned with vim,
  And ego-orated in glee—
But I didn't listen to him
  And he didn't listen to me.

Of course when the party was o'er
  Each mutually lauded the other;
He insisted that I was a genius, and my
  Reply was that he was another.
But the swap of well-wishes was grim
  With irony, you will agree,
Since I didn't listen to him
  And he didn't listen to me.

HAND-TAILORING breathes life into dead cloth. A STYLEBILT Suit looks as well the last day you wear it, as the first day you buy it.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

At Art Institute—the Kimball and Palmer Collections

By Eleanor Jewett.

Fields of yellow buttercups
Danced one summer day—
A golden song of cheerfulness
Beside a dusty way.

Throngs of yellow fireflies
Danced one summer night—
A gleaming hint of happiness
Beside a river white.

Buttercups and fireflies
Through the moonlight pale
Swing their golden cadences
Beside the camping trail!

THERE are now occupying the places of honor in the galleries of the Art institute the two collections of important canvases which each year have served to make our art summers as brilliant as the more chameleonlike exhibits of the winter make those more active months of interest to us. The two collections are those of Mrs. W. W. Kimball and of Mrs. Potter Palmer. One cannot speak, as one should, of these figures of Chicago society in the past tense. Their vivid interests keep them still alive to us.

Who can look at the portrait of Mrs. Potter Palmer painted by Zorn and realize that death has silenced that golden tongue, has quenched that eager spirit, has rendered useless all that gracious charm of manner and person which gave its mistress the willing homage of countless persons, each in his own orbit of importance? It is a difficult realization to make. Much rather would we dwell on the other reflections which the portrait inspires.

For example, the interesting tale that attaches to the painting of the picture. Do you remember? It seems that Zorn was fond of riding, and while he was staying in Chicago he insisted on trying a new mount nearly every day on what were then our wooded bridle paths. One morning his horse threw him, injuring his right wrist severely. He was engaged at the time on this portrait of Mrs. Palmer. What should he do? His answer was simple. He shifted his brushes to his left hand and painted the portrait left-handedly, his power as a painter being lessened not a whit by this feat of legerdemain.

At the time of Mrs. Palmer's death criticisms were invited in regard to her collection of paintings. The one which has lingered longest in my memory is this, made, I believe, by Ralph Clarkson, himself a painter of note. Mr. Clarkson said: "This collection contains the fewest poor paintings of any I know of." Which, though negative, is yet most excellent praise.

Mrs. Palmer, and Mr. Palmer, too, during his lifetime, was always interested in art. She was helped in the gathering together of her paintings by the best advice of her day. She consulted artists and art critics here and abroad. Some paintings, however, were purchased for their own merit—because they appealed to either Mrs. Palmer or her husband.

The most amusing story of this purchasing by preference is the story of the buying of the Manets. Mr. Palmer enjoyed these, and bought them, though for a long while Mrs. Palmer could see nothing good in them, and they were consigned to the unvisited depths of his dressing room.

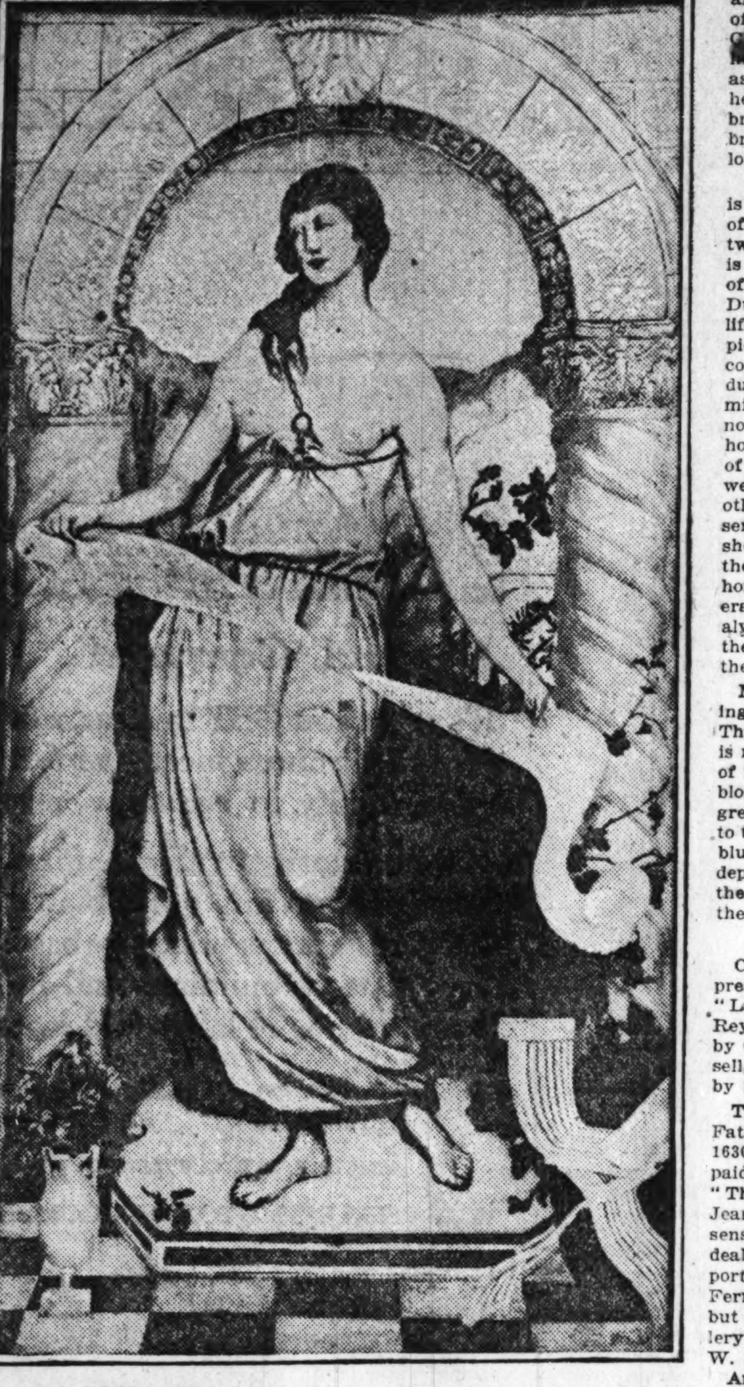
Included in the present group of Potter Palmer paintings at the Art institute, paintings which, by the way, may come into the permanent possession of the institute in accordance with a bequest made in Mrs. Palmer's will, are two canvases by Manet, four by Jean Francois Millet, a lovely academic Puvis de Chavannes, and others by Pissarro, Raffaelli, Degas, Delacroix, Lerolle, Cazin, Corot, Bastien-Lepage, Besnard, Renoir, Sisley, Troyon, Zorn, George De Forest Brush, Mary Cassatt, George Hitchcock, Eastman Johnson, Jongkind, Anton Mauve, Gari Melchers, and Whistler.

In all there are sixty canvases in the Potter Palmer collection, and there are also a few water colors. As may be seen by reading over the names of the artists mentioned above, the majority of the paintings are by Frenchmen, and most of them belong to the nineteenth century. It is an impressive and beautiful collection, one worthy of ranking with the best of any land. Chicago owes a great debt to those of her citizens who can, and do, bring as much of loveliness and interest to her smoke begrimed portals as was brought by Mrs. Palmer, and is being brought in the present by other art loving collectors.



A graceful design showing the ability of the students of the art school of the Art institute to master the rules of composition. This is but one of a number of charming panels in the school exhibit, which will close July 15.

The Mrs. W. W. Kimball collection is possibly better known to the most of us, as it has been hung for the last two summers in the institute. There is a bit of pathos about the presence of the paintings now in the gallery. During the last years of Mrs. Kimball's life she was not strong mentally. Her pictures, in spite of her enfeebled condition, remained to her an enduring source of pleasure. She missed them sadly when they were not in their accustomed places in her home. For some reason—the facts of the case have slipped me—they were left in the institute at a time other than during Mrs. Kimball's absence from the city. So disturbed did she become at her vacant walls that the pictures had to be brought back home to comfort her. Now, in consideration of her wishes, they may remain always in the permanent collection of the Art institute. She will not miss them any more.

Most lovely in this group of paintings is the lily pond by Claude Monet. This mention of it made some time ago is not out of place here: "Like a fleet of fairy shallops, crystal and gold, the blossoms swing at anchor among the green pads. A thin, gray film clings to the placid surface that shows faintly blue under its cloak. In the still depths rustle the soundless shades of the forest trees that guard, unseen, the beauty of the pool."

Certain stately portraits that are impressive in their dignified charm are "Lady Sarah Bunbury," by Sir Joshua Reynolds; "The Countess of Bristol," by Gainsborough; "Lady Francis Russell," by Romney, and "Miss Wolff," by Sir Thomas Lawrence.

The "Portrait of the Artist's Father," by Rembrandt, was painted in 1630, and it is said that Mrs. Kimball paid $110,000 for it. The purchase of "The Peasant Girl with Sheep," by Jean François Millet, was one of the sensations of the season in the art dealers' world some years ago. The portrait of the late W. W. Kimball by Ferrari has been kept by the heirs, but a copy of it is to hang in the gallery known as "The Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Kimball Room."

Among the other paintings in this collection are "Stokes by Neyland," by John Constable; "Dutch Fishing Boats," by Turner; "Landscape with Nymphs Bathing," by Corot; "Cattle," by Van Marcke; landscapes by Gainsborough and by Ruysdael; "In the Woods," by Diaz, and various other pictures by the French masters, Maufra, Moret, Pissaro, Sisley, and D'Espagnat.

FARM and GARDEN

Back Yard Farmers Learn A B C's at Open Air Schools

By Frank Ridgway.

GEORGE J. SCHOPPE, Washington park gardener, admits that his attitude toward dirt farming many years ago, when he left the farm to go to the city to work, was not different from that of other farm boys. He hated hoes, chopping axes, pitch forks, and muley-cultivators worse than anybody in the whole neighborhood, he thought, and the quiet peaceful farm was no place for an ambitious youth of his type.

Throwing his hoe against a rail fence hard enough to snap the handle in two, after he had been hacking all day at big jimpson weeds, George Schoppe, still in his teens, dug out for the city to see about some of the jobs of which he had dreamed. He tried them all—railroads, machine shops, grocery stores, barber shops—and made good at everything he tried, but he soon found that he disliked the picks, hammers, scales and razors of the city worse than he did the hoes, axes, pitchforks and muley-cultivators of the farm. He discovered what he really liked best—farming.

Miniature Farm in the City.

While he still lives in the city he is not weighing and wrapping groceries; neither is he catering to the whims of some customer wanting a real close shave, an extra hot towel, or a marcel wave. He is farming right in the heart of the city.

For more than thirty years, Mr. Shoppe has been gardening. He has been in charge of the Washington park demonstration vegetable garden for four years. Thousands of people from all parts of the city come every year to visit his miniature farm of one and a fourth acres on the Midway at 59th street. Last year, approximately 10,000 people visited the garden, which has been frequently referred to as Schoppe's open air school for gardeners. They not only come to get first hand information about how to run their gardens but to listen to some of the school head's simple philosophy, possessed only by those who work with soil and plants as Mr. Schoppe does.

Learning Garden A B C.

With the hundreds of school children and amateur home gardeners who come to ask him questions about plants and bugs, Mr. Schoppe is the original "man with the hoe." Today thousands of gardens are being grown according to his methods of planting and cultivating. Between 400 and 500 school children frequently visit his garden during week ends. Here they become familiar with the different kinds of vegetables, learn how to plant and care for the various crops, from the time the seed are put in the ground until the vegetables are harvested. Many who live nearby visit the garden daily throughout the growing season.

The garden is conducted for the benefit of beginners in gardening, enabling them to become so familiar with the different kinds of common vegetables that they can recognize them at a glance. They not only learn the difference between eggplant and rhubarb or kohlrabi and cabbage, but they learn how to plant, hoe, water, thin, and protect the crop from the ravages of insects. In other words, they learn the A B C's and X Y Z's of gardening.

Too Many Lose Interest.

After making a careful study of the city gardener's problems for twelve seasons in succession, Mr. Schoppe has come to the conclusion that most of the failures among home gardeners are due to a lack of interest in their work. "If a man does not like to work in a garden he is wasting his time in attempting to raise vegetables," he said. "Too many of our gardeners in the city start out in the spring with a great deal of enthusiasm but lose interest in the work when the days begin to get hot and the plants need attention most. About this time of the year I notice that many begin to lose interest in their gardens, and it is from the first of July to the last of August that plants need the most attention."

Mr. Schoppe's big class of 10,000 gardeners is now being carefully trained in the methods of caring for the vegetables in hot weather. They pour in and out of the garden from early morning until late in the evening to ask questions about watering, thinning, and cultivating.

Water After Sundown.

Turning on the water to demonstrate a few of his tricks of watering plants, Mr. Schoppe said: "I never turn the hose on beans, tomatoes, egg plants, peppers, melons, cucumbers, squashes, or pumpkins when the sun is shining. As a general rule I try to water my garden between sundown and dark. It is usually safe, however, to water sweet corn, carrots, beets, parsnips, Swiss chard, parsley, and celery when the sun is shining. I make an exception in watering beans, pepper, and the vine crops. After a heavy dew I spray the plants in the morning. The dew collects in drops on the leaves and the hot sun heats the water and burns the foliage. Spraying prevents the burn spots from forming on the leaves.

"This is the best way to soak the ground around such plants as beans and tomatoes," said Mr. Schoppe as he bent over to place the water hose between the rows. "I allow the water to run slowly and keep pulling the hose along the row as the soil becomes thoroughly soaked. Sometimes I sprinkle cabbage plants at noon. This does not seem to injure the leaves, and I find it helps to keep the insects in check.

"Less water is needed where level cultivation is practiced. By keeping the ground level instead of throwing it up in hills or ridges around the plants and working the soil regularly the moisture will be held in the soil much better. Where there are ridges and hills and a crust on top, the water not only runs away from the plants and off the bed but it does not soak in freely, and the plants suffer.

"Many back lotters make the mistake of elevating the soil around the plants six or eight inches. This increases the evaporating surface besides interfering with watering. Because of their broad leaves, extensive development of vines and the formation of good sized fruits, the vine crops, such as the cucumber, squash, pumpkin, and melon must have an enormous amount of water."

MOTORDOM

Hoosier Highways Threatened With Patchwork Policy

Second Class Roads Are Proposed in New Program

BY J. L. JENKINS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—[Special.]—There's something wrong in Hoosierdom, and the men who can best read signs on the modern trail say it is the the state's road policy. The policy calls for gravel—tons and pits of it—to bury the splendid old highway system that measured up, before the motor age, with Riley's delightful poetry and the scenery in Brown county.

The highway situation, seen from the steering wheel and after exhaustive inquiry among the engineering brotherhood, corresponds rather closely to the roads fiasco in Illinois, with this exception: Indiana is facing the new highway transportation era with a gigantic network of old stone roads as a working basis, while Illinois is combatting progress with leagues of mud.

Here the policy, condemned by the leading engineering minds of the country, proposes to use gravel surfacing and maintenance patrol for the perpetual patching of arteries which have positively failed under the crowding wheels of modern motor cars. It favors the building of cheap roads with material available in almost every part of the state and the eternal repairing of them to keep wheels moving in open seasons of the year. In Illinois the policy to date has been the collection of huge highway sums to complete an ideal system of paved highways and then to spend the months made for highway building in long and fruitless arguments against the cost of the improvement.

"We propose in the next ten years," said Gov. Warren T. McCray, "to cover the state with gravel roads and then to take care of them, thus conserving the people's money. It is a new policy, but one we intend to carry through despite opposition. I will admit that hard surfacing is needed on a few of the roads that are heavily used, but we do not intend to spend all of our money for expensive paving when no one knows how long the investment will last. A properly maintained road is better anyway and will save money all around."

"Fair reading, but all wrong," is the concensus of opinion among Indiana highway authorities on the governor's stand.

"In the first place," declared one engineer who is known nationally as a conservative and highly efficient road builder, "there isn't an organization in the world that can hold a gravel road in shape between March and September under heavy traffic. Ride over almost any Indiana gravel road for the proof. If we had the money that has been put into the building and the upkeep of some of our natural surfaced roads, we could pave 'em with gold. And yet, right now, we have cheap roads, good a few weeks each year and passable at the best in the other seasons.

"The maintenance men want gravel roads, of course. This type makes their jobs for them. We should profit by the millions spent for progressive experimenting in other states. We have plenty of examples of wonderful service and low upkeep costs of permanent pavements in Pennsylvania, in California, Wisconsin, and the states where people have been quick to take advantage of the new highway age.

"Road building is no longer an experiment. It is a fact and vital to the life in any state. Gravel surfacing on any road in a primary state system is recognized the world over as nothing more than an excellent makeshift and temporary relief, but the system that uses this temporary surfacing as a basis is one crammed with nothing but woe."

A ride over any one of the main trunks from Chicago to the Hoosier capital is sufficient argument against the gravel fallacy. A month ago the run was a delight if made in good weather. Today it is a long succession of holes and loose footing. Compared to the usual dirt road, both the Jackson and Adeway highways are excellent. It is true that table smooth gravel will be found in two, five, and ten mile stretches where truck traffic has not cut into it and that the driver can feel comparatively safe all along both routes, but every turn in the road may hold a broken spring, and scores of them do hold miles of loose stones that offer almost the same resistance as mud to motor traffic. From Danville to Indianapolis the Dixie highway is tire deep in treacherous, loose gravel and worn surfacing, a condition to be expected on any second class road in the middle of a heavy season. From Crawfordsville to Lebanon and south the optional route is much better, but rough in spots.

One hundred miles in Indiana's state system of 3,800 miles was under contract for paving before the new administration changed the program, and this work is going forward. As in Illinois, the federal aid mileage will take care of the great trunk lines which carry the heaviest interstate traffic. The Old National road is being paved to connect with the Illinois concrete at Marshall to lead into St. Louis. To the east of Indianapolis new concrete stretches have been opened to traffic, leaving but sixty-six miles of gaps in the paving on the famous old trail through the state.

The Lincoln highway is being paved east of Schererville and should be complete next spring between Porter and Valparaiso. It has failed dismally through the northern part of the state under the pounding of traffic. The road from Chicago through Gary to Michigan City is still a neglected state orphan. A late inspection showed it to be typically rough and rutted and with scores of grade crossings to condemn it. The highway department is working out a detour route between Chicago and Michigan City for early improvement.

New Highway Ready.

The new Black Range highway through Grant and Sierra counties, New Mexico, will be dedicated by a special celebration tomorrow. The dedication speakers will be Gov. M. C. Mechem of New Mexico, Gov. Thomas Campbell of Arizona; G. A. Martin, president of the El Paso Auto club; Col. Dell M. Potter of Clifton, Ariz., president of the Southern National Highways association, and W. S. Cox of Silver City, N. M., president of the Southwestern Good Roads association. The celebration will be staged about midway of the new route, fifty-eight miles from Silver City.

TALES of the TRAIL

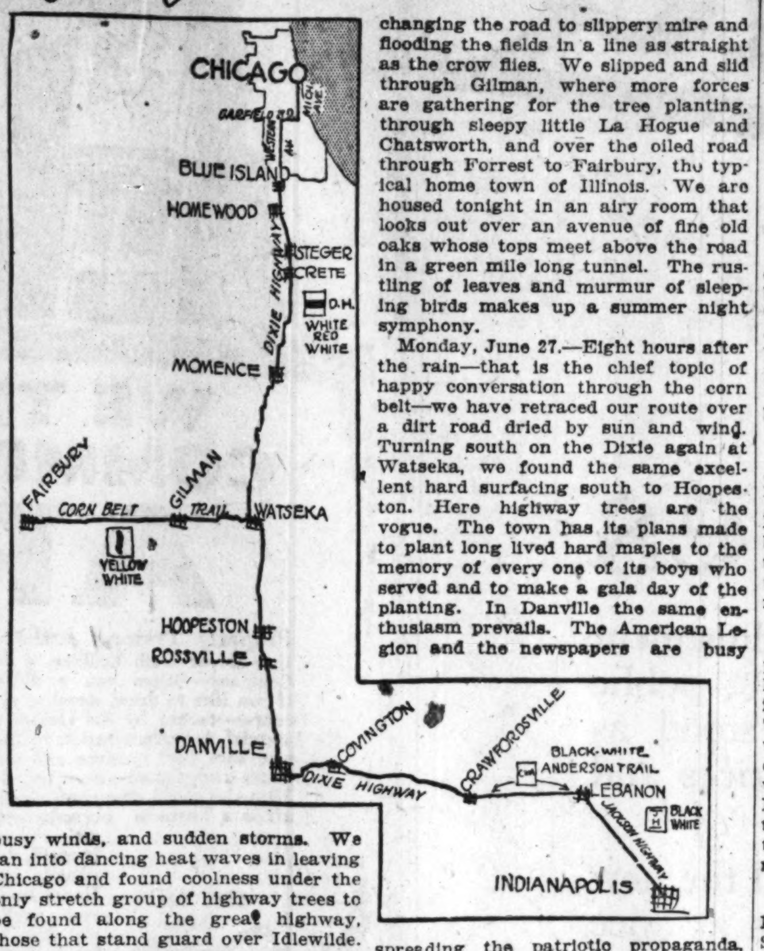
by Jenks

Green and cool and inviting, the roads wind away to Arcady. Poetry and hard common sense are combined in them, together with a vast heritage of calm contentment that comes from lush fields and leagues of growing things. They are old as the first man and new as their next turning. They have forgotten crowded cities, noise, and the clash of trade, for they are the origin of all trade, veins of a nation whose heart is great enough to supply the whole world with food.

Make friends with the roads and you will gain lasting delight, for every one has a story to tell. One will whisper of moonlit summer nights and country romances scented with wild roses. Another will tell a tale of stirring times when patriots took the trail and marked it with their blood and pages in history. Others hold memories of fearless men and women who blazed them into the unknown wilderness and forced new frontiers for you and your children, of mighty dreams worked out in industry, of life as it is seen in your neighbors' eyes.

And so it is to the roads that The Tribune has turned in advancing the splendid memorial that will raise living monuments to every man who has served his country. When the dream is complete each road will take its way through green avenues of living sentinel trees, each marked with the name of an American fighting man and standing guard against national forgetfulness.

This is the chronicle of a journey into the land of the open road, made by a Tribune party charged with the advancement of the national memorial tree campaign. We are traveling overland in "The Lark," a car fresh from the experimental laboratories of the Lexington Motor Car company and typical of the mighty modern developments that have made the roads a new center of national transportation and service.



SUNDAY, June 26.—One hundred and thirty-five miles of sun bathed country lie to the north toward Chicago, split down the middle with the cool concrete road that makes the Dixie highway and the proposed upright of the continental memorial tree cross. All of the meadow larks in Illinois live along this road in a countryside that comes fresh and spotless each morning from its bath of summer dew.

It has been a day of June caprices, busy winds, and sudden storms. We ran into dancing heat waves in leaving Chicago and found coolness under the only stretch group of highway trees to be found along the great highway, those that stand guard over Idlewilde. An itinerant bee joined the party south of Crete and caused vast excitement before his friendly fervor prompted him to sting the party's artist and to die in the act. At Momence, where mothers and fathers of fighting men are eager to see the first trees planted for their hero boys, a mass of storm clouds rode into the sky to the south. We watched them gather, blotting out the sun miles away, and saw them sweep downward in drenching rain. They moved to the west swiftly, crossing our trail, and emptying themselves over fields of waist high corn far to the right.

In Watseka, where people have welcomed the Dixie with newly improved streets, the lark purred contentedly over smooth concrete and turned an inquiring nose westward into the winding corn belt trail. Five miles out the bank of rain clouds we had been watching for hours turned northward and emptied themselves ahead of us, changing the road to slippery mire and flooding the fields in a line as straight as the crow flies. We slipped and slid through Gilman, where more forces are gathering for the tree planting, through sleepy little La Hogue and Chatsworth, and over the oiled road through Forrest to Fairbury, the typical home town of Illinois. We are housed tonight in an airy room that looks out over an avenue of fine old oaks whose tops meet above the road in a green mile long tunnel. The rustling of leaves and murmur of sleeping birds makes up a summer night symphony.

Monday, June 27.—Eight hours after the rain—that is the chief topic of happy conversation through the corn belt—we have retraced our route over a dirt road dried by sun and wind. Turning south on the Dixie again at Watseka, we found the same excellent hard surfacing south to Hoopeston. Here highway trees are the vogue. The town has its plans made to plant long lived hard maples to the memory of every one of its boys who served and to make a gala day of the planting. In Danville the same enthusiasm prevails. The American Legion and the newspapers are busy spreading the patriotic propaganda, and the campaign has progressed to the point where the trees are almost ready to be set out.

East of Danville we took the heavy gravel road to Crawfordsville and beat another rainstorm by five miles. A lovely winding road leads through rolling country from Crawfordsville to Lebanon to connect with the Jackson highway into Indianapolis.

Here the national headquarters of the American Legion is behind the tree movement with Argonne energy. Women's clubs and civic organizations throughout the Hoosier metropolis, where big ideas are put over in a night, are coöperating. They propose to line every main highway in the state with memorial trees and to lose no time in the work. We are heading out tomorrow to the east over the historic Old National road, the highway that holds memories of all the pioneers who made the west the fruitful world that it is.

WELCOME, BANDITS!

Here is the $35,000 armored car which was built secretly by an American manufacturer for Tsan-Tso-Lin, governor general of Manchuria. Poor Tsan's life is one grand round of shocks, due to the playful bomb throwing indulged in against the Chinese governor, but he's ready now to go abroad luxuriously and fully prepared to repel boarders up to one regiment.

Traffic Progress.

America is making real headway with uniform motor vehicle laws, according to C. E. Stebbins of the Maxwell Sales company, one of Chicago's most enthusiastic advocates of such legislation.

"When it is remembered that today there are 9,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States and that the range of operation of these vehicles is no longer confined to the limits of a municipality or a state, it is apparent that uniform legislation is imperative," he told Chicago dealers.

"Two proposed measures which seem ideally suited to their purpose have been drawn up by a joint committee from the National Association of State Highway Officials, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the American Automobile association, and the Highway Industries association. The restriction limiting the weight of vehicles to 28,000 pounds, distributed not more than 800 pounds per inch of tire width, seems a wise one."

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

WITH the announcement of a $200 reduction on all its models, the Briscoe Motor corporation establishes an innovation by equipping its product at the new prices with windshield wings, front and rear bumpers, running board pads and nickel radiators. The new prices are: Touring, $1,085; roadster, $1,085; coupe, $1,685; sedan, $1,685.

Another cut in prices, involving reductions of $400 on leading models, has been made on all Velie passenger cars. The prices are now lower than have ever prevailed before on the present Velie line. The new price for the larger five passenger model is $1,585. The cut on the smaller model is $200, bringing the price down to $1,385.

The Maxwell Motor corporation of Detroit announces the election of William Robert Wilson as its president. Mr. Wilson for the past few years has been vice president of the Irving National bank of New York and prior to that time was in the automobile business for several years.

The builders of the Saxon have displaced the old grease cup system of lubrication for their chassis and have installed the Roman chassis lubricator. This oiling system can be used at the will of the driver and carries lubricating oil to all parts of the chassis where formerly grease cups were used. It is operated from a central tank under the foreboards and is piped from there to the different parts where the oil is needed.

It is announced today by McShane-Hill, local distributors of the Liberty Six, that this automobile can be purchased for $1,595 for the five passenger touring car. This is a reduction of $455. Reductions on closed car models are approximately the same.

The Cole Motor Car company of Indianapolis announces a price reduction of from $455 to $700 on all models. This brings the seven passenger touring car down to the price of $2,795.

At a dealers' convention held in Chicago last Tuesday by Charles E. Gambill, local distributor of the Hupmobile, there were seventy-five dealers present. They drove away with sixty new Hupmobiles, which is the regular weekly shipment received here from the factory.

Banks Ready to Help Busy 1921 Reward Fighters

"THE emergency of 1920 has definitely passed," said W. P. G. Harding, governor of the federal reserve system, speaking before the annual meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. "There is nothing as far as the financial condition of the country is concerned as affected by the federal reserve banks that causes any other feeling than one of optimism."

Availability of credit, the fact that automobile shipments for the last two months equaled 67 per cent of the same months of last year, the feeling that prices have reached a new stable level, and Governor Harding's statement that "the public has a great deal of buying power left" were major points of the meeting.

Governor Harding pointed out that the financial situation of the federal reserve system is stronger than it has ever been before, and that the banks are anxious to lend to legitimate business.

"We want to get the public out of the idea that things are constantly going lower and lower and lower," said Governor Harding, "and we should get some stability into the situation." It was opinion at the meeting that the new low price levels now reached would probably be stabilized on the present basis as almost all the motor companies have readjusted their prices. The concensus of opinion brought out that motor car and truck companies have anticipated the lower levels of raw materials and have priced their product on the new basis.

Trucks.

The present registration of motor trucks is estimated at 800,000 throughout the United States.

AVIATION

Only 12 Bombs Needed to Sink German Sea Pig

Air Bombers Mimic Battle Called Success.

BY MORROW KRUM.

WHAT is the lesson derived from the bombing of the battleship Iowa by dummy bombs and the sinking of the U-117 submarine by airmen? That is the question that is traveling the rounds of naval and aviation circles in Washington these days.

I stood on the hurricane deck of the United States transport Henderson and watched three naval air service ships drop twelve bombs on the submarine and send it to the bottom of the sea. The job was done with neatness and dispatch.

The bombing of the submarine was, according to naval officers, a test of materials.

"We expect the airmen to hit the target," said the commander in charge of the tests. "They should have no difficulty. What we desire to learn is what will a 163 pound bomb do to a submarine or a battleship."

The next morning, June 21, three F-5-L flying boats, carrying five men and four bombs each, set out from the naval base at Norfolk. They flew in formation to the target, which was floating awash in the sea 100 miles off the Virginia capes.

The observers were on the Henderson, the largest ship that ever steamed up the Potomac river to Washington. The transport was anchored 500 yards from the target, and the Majestic Atlantic stood by. There were nine capital ships, a score of mine sweepers, destroyers, and sub chasers, three blimps, and five airplanes watching the squadron of bombers approach.

The airmen piloted their planes to an altitude of 1,200 feet above the target and dropped three bombs. They "flew the course," returned to the position and dropped nine bombs. The explosions of the missles rattled the sides of the Henderson, while smoke and water went high in the air. One of the bombs dropped directly on the submarine, aft the conning tower. Nine fell in the casualty zone. Two went wide. Only twelve bombs were necessary. It was good work.

When the submarine started its slow but sure descent to the bottom the cheer that went up from the decks of the Henderson came from air service officers. There was a feeble cry from the uniformed gobs of the fleet.

"The materials proved successful," said the statesman who headed the congressional body aboard the ship.

"It does not mean that the navy will discontinue building battleships," said Capt. William A. Moffett. "But it does mean that airmen can hit a target and after they hit it the bombs will do great damage."

Capt. Moffett, head of the naval air forces, believes that the fleet of the future will be in the air and that the flag ship will be a fast battle plane with the commanding officer riding in the observer's cockpit.

Last Tuesday the bombing of the Iowa was postponed because of the fog. That one fact will count on the side of the capital ship supporters. The airmen could not venture off the coast in the fog. If they did go far out to sea they would have difficulty in finding their target. Navy officers smiled. It was their turn.

On Wednesday the sky was clear. The Iowa was steaming along the sea 100 miles off the coast and somewhere between Cape Hatteras and Cape May, 200 miles apart. It was a radio controlled ship, piloted by a young man on the battleship Ohio, five miles astern.

It was the problem of the army air service flyers to first locate the Iowa, then to bomb it with dummy bombs. The zero hour of the search problem was 8 a. m. Almost two hours later the ship was located. Only two hits were registered by the bombers, who dropped seventy-five dummy bombs at the moving target.

The naval officers smiled again.

Throughout the entire controversy naval officers have cried "there won't be anyone shooting at the airmen." Of course not, but Capt. Moffett asserts that it would make little difference.

"The airmen might be forced to fly a bit higher, but they would attack just the same," he said. "You know airmen have to face danger just as the doughboy does when he goes over the top. You'll never see an aviator refuse to attack an enemy merely because an archi is shooting at him."

Next month two German destroyers will be scuttled by airmen. Both will be moving. The airmen will use live bombs, some of the 163 pound type and some of the 1,000 poun dtype.

The tests are regarded as the most important ever held by any government. They are the first that have ever been thrown open to the public.

"NEW BOSS."

C. A. Parker, new superintendent of repairs of the air mail, has turned the Maywood field into an up to date repair depot. All air mail ships are to be repaired at the local station from now on.

In Brazil.

An important aerial transport company has just been formed at Rio Grand de Sul for the purpose of assuring a regular transport service for passengers and freight between Rio Grande and various centers in the neighboring states. The machines for this service are of French manufacture.

Aeromarine "8" Will Be Choked Down to 160 H. P.

Valves Can Be Replaced Without Removing Engine

THE Aeromarine type U-S-D eight cylinder engine has just completed a successful fifty hour test by the engineering division at McCook field. This engine has a bore of 4¼ inches, a stroke of 6½ inches, and a total piston displacement of 738 cubic inches. The weight is 567 pounds dry. The normal power output is 190 horse power at 1,750 R. P. M., but the engine will be choked down to 160 horse power at 1,600 R. P. M. for training purposes. This engine possesses several original features of design. The water jackets of the two cylinder blocks are cast integral with the upper half of the crankcase. The cylinder sleeves are steel tubes which are inserted in the jackets from the top. A removable head is used for each cylinder block consisting of an aluminum casting with cored water passages and steel inserts for the valve seats. The removable head will undoubtedly prove a great convenience in the maintenance of this engine, as it can be removed for valve grinding in a very few minutes. It will also be possible to remove the head and replace it with another in which the valves have been ground without removing the engine from the airplane or keeping the airplane out of flying condition for more than two hours.

Bridge Open.

Smiles were spread over the commercial aviators at the Checkerboard flying field on West Roosevelt road, just west of the Desplaines river, last Monday when the Roosevelt bridge was thrown open to traffic. Roosevelt road is one of the most popular tourists road stretching out from Chicago. Tourists make business for the "$10 a ride" flyers. The road was closed for eight months. The Checkerboard field is used by pilots of the David L. Behncke company, the air mail service, and nearly all visiting pilots who enter Chicago. Airplane service "garages" are maintained on the field.

Parachute Jump.

Norman Elbe, a veteran parachute jumper, will thrill motorists who visit the Peterson road flying field this afternoon, by leaping from the cockpit of an airplane 3,000 feet above the earth. Elbe will be flown by Nimmo Black to the jumping altitude. The jumper will use a Floyd Smith life pack, many features of which have been selected by the army air service in building its parachute. The jump will occur at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Last Year's Work.

Airplanes of the Canadian air force during 1920 made 398 flights of a total mileage of 83,612 without a single death or serious injury to the flyers. Flying operations did not begin until late in August, but among the exploits carried out was an aerial trip from Halifax to Vancouver.

POWER WHEN YOU NEED IT!

There are times when your very life depends upon the snap of your motor. That's the exception. Nevertheless, hardly a day passes but that some incident arises when you wish your car had that additional power.

A Trindlized Motor is as Good as New. To Trindlize your motor means a complete rejuvenation. It will give it all the pep and snap it had the first day it came from the factory. If your motor is lazy, slow on the pick-up, lacks compression, pumps oil, fouls its plugs, has knocks or piston slaps, consumes gas or oil out of reason—it needs Trindlizing.

Trindl operates the largest shops in the world devoted exclusively to cylinder grinding, scored cylinder repairing, pistons, piston pins, rings, crank shaft grinding, connecting rod bearings and fly wheel starter gear repairing.

Insist upon your repair man sending your work to TRINDL. It is your guarantee of first-class work and rapid service. Look for the TRINDL service sign in the repair shop doing your work.

90% of all engine troubles easily prevented

Garage men and engineers report chief causes of common repair expense

"WHY do I have to spend so much on engine repairs?" You've asked yourself this question many a time. That's just the question we asked engineers and garage men all over the United States.

They report that seven preventable troubles—fouled spark plugs, burned-out bearings, scored cylinders, played-out piston rings, loose wrist pins, worn cam shaft, sticking or pitted valves—cause 90% of all repair expense. Almost always these troubles are caused by improper lubrication.

When subjected to the intense heat of the engine—200° to 1000° F.—ordinary oil forms black sediment. Sediment has no lubricating value. Avoid big repair expenses. Sediment is reduced 86% when you use Veedol, the lubricant that resists heat. (See the two bottles below).

With Veedol in your engine most serious engine troubles are prevented. Have your engine flushed out. Put in Veedol. Leading dealers have it in stock. Ask for a supply of Veedol today.

In announcing the Oldsmobile readjustment of prices we feel privileged to recall to public attention certain facts which have stood as examples of Oldsmobile policy on prices and values.

In December last, when we introduced the new 4-cylinder model 43-A, the price was at once acknowledged to be extraordinarily low, clearly predicated upon a material market much below December quotations.

Here Oldsmobile foresight, experience and resources made possible a value in keeping with the lowered manufacturing costs the public felt were to follow.

Again, on April 30th, when we announced the new eight-cylinder model 47, the same price policy inspired a public demand that exceeded the output of the great Oldsmobile plants at full production.

Now that material prices and labor costs and conditions have become leveled and stabilized, Oldsmobile policy readjusts prices to a further public advantage.

In actual performance, appearance and dependability, and in the refinements that have always expressed Oldsmobile quality, there is value nowhere even approached among moderate priced cars.

And Oldsmobile policy has continued to justify the deep public confidence that forms the greatest Oldsmobile asset.

A Pleasant Sunday Afternoon.

PROLOGUE.

History is a course over which many twosomes have played and are still playing . . . Consider Jonathan and David, Castor and Pollux, Corned Beef and Cabbage, Early and Late, Ham and Eggs, Liver and Bacon, Call and Settle . . . and that pride and mainstay of the Sunday Dinner—Roast Pork and Apple Sauce.

Of course the Potters always have a big, steaming Sunday dinner. Ma Potter says it wouldn't seem like Sunday without a big dinner; so she always cranks up a kitchen stove soon after the breakfast things are done and spends the best part of the day acquiring an indoor tan and an aching back getting up an enormous meal for which the family have no appetite, all being loaded with late breakfast.

This particular Sunday afternoon the Potters have just finished the time honored gorge . . .

Scene: Dining Room in Potter Flat.

Ma is wearily gathering up the remnants of the Roast Pork and Apple Sauce to put away for the cold Sunday evening indigestion party, better known as "just a little snack." Mamie and her friend, Alice, who had dinner with the family, are helping in a gingerly way to clear off the things. Pa is lying down on the couch with part of the paper over his face, trying to sleep off the evil effects . . . the Baby is sitting on the floor enthusiastically tearing the Sunday paper into small pieces, which he scatters with childish abandon all over the place. In the next room Bill's gentle voice may be heard.

BILL (at the telephone):
Hullo, hullo, gimme Rogers Park one-o-two-eight-three . . . no, not Hyde Park, ROGERS PARK . . . Yes . . . I did drop the nickel . . . I did, too . . . Hullo, who's this? . . . I want Rogers Park one-o-two-eight-three . . . O, is Dorothy there? . . . Yes, I'll hold the wire . . . Dorothy? . . . Hullo, guess who this is . . . no, this isn't Jack, it's Bill . . . Waddye doing tonight, huh? . . . O! . . . O, you are? . . . O! . . . O, I was just wonderin', that's all, just wonderin' . . . yeh, I hope you have a nice time . . . g'by (bangs receiver).
Darn the luck, that's just my fate—
I call up late, and she's gotta date.

MAMIE (with true sisterly affection):
Expect her to sit around and wait
Till you get ready to make a date?
You seem to think the whole darn town
Is full of girls just sitting aroun'
Hoping you'll call 'em up some day . . .
How do you fellows get that way?

BILL (sarcastically):
Watta you hanging around here for?
Won't nobody take you out no more?

MAMIE (triumphantly):
Don't worry, sonny, just you wait—
Alice and I have a double date;
We're all going out for a ride, you bet;
We're sitting pretty, we're all set.

(Pa squirms uneasily on the couch . . . They may be all set, but he isn't . . . he's trying to sleep.)

BILL: Goin' out riding tonight in a car?
Yes, you are, like fun you are.
MAMIE: Any old day you think I don't.
BILL: Aw, you're bluffin' . . . I betcha don't.
That guy you got is too darn cheap.

Cut out the gab, I wanna sleep . . .

ALICE: Tee hee.

(Bill glares at Alice and then goes back to the phone. Mamie and Alice go into the living room, where we can now see Alice is one of those dear girls who know they look better in restaurants where they have rose shaded lights and who always chum around with peaches like Mamie . . . why is this thus? . . . do the dizzies carry the dumbbells along for background, or do the dumbbells attach themselves to the dizzies in hopes of catching some of the eligibles on the rebound? . . . Call for Mr. Einstein . . . call for Mr. Freud . . .)

MA (talking to herself):
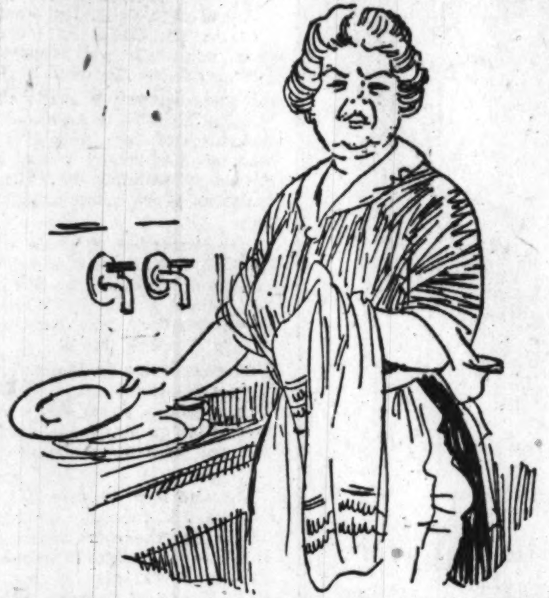
The least she might do would be help clear off the table, but girls these days are so afraid they'll hurt themselves carrying one plate into the kitchen at a time. If they had to work like I did when I was her age they'll have a something to holler about BROTHER STOP PULLING THAT TABLECLOTH after bringing her friends here to dinner too the least she might do is give me a hand but that's the way they all are these days . . . (exit into kitchen, grumbling).



"Girls these days are so afraid they'll hurt themselves."

MAMIE (to Alice for Bill's benefit):
He's calling some one else, I think;
Who'd ever fall for such a gink? . . .

ALICE: Tee hee.

BILL: You're all alike, you make me sick . . .
You're glad to grab off any hick.
Lookit your latest rummy, Joe . . .
If he ain't an oil can . . . I'll say so.
(in phone) Hello . . . hello . . . hello . . . hello . . . SAY, I dropped one nickel; waddye think this is, the baby's bank? . . . gimme my number . . . hello . . . is Grace there? This is Bill Potter . . . O! . . . O, she isn't? Do you know when she's coming back? Not until late? . . . O! . . . O! . . . that's all right, never mind, you needn't tell her I called . . . G'by . . . (bangs receiver).
And she's gone, too . . . if that ain't tough,
I didn't call up soon enough . . .

MAMIE (sweetly):
She probably waited all day, poor thing,
Hoping and praying you'd give her a ring . . .
Ha ha, ha ha, I bet she did;
You've got 'em dizzy about you, kid . . .

ALICE: Tee hee.

BILL: Are you gonna hang around all day?
I wish your rummy would take you away,
But he won't till you eat . . . he's just that cheap.

PA: Stop your battling . . . I wanna sleep . . .

MA (in the kitchen, still talking to herself as she bathes the dishes with one hand and watches the Baby with the other):
I never saw such kids for fighting with each other all the time you wouldn't think they were related at all GET AWAY FROM THAT STOVE always scrapping and squabbling if that girl came out here and got hands in dishwater once in a while she'd have more on her mind than fellows O well I guess they're only young once and if she doesn't have a good time now she'll never have it later GET AWAY FROM THAT COUCH CAN'T YOU SEE YOUR FATHER IS TRYING TO SLEEP I never saw such a baby for getting into trouble it would take three to mind him Mamie might help a little bit instead of sitting around in there jawing with William there I guess that's as clean as I can get the place I wonder if I can sit down and rest for just five minutes once . . .

MAMIE (to Bill):
When we're riding around tonight in the car
We'll think of you here all alone . . . har! har!

ALICE: Tee hee.

BILL: Those goofs you've got are two flat wheels . . .
You'll be riding tonight on your rubber heels.
MAMIE: O, I guess not.
BILL: O, I guess yes.
MAMIE: You won't get a date . . . Your Sunday's a mess.

(Meanwhile the Baby has crawled up Pa's leg as he lies napping and is punching his finger through the newspaper over Pa's face. After several unsuccessful tries he finally locates one of Pa's eyes . . . Pa jumps up suddenly from his sleep, throwing the Baby off on the floor . . . WOW WOW WOW . . . Mother to the rescue with blood in her eyes . . .)

MA: What did you do to that poor little child?

PA (who doesn't know yet what it's all about):
Wh-wh-wh-why,
Who stuck me in the eye?

MA: To strike your child with such a blow . . .
You're a great big brute, and I'll tell you so . . .

PA: Why, I din't hit him, honestly, Ma.

MA (to Baby):
Come right away from your nasty Pa;
Let mother kiss it (kiss, kiss), that's right . . .
Now don't you go near him again tonight.

And so the merry Sunday afternoon passes . . . and Bill telephones all in vain, while his list of prospects gets smaller and smaller . . . and Pa gives up all hopes of sleeping . . . and more time passes, and lo, it is supper time, which comes early tonight because Ma and Pa are going to the movie, which starts at eight o'clock, according to Ma, and eight-thirty, according to Pa . . . they never have settled it yet . . . and just as in Orphant Annie's house, "after the supper things is done" . . . only they're stacked up until morning . . . they "all set around and has the mostest fun," as, for instance . . .

MAMIE (going to window):
They oughta be here now pretty soon.

BILL: They oughta be . . . They've been coming since noon.

MAMIE: You're gonna stay in the flat, old scout,
And watch the kid while Ma goes out.
Ain't that a treat?
Won't that be sweet?

BILL (desperately):
I'll call Madge up; I'll bet she's in.

MAMIE: Go do it, kid . . . I hope you win.
(looking out window)
O, here comes the boys . . . but where's the car?
(to Alice) They said they would sure have a car, but they haven't . . .

BILL (singing):
Twinkle, twinkle, little car,
How I wonder where you is?

(Ma and Pa are hurrying to catch the movie show which starts at eight o'clock, according to Ma, and eight-thirty, according to Pa. Mamie and Alice go out with the boys, who, true to Bill's prediction, are going to take them riding on their rubber heels . . . but Bill, poor Bill has been told he must stay and take care of the Baby . . . what a fall is this, my brethren.)

BILL (the final effort):
But lissen, Ma, I can't wait;
I gotta date, Ma, I gotta date.

MA: Date or no date, you'll stay right here . . .
I've got a date with your Pa, my dear . . .

BILL (desperately):
But I gotta date . . . honest and true . . .

PA: Did yu hear what your mother just said to you?
You watch the baby while we're at the show . . .
(to Ma) C'mon, let's go . . . c'mon, let's go . . .
(Exits with Ma.)

BILL (talking to himself):
I'm gonna call up Madge, anyway, and if she's in I'll take her out and get somebody to watch the Baby. (Goes to phone.) Hullo, hullo, gimme Oakland three-six-nine-eight-five . . . hullo, hullo, is Madge there? O, hullo, Madge, this is Bill. Watcha doin' tonight, huh? . . . What? . . . Huh? . . . O, you are . . . O! . . . O, I see . . . O, nothing; I was just wonderin', thass all, just wonderin' . . . g'by, just wonderin' . . . g'by.

(Hangs up receiver slowly with dumb misery on his face . . . it's all over now; that was the last chance.)

BABY: Pwitty tel'fone, pwitty tel'fone.
BILL: Aw, shut up.

(And that's that.)

Think of it! The famous Velie Six model 48 now—$1,585

Other models in the Velie 48 series have been reduced proportionately. All of these Velie prices are now lower than have ever prevailed before.

Four late June brides were Mrs. Hibbard Casselberry, Mrs. Darrell Sully Boyd, Mrs. Ralph Ward Starrett, and Mrs. John Stivers Rennie. They all were married on Saturday, June 25. Mrs. Casselberry formerly was Miss Mary Elizabeth Leonard. Her marriage to Mr. Casselberry, a son of Mrs. William E. Casselberry of 1245 Astor street and Lake Forest, took place at 4 o'clock in Christ church, Winnetka, the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhardt officiating. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Leonard, in Winnetka.

The marriage of Miss Leota Crilly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Crilly, and John Stivers Rennie, son of Mrs. John R. Turner of Chicago, took place at 8:30 o'clock Saturday evening at the residence of the bride's parents, 5544 Woodlawn avenue.

Miss Emily Matz, daughter of Mrs. Rudolph Matz of Hubbard Woods, was married to Darrell Sully Boyd, son of Mrs. George Boyd of Winnetka, at 5 o'clock in the Winnetka Congregational church. The Rev. J. S. W. Davies read the service. A reception at the residence of the bride's mother followed the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd will live in Winnetka.

Health, Beauty, and Fame—Can Youth Ask More?

By Mme. X.

We must admit it; it is a conviction growing in strength after much study, a good deal of criticism, and with every desire to prove the contrary. This reluctant conclusion is that the youth of this particular era is far ahead of any previous generation in both mental and physical development.

As the writer has motored up and down the crowded highways which radiate from Chicago she has studied the various types of humanity whizzing by, and has been struck with the extreme beauty of the young people, especially the girls, in the hurrying motors. The regular features, radiant complexions (fast driving blows away paint and powder), flashing eyes, alert expressions, lovely wind blown hair, all combine to make a picture of splendid, vigorous, highly developed youth which would rejoice the hearts of the ancient Greeks who were the first to teach the world the possibilities of beauty in the human body.

Never since the times of these same Greeks has the dress of women been so wholesome, so unconfined, so becoming. The short skirts and sleeves, the uncorseted bodies, the bobbed hair, the diaphanous materials, even the rolled down stockings so much criticized, make for health and beauty as no attire has done since Calydonian Atalanta raced across the meadows of Bœotia.

In the light of the present it seems impossible that we should ever return to the hampering, insanitary garments of a few years ago when tight corsets, stifling collars, long skirts, ponderous coiffures, and stiff materials imprisoned and exhausted the body of the average woman.

Perils of Too Much Motoring.

It is to be hoped that the minds which inhabit these fine young bodies have kept pace with them, in which case this arriving generation may avoid the fat, overgrown, middle age so prevalent nowadays, especially among motorists.

The heavy shoulders, the massive busts, the well defined bay windows the generally prevalent indications of self-indulgence observable among such a large proportion of the motorists who are no longer young indicate that prosperity came too quickly to many a man and woman. Suddenly removed from the daily necessity of active work, with an unaccustomed supply of the wherewithal to buy food and drink and, above all, an automobile, these bulky mortals have permitted the temple of the soul to become a mass of adipose tissue. Let the young people of the day take warning!

From observation of nearby youth, again especially of the feminine gender, the scribe ventures to say that an increase of spiritual stature has kept pace with an undoubted increase in bodily growth. In the days of long ago, when we were young, active and remunerative employment outside the bounds of the home was almost unknown among the daughters of the well to do. Therefore many a good brain went to seed and many a young frame developed anemia and other physical manifestations of unemployed bodies and bored minds.

Miss Marion Strobel—Poet.

There were among us, for instance, no such young poets as Miss Marion Strobel, daughter of Charles L. Strobel, who has already made for herself a name and a place in the realms of literature. For two or three years she has been assistant editor with Miss Harriet Monroe of the well known magazine, Poetry, one of Chicago's most distinguished institutions. During this time she has contributed many interesting poems to this periodical.

She belongs definitely to the new school of poetry of which Miss Amy Lowell is such a famous exponent. She does not emulate Miss Lowell in outward phases of the latter's greatness, for Miss Strobel is a slender brunette, with brilliant dark eyes, a radiant smile, curly hair, and is what the slangy would term as decidedly "easy to look at."

Neither is she a pale, wan devotee of the muse. She is as good in athletics as in writing. She is a capital tennis player and an accomplished swimmer, as well as a most desirable partner in the dance. All this description is a prelude to telling you that two stories from her pen are coming out in a couple of well known periodicals within a short time. The first one will appear in the August McClure's, while a second one will be published soon after in the Smart Set.

Miss Isabella Holt—Novelist.

No, we did not do this sort of thing in my day. The beautiful were never literary, nor were the literary ever beautiful.

Nor is Miss Strobel the only one of her kind. There's that charming Miss Isabella Holt, of a later vintage, speaking from the point of social debut, than the former, whose first novel is being brought out by Macmillan's in the early autumn. She, too, is a most personable young woman and as clever as she is good looking. Or one can with equal force put it the other way and say that she is as good looking as she is clever. Either way would mean unusual qualities in both directions.

Miss Sylvia Shaw—Sculptor.

Still another example of the progress of the race since the dark ages in which we first saw the light is Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shaw's daughter, Miss Sylvia Shaw. She has just returned from many experiences in Europe. In her innovation trunk, among other nondutiable articles, she brings home a nice fresh bunch of French laurels. These she plucked from the Paris Salon, where a terra cotta relief of hers was accepted and placed on exhibit.

Her design was both charming and original. The panels are to be a part of a garden piece. Her scheme was to depict those saints who were good to animals.

On one of these panels she portrays St. Jerome taking the thorn out of the lion's foot, while the other one shows St. Giles, who, when he went hunting, was turned from a hunter into a saint by the timid doe which took refuge in his bosom when menaced by his bow and arrow. In the middle ages saints were the only anti-cruelty agencies known in the scheme of things.

Domesticating the Airplane.

Miss Shaw is more than an artist. She is an indomitable young woman. The night before she was to send her work to the jury which passed on the things to be exhibited in the salon she learned that her frieze had been destroyed in an accident to the kiln in which it was being baked. Undismayed, she hurried to the furnace, retrieved her original molds, got the desired colors from the color shop, and spent that whole night in her studio preparing and tinting her casts for exhibit. They arrived so late at the jury headquarters the next day that they were tucked away in a dark corner, where it seemed that in all probability they would be quite overlooked. Therefore great was her surprise when she learned that they had been accepted and placed in the Paris salon, the goal of so many a young and aspiring artist.

Her most thrilling experience was flying from Paris to London to her friend Miss Gladys High's wedding last April. She and Miss Janet Pauling, together with a young Englishman, chartered an airplane and made the trip from takeoff to landing place in an hour and a half.

Her description of the flight is vivid and captivating. She bought a new hat for the wedding a half hour before starting, and both young women arrived without a feather or a curl out of place. Within a quarter of an hour after setting foot in London they were at the church waiting for the bridal party to arrive. We stay at home. Americans are certainly "coming in on the freight train" when it comes to domesticating the airplane, offspring of our native genius.

The Son of the Family.

Miss Shaw is settling down now to life in her parents' charming country place, Ragdale, one of the most picturesque estates near Chicago. She will soon establish her studio there and continue her chosen career as a sculptor. Like her literary contemporaries of whom I have written above, she, too, is uncommon fair to look upon. No, we didn't make 'em like that in my youth. The race is certainly improving.

The Chicago literary and artistic hive is not humming only with queen bees. There's young Johnny Weaver, a lively youth, son of the late John Van Alstyne Weaver. He is sojourning for the moment with a houseful of other young men who are keeping bachelor hall in a comfortable old residence at the entrance to the campus of Lake Forest college. He is a Chicago born poet. His first volume of poetry, "In American," published by Knopf, appeared this spring, attracted much favorable attention, and brought him more than average renown.

Genius and the Stockyards.

He is one more proof of the sometimes suspected fact that there is something in the stockyards perfumed air of our city which inspires artists, poets, and musicians to work of such a flavor as to interest and attract attention all over the world.

London, for example, has just discovered Edgar Lee Masters and his "Spoon River Anthology," and is talking about him and his work at a great rate. One critic comments on the fact that in a community of 500 souls such as Masters describes there should be so many murders and suicides and so much adultery.

A contemporary of Mr. Masters, Vachell Lindsay, not of Chicago, but of Illinois, is also having a great success in London society, where his recitations of his own poems are regarded as the most extraordinary performances presented there in a long time.

Apropos of literature, there are two books much talked of at the moment, one of which has a special interest to Chicagoans. It is "Growth of the Soil," the work of a Norwegian genius, Knut Hamsun, who at one period of his career was a street car conductor in Chicago.

MRS. RALPH WARD STARRETT PHOTO—©—MOFFETT.

Miss Olive Bulley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bulley of Kenilworth, became the bride of Ralph Ward Starrett of Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Starrett of Wilmington, N. C., at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night at the Kenilworth Union church. A reception at the residence of the bride's parents followed the ceremony.

The other is "The World's Illusion," by a German, Wasserman, a two volume work. Both are of cosmic quality.

Neither of these novels could by any possibility have been produced by an American. It takes a people who have struggled against fearful odds, on whom the bitter winds of adversity have blown, who have been victims of cruel nature and still more cruel man, to evolve such strong food for the readers of fiction.

We Celebrate Our Independence.

This summer is particularly rich in three day holidays. This Fourth o' July, for instance, is a triplet festa, and thousands of happy families are enabled to make protracted excursions to distant points. All the nearby summer colonies have made extensive plans for celebrating it, plans in which sports have a prominent place.

The Lake Forest polo program is a particularly lively one, offering, as it does, a three day battle between the Onwentsia, North Shore, Indianapolis, and Sixth regiment teams. There is no prettier spectacle in this part of the world than these tilts on the Onwentsia polo field. The only onlookers who perhaps gaze upon them with somewhat tempered joy are the wives, sisters, and mothers of the players, to whom the games always have a personal equation. The fierce mêlées and dashing charges, the lively whacks and plunging ponies arouse in onlookers the same delightful apprehension which used to fill the Roman forum with so much emotion in the days of the gladiatorial contests.

Last week's battle between the Onwentsia and St. Louis teams was rendered especially ticklish by the rain soaked condition of the field, which made the going highly dangerous. Bud Raber is the captain of the home team this year.

On a day like tomorrow, dedicated especially to patriotism, it is meet to direct our thoughts with especial fervor to that large army of war heroes who, to our everlasting shame, stand at the door of the nation, awaiting the fulfillment of those promises we made so eagerly four years ago.

What can you do about it?

Bombard every legislator within reach with letters and telegrams urging the fullest kind of relief measures, measures which shall insure the best care for those suffering from the after effects of active service. If these legislators can be brought to feel that the security of their tenure of office rests on their attitude on this question, they will take action; not otherwise, it appears.

In the Wake of the Drought.

Among the dire things prophesied about the effects of the dry laws when the drought was inaugurated was that there would be no more of the gay, big dinners and parties which used to be such a feature of social life. In a measure this gloomy prediction has been verified. It takes a cellar both deep and wide to provide the requisite cheer of the sparkling, double back action kind with which we were wont to light the social fires at gatherings of the clans in any number. So most hosts confine their entertainments to smaller companies ranging from ten to twenty in number. Twenty is a large dinner these days.

Last week saw, however, two entertainments at Lake Forest on an old time scale as to the number of guests. On Wednesday Mrs. Charles B. Pike gave a dinner for about fifty guests. It was a surprise affair for her husband and designed to rob the conclusion of his first half century of much of its terror. There is no house so perfectly adapted for entertaining as Pike's lovely Italian mansion. Its high ceilinged rooms, stone halls, and lovely gardens were all at their best that evening.

The other entertainment was a supper of thirty-two which Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson gave on Friday evening in honor of two recent bridal couples, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Winter and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sturges. The Tysons, Winters, and Sturgeses are all spending the summer at Lake Forest.

The supper was an al fresco feast. The tables were set in the friendly Aldis gardens under the old oaks and spreading apple trees.

Mrs. Tyson had as her house guests last week Mrs. Francis King of Alma, Mich., and Mrs. Charles Norton and the latter's son, McKim Norton, of New York and North East Harbor, Me.

American Girls in Florence.

Miss Mary Nixon, a well known Chicagoan, who until the war had made her home in Florence, Italy, is planning to return to the Umbrian capital and reopen her school there in a new setting, a villa on the slopes of Fiesole. This is one more of the signs marking the return to normal conditions of the war torn world. She is sailing in September, and takes with her Miss Daphne Field, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Field; Miss Florence Addington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keene Addington; Miss Josephine Underwood, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Underwood of Evanston; and Miss Louise Rodgers, daughter of John J. Rodgers.

Among the many Chicago girls who have been introduced, so to speak, to Italy and its art and history by Miss Nixon are Miss Mabel Linn, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Donald Forgan, Mrs. Donald McPherson, Mrs. Perry Shepard, Mrs. Edgar Freeman, Miss Mildred McCormick, and Mrs. David Hamilton (the latter was Miss Margaret Bentley).

There is a rumor that Mrs. John A. Carpenter is planning to spend next winter in Europe. This will be a serious blow to Chicago's winter plans if it be true. There is no more active and interesting member of the world of fashion and art than Mrs. Carpenter. Her two chief concerns, the Arts club and the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, will be especially stricken.

Wedded to New York.

On the other hand, there is a possibility that her sister-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham, who spent last winter in France, may return to Chicago and again become the delightful and energetic member of society that she was when she left us eighteen months ago.

The Rosecranz Baldwins, who left here at the same time that the young Joseph Winterbothams did, are so firmly wedded to New York that they will probably never come back to their native city. Their third son arrived in this "world of sin and sorrow" a month ago. They are spending the summer at the seashore, Easthampton, Long Island, I think it is. They are selling the house that they acquired last year on the far east side of New York, as they find it too small for their increasing family.

Many Chicagoans are seeking the refreshment afforded by sea breezes in a torrid season like the present one. Among these fellow citizens are the Watson F. Blairs, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Miss Keep, Frank Cramer, the George Paysons, the William Cunninghams, Mrs. R. Hall McCormick, and Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, who are all scattered along the New England coast from Cape Cod to Bar Harbor.

Indifferent to tropical conditions are Mr. and Mrs. Frederic C. Bartlett, who are making a ten day trip to southern Florida to superintend the construction of a new house they are putting up there and where they plan to spend their winters. Floridians, however, always say there is no cooler place than Florida.

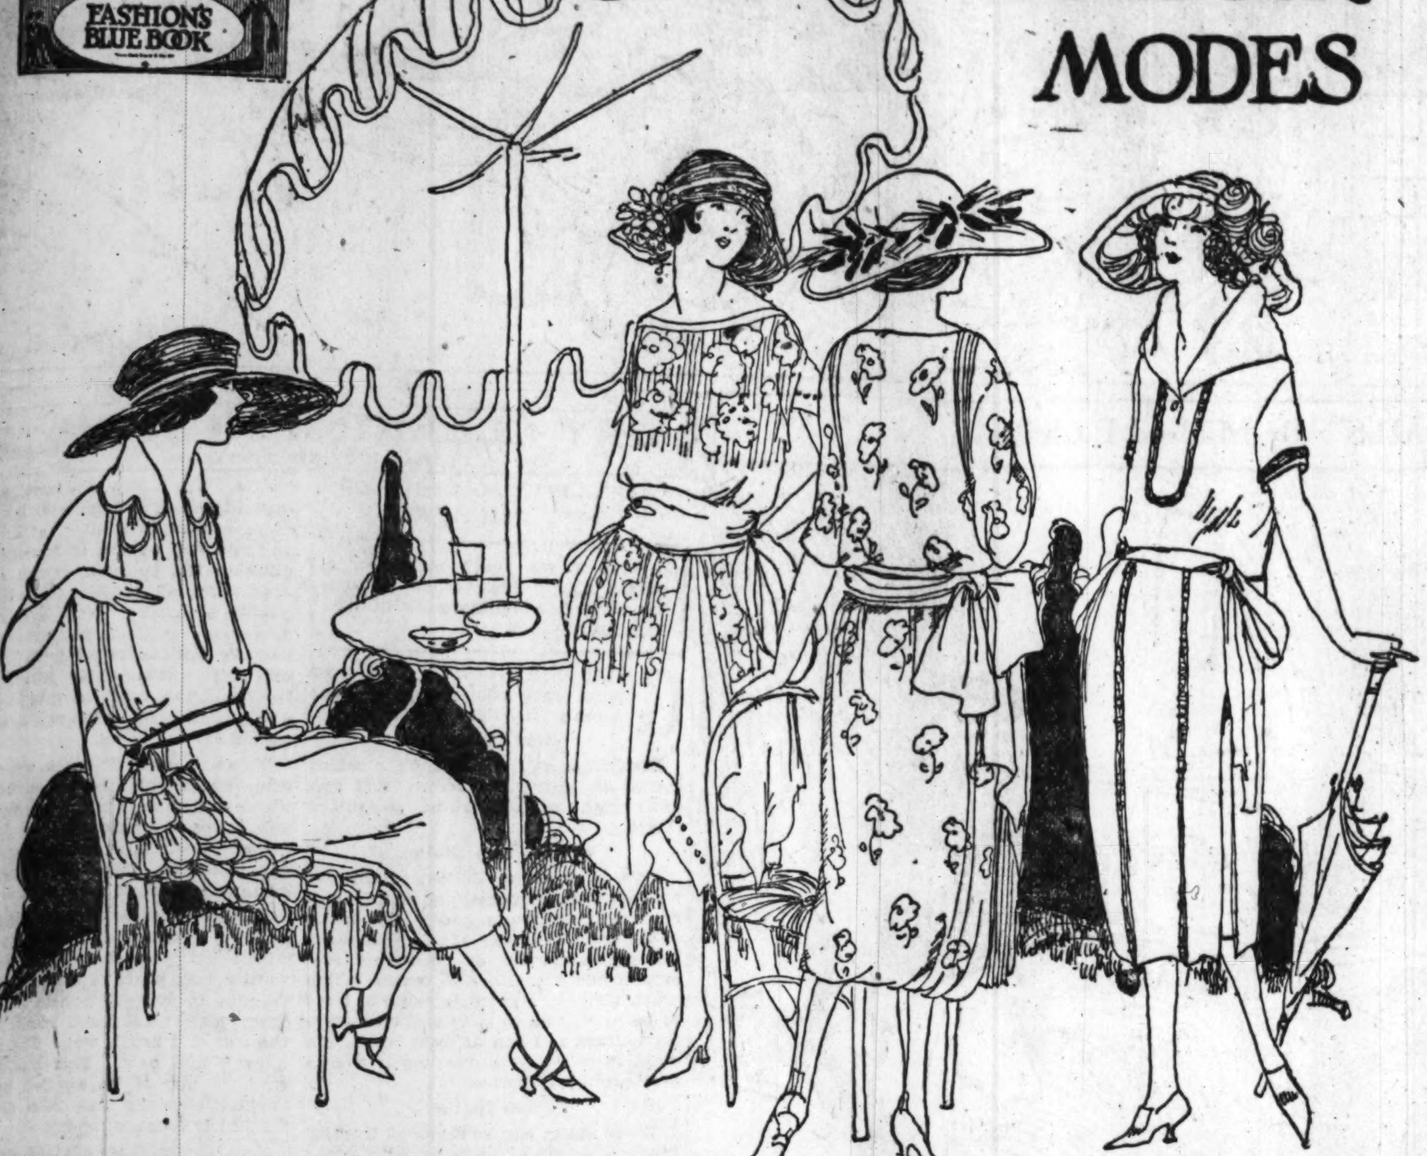
ORGANDIES AND CREPES LEAD THE SUMMER MODES

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK



CONFIDENT that the French maid is waiting for her when she gets home, the lady at the left sits recklessly on the thicket of petals of which the back of her mauve crepe frock is composed. These petals, as well as sleeves and neckline, are bound with pink satin. Next comes a pale green organdy, embroidered in silver, and, third, a turquoise blue georgette appliqued with white velvet roses echoed in the voluminous sash. Last is a frock of white crepe de chine trimmed only with drawn work and with a bit of white georgette at the neck.

BY CORINNE LOWE.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A certain young college man once confided to me that girls were more girls in the summer time. This was a profound observation on the part of a victim of dance partners who had evidently insisted upon talking to him about fauna and peace treaties when he would have liked to—well, just talk. For summer clothes are always more feminine than winter ones, and this season they are superlatively so.

The fact of it is that these summery frocks of 1921 are a reform school for the learned young woman. Let her put on one of these full skirted organdies with its prim little bodice draped perhaps by fichu or cape; let her talk under the liberal shade of a huge picture hat of Leghorn, Neapolitan, or horse hair, give her a constant glimpse of her feet in dainty strapped slippers and she will find herself cheerily chattering instead of conversing. Clothes, as we all realize, have a strong psychological suggestion, and no topic could possibly brace itself against a present day organdy; no "ism" could conceivably survive the strong fumes of Victorianism set up by models of the year.

Skirts of many of the frocks—particularly the organdies and taffetas—are extremely wide. No matter about their altitude, they billow out about the wearer, and are assisted in this amiable task by ruffles, flounces, ribbons, and every manner of trimming. You feel surprised when you see the wearer of one of these getting into her motor. It seems an anachronism. She should be lisping, "Please, sir, has the stage coach arrived?"

Organdy is undoubtedly the most popular of all the summer fabrics. This is hardly a news item. It is almost as settled as something you read in the encyclopedia. Yet, if possible, the prejudice is more confirmed this summer than at any previous time. The reason for this is plain. No other material lends itself so readily to the inverted tulip of a skirt upon which fashion insists.

The most popular shade of the elaborate organdy is mauve. Next in favor come pale green and yellow. Upon these ruffles and flounces thrive as they have not done for many years. Some of the most extreme models are ruffled from waist to hem of skirt, and then, lest you remain in any reasonable doubt of the frock's temperament, several flounces appear, capewise, about the neck line. This idea of repeating the skirt ruffle or flounce on the corsage is indeed familiar. I saw it illustrated the other day by a green taffeta dance frock trimmed with two wide flounces of silver lace in a way that made one think immediately of the skirt of a Velasquez infanta. The bodice of this—prim indeed—was finished by a flounce of the silver lace forming sleeves and achieving what was in reality a tiny cape.

Appliqued flowers are used again this summer, but newer and more fashionable in the organdy thesis are the myriads of tiny triangles which are often massed on the skirt. These are enough to keep one French maid going, for, as may be inferred, almost any occasion proves unfriendly to their equilibrium. However, they are one of the smartest things to do about your organdy frock, and so, in spite of their tendency to crumple, folks will wear 'em.

These petals or triangles are, of course, not confined to costumes of organdy. They are to be located on many of the crepes. And we find the reckless nature at the left of the page braving disaster to a thicket of crepe petals by actually sitting down. These petals are of the same fancy crepe which makes the gown. The color is mauve, and to this the binding of each petal—a delicate pink—provides a contrast reinforced by the narrow girdle. The sleeves, scalloped collar, and neck line are also bound with pink.

But all the organdy frocks are not made with the flaring and voluminous skirts which I have mentioned. To some models the handkerchief tunics or other drapery to which one is accustomed in the crepe de chine frocks prove an irresistible temptation. It is to this lure that the second dress from the left responds. This frock occurs in pale green organdy embroidered elaborately in silver thread and disclosing under its panels an underskirt of self-color taffeta. The wide sash is of the same material as the underskirt. With this is worn a hat of pale green Neapolitan straw trimmed in the most Bacchanalian manner with a cluster of black grapes.

Let it not be forgotten, either! The Volstead act has not been enforced in millinery and frocks. For every bit of the essence of style has been pressed from the jocund grape. This trimming is a favored one for hats, and one finds a bunch of grapes frequently accenting the corsage of crepe de chine or organdy dress.

The combination of velvet and georgette is a new one for summer wear. That it is a highly successful experiment is proved by a number of models reviewed the past weeks. In the third frock from the left we encounter white velvet roses appliqued upon a dress of turquoise colored georgette. The wide sash is also of white velvet, while the plaited sections showing at the sides of the skirt and at the front of the corsage are of white georgette. A Neapolitan hat of natural color straw is faced with turquoise blue georgette and wreathed in wheat. And, by the way, so extensive is the use of wheat this summer that every other garden party hat looks like a harvest home celebration.

Another of those crepe de chines! There is an excusable petulance in the tone of one's typewriter as it records this, the twelve thousandth model of this fabric reviewed since Christmas. However, by exercising some self-control, we proceed to chronicle the fact that this is an admirable little model for vacation mornings. The color is white, and the only trimming is the fashionable drawn work. A vestee and rolling collar of white georgette emphasizes again the modern hunger for this combination of material. A large floppy brimmed hat of French blue georgette trimmed with field flowers gives the only note of color.

Ecru is fashionable in lace, and the preferred companion of this is black. One finds a redingote of lace in that tint opening perhaps over black satin or flounces of it outspread over a black taffeta petticoat, made in true Spanish fashion. Equally successful, too, is the alliance of black lace and ecru material.

When the real summery frock of this neutral tint—either ecru or beige—is carried out in batiste or organdy it is frequently trimmed with jade green or with blue. One of such frocks in batiste developed with the extravagantly wide skirt of the mode, and with a bewitching little bodice draped by an old time fichu had, for example, ribbon motifs of mingled blue and green ribbon appearing at irregular intervals over the skirt. The color effect was charming, particularly so as the wearer, borrowing from Paris the fashion of many bracelets, had selected a band of emeralds for the place of honor among a number of pearl and diamond ones. It needed only a picturesque Leghorn hat faced with light green and trimmed with blue flowers to complete the portrait charm of the costume.

The Colonial House with Some Novel and Pleasant Adaptations

By Anita de Campi.

SOONER or later every architect who designs homes has a try at the broad, shallow house which we call colonial, which the English call Georgian, and which the French, who had it before either England or America, say frankly is derived from the Italian renaissance. The architect is as much interested in the problem which such a house presents as in its merits. It gives privacy, dignity, beauty, and symmetry; it is, in some ways, the handiest type of house; but, unless carefully handled, it is likely to be as obvious and devoid of personality as a paving block.

The designer of this dwelling has avoided those difficulties in an interesting fashion. The main part of the ground floor of the house is 42 feet broad and 20 deep. The central third of this block is jutted forward six feet; and from this even division of space and slight projection come a whole list of novel and pleasant adaptations.

The little entrance porch takes up one corner of the projection, and opens into a hall which gives the visitor his first agreeable surprise. Instead of running back through the house, this hall runs along a part of the front, and gives direct access to every part of the building. Straight in front is the dining room, and at the right the living room. At the left is the door to a little toilet and lavatory; next to that, the stairs leading to the upper story; while beyond the stairs a door leads to the basement and the kitchen. A more compact, space saving arrangement would be hard to imagine.

The living room, as in ordinary colonial, runs clear across one end of the house, and is lighted from three sides. It is a fine big room, 13x19 feet. The fireplace is in the outside wall, and at one side of it is a French door leading to a pergola porch. This, of course, can be turned into an inclosed porch if desired, but if that is done the living room windows should be enlarged.

The dining room occupies the back of the middle third of the house and overlooks the garden. It is big enough to accommodate a good sized party—14x12 feet. Passing through one corner of the pantry, you reach the kitchen, 12x13 feet 6 inches. This room is lighted from two sides; it has a place for storage as well as the regular pantry, is fully equipped with cabinets, and enjoys the further convenience of a covered entrance porch containing the ice box.

Upstairs are four bedrooms. One is large, occupying the entire space above the living room, and fitted out with a fireplace. The other three are somewhat less in size. There is also an ample bathroom, all chambers are provided with closets, and two other closets open on the hall.

This dwelling is built with a strong wood frame, covered with stucco on metal lath. The outer wall is back plastered, thus making what is really a reinforced concrete. The interior plaster likewise is laid on metal lath, and in this case gypsum plaster is used. The asphalt, asbestos, or metal shingles of the roof can be either green or red, as circumstances and the taste of the builder dictate.

So constructed, the house is as enduring as it is unusual, and is remarkably cheap to heat and maintain. It is likewise a dwelling of uncommon beauty. The cool gray of the stucco is enlivened by courses of brick at the steps and porches, the arched openings to the entrance porch are attractive, and the window on the staircase landing is a pleasing feature of the front of the house.

Silk Stockings by Antoinette Donnelly

RAISING silk hosiery to a useful and beautiful old age is every woman's business these days, when everybody wears them and their high cost still remains an item which in any other age would forbid their so general use. But where's the one to throw the first stone at this seeming extravagance when unquestionably a silk stocking is to the foot and ankle what lines in a dress are to the figure?

How to make them last, so that their work of beautifying may go on indefinitely?

First, then, you should know that your silk stockings are the snob members of the family wash, and their aloofness should be encouraged. What is good for the rest of the wash may be death to your silk stockings. A separate washday, when your undivided attention may be given them, is recommended; otherwise they are apt to suffer.

How to Wash Silk Stockings.

You should not soak white or colored silk stockings. They should be washed out quickly in warm water and a good white soap and rinsed well in clear water. Then put them in a coarse towel and wring them out as dry as possible before hanging up to dry. And do not hang them in the sun to dry. Neither should you iron them. The same recipe may be used for washing silk gloves as well.

If you follow these instructions your colored and white stockings will never fade, nor yellow, nor spot, and they will dry quickly.

A smart trick with black silk stockings to prolong the life of them is to soak them over night in cold water before wearing them the first time.

Again, wash them out after each wearing. A light wash and rinsing is all that is necessary.

The Act of Donning.

In the daily dressing of the foot the work of saving stockings may go on. The Jacob's ladder, which is the beginning of the end of hosiery, is often caused by the wrong way of slipping the stocking on.

You should not sit down with stocking held at full length and work your foot into it. If you do, your big toe or some rough epidermis on your foot will jab the tender silken threads, loosen one, and start it on a marathon run impossible to catch up with.

Instead, somewhat the same principle as putting on a glove is required to avoid trouble.

First you "boot the stocking," the official way of expressing the act of donning stockings to preserve them.

Slip the thumbs inside the top of the stocking and gather it nimbly with the fingers right down to the toe, holding the gathering and stretching it slightly at ankle and toe to allow the foot to slip right into it without running against the leg part of the stocking. Hold the gathering until the toe is in place, and then gradually loosen the gathering as the foot requires.

Other Run Preventions.

The double welt at the top of the silk stocking is there to fasten garters to. Fasten them below and you will have a run in no time. Also, get the garter straight with the weave of the stockings.

And get the seam at back straight in the middle of the back of the leg, or you will have an untidy and sometimes disfiguring line.

A protection some women take is to sew over the toe of the stocking a piece of narrow, fine tape to keep the toe from breaking through. It is not only the hole that results and makes trouble but with silk stockings, when broken in any place, the trouble extends in runs.

Again, you may reinforce the toe by a darning cross stitch. At the heel, of course, this cannot be done. But a saving trick at heels is to paste a tiny piece of velvet inside the shoe heel to prevent the friction from low shoes. Many of the good stockings carry reinforced heels to take care of this friction.

Shoe and Stocking Sizes.

Buying hosiery of the right size is important. Too short stockings will not only ruin the fabric but the shape of the toes, too.

If you wear a 2, 2½, or 3 shoe you should buy an 8½ stocking; 3½ or 4 shoe, size 9 in stockings; 5, 5½, or 6 shoe calls for 9½ stocking; 6½ or 7 calls for No. 10 size stocking; for larger feet there are 10½ size stockings and what are called outside sizes for heavy women are made to correspond with the shoe size but have larger calf and knee.

The seamed stocking is a more shapely stocking. It fits more snugly around the ankle. The seamless hosiery is made as large at the ankle as at the top and is simply pressed into shape over a board, which explains why it wrinkles around the ankles after wearing and washing.

"A Stitch in Time."

About the proverbial stitch in time you need no word of advice from me. But maybe you do not know that at the majority of the stocking departments of the big stores women are employed to darn and mend, and with a fine crochet needle and silk thread they can repair a run so cleverly you can hardly detect it. If you can handle a crochet needle you may save on this mending feature.

Perpendicular stripes lend a certain slimness to legs and ankles; lace and ornate patterned stockings require a perfect ankle beneath them, and even then should be worn only on the occasion appropriate, which is not on shopping expeditions nor at business.

Black stockings, which nowadays are good form with any colored shoe, are the sure and safe and best bet for a foot and leg and ankle that cannot be entered in the "slim" race.

BRIDE LORE

by DORIS BLAKE

NEW shoes as well as old shoes come under the magic spell, it is writ. To leave them out of the wedding ceremony would be to leave out some popular bride lore.

Some say: Never wear shoes to be married in. You will be squeezed always in your walk of life. It means poverty.

If they are new and hurt your feet it is another sign you will be pinched in money matters.

Don't let another girl try on your wedding shoes before you do or you will not live long and she will get your husband.

If a bride marries in old shoes she will fall heir to much land. It is considered lucky for the groom to polish the shoes in which he is to be married, but not while on his feet.

It is a bad omen if a bride's slippers squeak. It is a sign her lover is a poor, weak specimen and that she will be unhappy.

A Swedish superstition has it that if a bride puts a handful of earth from home in her wedding shoes she will never be homesick. It is supposed to give her the flavor of home so that good luck will follow.

An ancient custom was for the groom to take off his shoe and place the sole of it on the head of the bride to show that she was under subjection to him.

Another Swedish bride lore tale is that the bride would let her shoe or handkerchief drop in the hope the bridegroom from politness would stoop and pick it up and thereby provide his lot to be one of submission and to bend his back all through his married life.

The bride in Germany used to remove her right shoe and fling it among the guests. The one to catch it would be next married.

If the shoe that is thrown after the bride is taken from the left foot, it is supposed to bring better luck.

A German superstition was to turn the bride's shoes upside down in order to keep the demons or elves from letting another woman in her shoes and in her place in the home.

It is unlucky to give your wedding slippers away.

If she tears her wedding shoes, she will be treated harshly by her husband. Nor should she wear out her wedding shoes the first year if she would avoid misfortune.

Wear a piece of paper in your new shoe and you will have an engagement within a month.

If a maid find a pair of shoes, she will wed in a short time.

If a young girl gets a new pair of shoes and drops them on the floor she will be unlucky in her love affairs until they are worn out.

A troubled home awaits the bride who wears striped stockings at the altar.

The girl to whom the bride will give one of her garters will find a lucky mate.

There has always been a good deal of lore about garters and matrimony. Down through centuries comes the custom of making the garters the finishing touch to the bridal toilet. The particular girl friend who is permitted to slip the garter into place will be married herself within the year, and a near and blissful marriage is for the girl friend who makes and presents them to the bride.

THE ASSURED BEGINNER.

DOROTHY had a long letter from Ann Thursday morning. Ann's been having a thoroughly good time, and is enchanted with the loveliness of the north woods. After giving Marion and me a detailed account of all of Ann's doings, Dorothy launched into gossip about her office and finally relieved her mind somewhat of a small worry by talking it out to us.

"I told you, I think, some time ago about my having got a job in our office for a young girl who lives a few doors from our house. She finished high school in February, and about the first of April her mother said she would like to get a job and asked me if there was a chance of having her placed with our firm. She didn't care, the mother told me, how humble a beginning Irene made. All she asked was to have her get into a fine firm like ours; she knew Irene would do the rest. Irene was bright, she said, and had plenty of assurance. She knew it wouldn't be long before her girl would get to the top.

"I knew Irene only slightly. She had impressed me as an unusually bright girl, so when an opportunity came along I introduced her to our office manager, and she was given a job as general utility girl. That is, she has no definitely outlined duties, but is supposed to fill in wherever she can and help each one of us when needed. It's not much of a job, but it's seemed to satisfy both Irene and her mother.

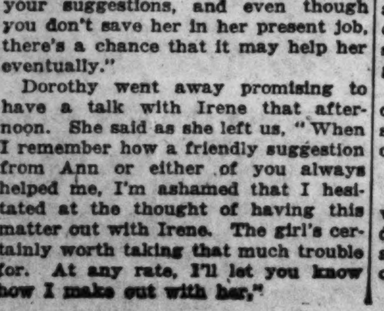
"She's bright enough, all right. Her mother didn't make a mistake about that," Dorothy went on a bit ruefully. "And as for assurance and self-confidence, she's got enough to carry a dozen girls through life. In fact, she's about the nerviest little piece that I've ever come in contact with. She's been with us only since the second week in April, but there isn't an individual in the house that she doesn't know and very few outside of the executives that she doesn't greet by first name. She spends most of her time visiting the other departments in the house and when she's wanted in our office she's never on hand. She seems to have no sense of dicipline and is simply having the time of her life.

"You know, I feel some responsibility about that girl," Dorothy continued. "She got the job on my recommendation, and she's turning out to be nothing but a waster. They won't keep her long, I'm sure. I've been uneasy about her for the last few weeks, because I've noticed the office manager raise his brows and glance in my direction whenever her name is mentioned."

"Have you spoken to her at all about staying at her desk?" Marion inquired.

"No, I haven't," admited Dorothy. "I've been so provoked about the way she's acted and so embarrassed whenever I remember that she's there because of me that I've hardly spoken a word to her for the last two weeks."

"I'd talk to her if I were you, Dorothy," counseled Marion. "You can do it without losing your temper. And just a word of friendly advice to her at this time might give her a start in the right direction. She's so young and inexperienced and a little coaching now may do wonders for her later. You wouldn't begrudge her that little word while there was a chance of its having a good effect upon her, would you?"



"No—o," Dorothy said reluctantly. "If I thought it would do her the least bit of good, I'd talk to her. But I'm afraid it's too late as far as our office is concerned. I heard one of the girls say to another as Irene went skipping out of the office the other day, 'There's nothing slow about that girl. She'll be calling the boss Hank after she's here another two weeks or so.' I could feel myself blushing and was as embarrassed as though she had meant me."

"You're taking your responsibility too hard, Dorothy," Marion told her. "You can't possibly be blamed for the girl's actions. You brought her there in good faith. But I would have a talk with her, if I were you. She'll probably surprise you by responding to your suggestions, and even though you don't save her in her present job, there's a chance that it may help her eventually."

Dorothy went away promising to have a talk with Irene that afternoon. She said as she left us, "When I remember how a friendly suggestion from Ann or either of you always helped me, I'm ashamed that I hesitated at the thought of having this matter out with Irene. The girl's certainly worth taking that much trouble for. At any rate, I'll let you know how I make out with her."

FOURTH OF JULY MENUS.

IN thinking of food entertainment for the Fourth of July it is difficult to decide whether people are most interested in what goes into the picnic basket or on to the holiday dinner table. Our grandmothers used to make a happy compromise, and serve a real dinner on picnic ground tables, a fish dinner, or a meat barbecue.

Hundreds of small towns in our country have picnic grounds adjoining them, and the Fourth of July dinner with patriotic exercises has often opened the picnic season, the men clearing up the place and righting the tables and benches, while the women boiled fish or made a fish chowder to add to the extensive layout of bread and cakes and pies that they brought from home. It is difficult to prepare a home dinner with anything like the spirit that goes into such preparations, yet it must be done, and here are two menus that can be made more or less true to the day:

Iced Fruits
Maryland Fried Chicken, Cream Gravy
Baked Potatoes
Buttered Beets   Baking Powder Biscuits
Garden Lettuce Salad
Rasberry Mousse   Sponge Cake
Roast Peanuts in Little Bags
Foamy Drink

Or if we wish for a fish dinner try this:

Red Sweet Pepper Relish with Water Cress
Boiled Salmon with Butter Sauce
Boiled Potatoes
Cucumber Cutlets   Green Peas
Fruit Salad
Cherry Tarts   Lemonade

If flowers are used on the table perhaps nothing is more suitable than the wild rose. It is dainty in odor and a native of our country.

Fruit Relish.

The ideal glasses in which to serve a fruit relish are the almost compotier sized stem glass, of the old champagne style for the shaved ice, and the inner stemless bowl of the same shape for the fruit. These also come in plate. The fruit may be cut in cubes, for the sake of economy, and may consist of watermelon, cantaloupe, cherries, orange, grapefruit, and almost any combination, or just one of these. It should be well chilled and sprinkled with fine sugar, even if a salad dressing is to be added with the fruit. Or it may be served with any fruit sirup—pineapple sirup is especially good with a few drops of lemon juice—or orange juice is always acceptable.

Maryland Fried Chicken.

It is reckless almost to give a recipe for fried chicken and call it "a la Maryland," because recipes for fried chicken with this tag vary so greatly. It may even be cooked to perfection in a Dutch oven—pot-roasted. A neighbor writes her recipe thus: "Disjoint a full grown tender chicken. Roll each piece in melted butter and flour seasoned with pepper and salt. Bake in a hot oven one-half hour. When the chicken has browned a little pour over all the pieces one cup of cold water. This can be served with or without cream sauce."

Other people fry the chicken until it is well browned, then put it into the oven for 20 minutes, in a closely covered frying pan, with a tiny bit of boiling water. New England prefers to fry chicken carefully disjointed—not chopped in pieces, in salt pork fat. Other sections use lard.

I think that if any one is a careful cook, butter is far and away the best medium—browns best and at a desirable temperature for cooking chicken—and if the frying or sauteing is carefully done, shaking the pan, or lifting pieces with knife and fork frequently, it is best then to cover chicken, set in hot oven, and let it steam in its own juices, but these may have been cooked out and wasted.

Cream Gravy.

In frying chicken, the flour, fat and meat juices are all browned—it is easy to dry up the juices and burn all of these—to make the ideally delicious surface, but part of this brown inevitably is in the pan. To make a cream gravy, pour a bit of boiling water on this and stir until the brown has been dissolved, then add cream and cook five minutes, stirring well.

Buttered Beets.

We may have buttered beets of a magenta red or of a fruit red, according to the way we cook them, but the fruit red is perhaps the best for a Fourth of July menu. However beets are cooked, it should always be gently. With hard boiling all the fiber in them is stiffened, and they never come soft, although really cooked. The Jewish way is to peel beets, cut fine, and cook. Only a tiny bit of water need be used, and since the beets are in pieces, they will cook over a bit of fire, after the water once boils, in from fifteen to twenty minutes. Butter and serve. If cooked whole, next drop into cold water, peel, chop, and butter, press into cups, and turn out on lettuce leaves.

Garden Lettuce Salad.

The nice thick small leaves of some varieties of head lettuce make a salad that goes particularly well with roast lamb or roast chicken. Wash and dry the leaves carefully, put into bowl, which may be garlic rubbed. For four people sprinkle over leaves half a teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of sugar, mix the whole, add one tablespoon of oil, and turn over leaves thoroughly with fork and spoon before adding rest of seasoning. Shake a little paprika into the spoon in which oil was measured, add about a teaspoon of vinegar, and dissolve the paprika in it by stirring. Scatter this over the salad and toss all. It is best to dress tender green leaves the last second before serving them or at the table. Some people abhor the idea of sugar in a salad dressing, but it improves a number of sorts. People used to eat garden lettuce with sugar and vinegar.

Sponge Cake.

For a large cake take five eggs, one cup of sugar, one cup of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder, if you think you must, and a teaspoon of flavoring. Sift the sugar and flour. Separate the eggs and beat the whites to a stiff snow, then beat the sugar carefully into them a little at a time. Fold into them the yolks beaten for five minutes or longer, then fold into whole the flour, add flavoring, and bake in tube pan for forty-five or fifty minutes. Have oven hot enough to heat batter quickly, but lower heat almost at once.

Raspberry Mousse.

Raspberry juice will stand considerable diluting with water, especially when the water is added to the berries and the whole are cooked. The raspberries may be cooked without sugar, the liquid used for a sirup, and this poured over beaten egg whites as in making a cooked icing, this compound to be fluffed with whipped cream and frozen like any mousse. A pinch of salt may be added to the sirup and a little lemon juice to the raspberry juice.

One-half cup of raspberry juice stirred with two cups of sugar till the latter is dissolved, the whole cooked to 220 degrees, then poured over two beaten egg whites with constant beating, will be a good base for a mousse. When it is cool you may fold into it almost any desired amount of whipped cream, but one-half cup whipped will make it fluffy. This will fill a good sized mold, which should first be well cooled.

After the mousse is in it cover with thinly buttered paper and shut on cover closely before packing it in half shaved ice and half salt. If small individual molds are used two hours is ample for freezing it, but in a larger mold it will take a little longer.

Foamy Drink.

Some people like to drink cold foam. Here is a base for a slightly bitter, foamy drink, which may be made exceedingly mild with some cream, as root beer is. A bottle of seltzer water is needed for the foam, but a slight foam may be secured by pouring the liquid from a distance when plain water is used. By the way, all the old books on beverages say take "spring water," and this is the best for this.

A pint of it was used with one-half ounce of hops and one tablespoon of ground ginger, gently boiled for one-half hour. The hop leaves take up water, so there will be about a measuring cup of the liquid at the end of a half hour. Strain this off, add one-half cup of brown sugar, or one-fourth pound would be a more accurate measure, and cook about ten minutes, or to sirup stage. When this has cooled add to this one cup or a little more of cold water. This amount is enough for eight glasses, and will keep for some days.

Fill a glass one-fourth full of the sirup, then add seltzer water till the foam reaches the top of the glass. Half as much cream as sirup, or just as much, may be added before the seltzer water.

Red Sweet Pepper Relish.

Chop a red sweet pepper fine, mix it with an equal measure of butter, spread on narrow strips of toast or in thin toasted sandwiches. Other seasonings may be added.

Boiled Salmon.

Salmon, whether whole or in slices, should be put to boil in boiling water. This water may be seasoned with green sweet pepper, sliced, lemon rind, and what you will. None of the flavors thus added are apparent in the cooked fish except in the improved quality. Without a fish kettle it is best to tie the fish in cheesecloth and lower it into the boiling water. Twenty minutes is a safe allowance for the gentle cooking of the fish. If there is a desire to use it cold, or in made dishes, leave it in the cloth. Hot, it may be served with the old fashioned butter sauce, a Hollandaise sauce, or with just plain melted butter and some lemon juice—use sparingly.

Butter Sauce.

Barely melt one tablespoon of butter and braid into it until the mixture is perfectly smooth one rather large tablespoon of flour. Add one cup of boiling water to it slowly with constant stirring and stir and cook for at least ten minutes—twenty is better. Two or three minutes before serving stir into the sauce one hard boiled egg cut in dice or thin slices. A few capers may be added or it can be varied in numerous ways.

Cucumber Cutlets.

Choose short, bulky cucumbers, and peel carefully, cutting off ends and dividing whole into about three equal parts. Boil or blanch for about five minutes, but not enough so that the seeds will come out. Drain and cool a little, then dip in slightly beaten egg yolk, then in cracker crumbs, and sauté gently in butter, turning once. A piquant sauce may be served with these, or just plain lemon juice, but nothing is needed in addition to make them palatable. If you want to serve the salmon cold these, fresh cooked, warm up the meal, or they may be served with cold meats for the same purpose.

Cherry Tartlets.

Some people will not attempt to make pie crust or tart shells in summer, but the cherry filling which is so attractive in tartlets may be used on pieces of cake. For each cup of preserved cherry juice used, take two teaspoons of granulated tapioca. Cook the two until the whole is thick, put in the cherries which were drained out, cook until they are hot, cool and use for a bright filling.

Grandpa takes Geraldine and Maxine for a walk and to the store most every morning, though the children insist they are taking grandpa.

The other morning they started out, and Geraldine said: "Now, grandpa, don't go on the other side where the store is, 'cause Maxine and me can't go in and buy anything."

She waited, and then said: "But, of course, if you take us in and buy us something, it's your fault and mamma can't scold me." C. A. C.

John had not learned to say all his words properly. One day he was going downtown on the car with his mother and cousin, Jack, whom he always called "Jake."

Jack, of course, did not like this pronunciation of his name, especially in a public place, so he said to the little fellow: "John, why don't you call me Jack?"

John afforded the nearby passengers much amusement by replying: "Please, Jake, I tan't say Jack." K. M. P.

Baby George found an empty cigar box and went over to his grandfather and said, "Have a cigar, grandpa."

On finding it empty, his grandfather said, "Why, George, you haven't any." Baby replied, "Well, can't I just petend?" C. B.

Jimmy and George were told by their mother not to play back of the school building, where there was a swollen creek and plenty of mud. When they returned home at nearly 5 o'clock that evening their shoes were covered with mud.

Then mother said, "Jimmy, I do not see how your conscience let you go to the creek after promising mother you would not go."

DRY CLEANING AT HOME

by Alma Harding

ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF SPOT REMOVERS.

This is the tenth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

GOLD BRAID—Brush free from dust and rub powdered rock alum on it. Then brush well.

Gold Fringe.

For fringe, galloons, etc., dip a pad of cotton in pulverized tartar and rub until bright, taking care not to soil the fabric.

Grape Juice Stains.

This is a rather difficult stain. If warm water, ammonia, and soap do not remove it on white goods, try oxalic acid bleach at once. If not successful try permanganate of potassium and sulphurous bleach. On colors which when tested are not fast you will have to be limited as to soap and ammonia. Sometimes you can at least lessen the stain in colors by stretching it over a bowl and applying ice.

Grass Stains.

These stains can be removed from all kinds of goods by spotting with ether. But for white goods, if you do not happen to have the ether in the house, alcohol will do just as well, or sometimes they yield to soap and warm water. If the color is affected spread on a paste made of soap and cooking soda; some people use molasses. Let stand several hours and wash.

Gravy.

On wash goods soap and water are sufficient; carbontetrachloride for silks.

Greasy Shine.

Often from wear or too much pressing suits, especially those of men, get a shiny surface. Gently rub it with emery paper, steam vigorously by means of a damp cloth and hot iron or over a steaming board. If the color of the goods permits the places may be brushed with an alum solution, dried, and ironed while damp.

Green Nuts.

In white goods sponge repeatedly with water and acohol. Then treat with eau de Javelle and wash and rinse well. Stains from walnuts cannot be removed by this chlorine bleach alone nor by salts. They are like the stains of photographic developers.

Gum Arabic.

It is well to have some of this on hand for moistening laces or embroideries or organdies which you do not want as stiff as starch would make them. Put one ounce of gum arabic in a cup of boiling water, keep the water until all dissolved, strain through a cheesecloth, and bottle what you do not need.

Gutta Percha.

This may be entirely dissolved by carbontetrachloride or alcohol.

Hair Stains.

Oftentimes on the back of men's coat collars there will be an obstinate grease stain from hair. Make a solution of four tablespoonfuls of ammonia, one tablespoonful of salt, and shake thoroughly before applying with a piece of cotton. Another method is to dissolve a little gall soap in warm water and brush the greasy spot and rinse.

Hats.

Straw hats are difficult to clean well because the natural siliceous coatings prevent the liquids from penetrating. Straw must be dried cold or it becomes brittle. For straw, Panamas, and leghorn dissolve two ounces of benzoate of potassium in a quart of hot water and add two ounces of flowers of sulphur to the solution, which may be used hot or cold. Scrub the hat thoroughly with this. Have a box of dry flowers of sulphur nearby and occasionally dip the brush into this. The grit helps cut the dirt. When the hat is clean rinse well in running water and put the hat in the sun to dry and bleach it.

This applies to Panama, except that after rinsing dip the brush into clean water and then into the dry flowers of sulphur and apply to form a paste. Cover the whole outside and put in the sun to bleach. When it is dry, brush out and reblock if necessary.

Another bleach for Panamas is to make a mixture of common sulphur with equal parts of water and peroxide until a soft paste is made. Add a little glue to make it adhere to the hat. Smear on with a small brush. Dry in the sun and brush well. The hat will appear like new. This bleach, however, is not to be applied until the regular cleaning has been done and the hat is thoroughly dry.

Another method advised for cleaning straw hats is to make a thin paste of 2 ounces of pulverized tartaric acid, 2 ounces of pulverized borax, and 2 ounces of bisulphite of soda. Apply with a small brush.

White Felt Hats.

Rub with dry magnesia, plaster of paris, or pipe clay. If the hat is too dirty to be really cleaned by this method, make a paste of carbontetrachloride and magnesia, rub in and let dry.

Colored Felt Hats.

Use dry bran mixed with benzine. Hold the hat upside down so the mixture falls off continually onto a paper or in a bowl.

Silk Hats.

Clean with a sponge dipped in benzine, or, if the nap needs to come up with a soft brush. Wipe with a colored cloth so no lint comes off.

Chip Hats.

Dark Felt Hats.

Unless you are prepared to reblock, use only carbontetrachloride or benzine and work carefully. Hats marked with perspiration should be sponged with a solution of carbonate of soda [soda crystals dissolved in luke warm water].

Hydrogen Peroxide.

This is a safe bleach on all articles, especially good for wool. It should be kept in a dark cool place with a rubber stopper or it loses its strength.

9752—Women's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 44 inch or 3⅓ yards of 54 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 15 inch material or 1¼ yards of 4 inch embroidery for the collar.

1072—Woman's waist. Sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch material with 3½ yards of ribbon.

How to Use the Patterns

FOULARD and georgette would make up prettily in No. 9752. The skirt is cut in two pieces and has a slightly raised waistline. The lower edge can be finished with a deep hem or shaped in scallops or points and bound. The tunic is on the left side of the dress and the balance is kept by the sash which fastens on the right side.

The waist fastens in the back and the sash ends are fastened to the under arm seam and tied in a bow on the right side of the front. If the short sleeves are used they are finished with a deep, loose cuff. Georgette would be just right for these, and for the finish at the neck as well.

If a plain silk or crêpe should be chosen for the dress, bead or other embroidery would be stunning, using it on the front and on the sash ends.

If the dress is fastened down the back it will be best to cut the buttonholes up and down instead of across the hem. If cut across they are apt not to hold the buttons. One often sees an otherwise good looking dress spoiled by having the buttons or other fastenings too far apart down the back, with an ugly gaping between. Be sure to apply your own width measure—across the upper part of the back—to the back of the pattern, for, while the dress should not be loose there, it should be the right width. Then have the fastenings not over three-quarters of an inch apart.

On the foulard frock it would be pretty to use georgette for trimming and finish the ends of the sash with it, having cuffs, collars, and sash ends picoted.

Use French seams on the waist and skirt, and do not make them too narrow. When trimming the edge of the seam after the first sewing take care not to trim too close to the stitching, else you will have a raw edge in spots when the seam is turned.

No. 1068 is one of those good looking models for the separate skirt, of which every woman probably has several showing slightly different designs and materials. There are beautiful silks for sports skirts, and one sees many beautiful ones in the shop windows; then there are many wash materials from which to choose. Of course, one can buy good materials, and if one makes one's own clothes a great saving is effected. In the wash materials there are plain and striped ratinés, flabardines, linens, etc., from which to choose. White is always good, and so are the rust or beige colored, striped in black—for those who can wear stripes.

This pattern is cut in two pieces, with the seams some gored. The width at the bottom for a 26 waist measure is 1½ yards. The waistline is slightly raised, and a pattern of a good looking plain belt is included in the pattern. The pockets are a most attractive feature, being quite unusual looking with the prettily shaped trimming piece that is inserted in both openings.

The skirt opens down the left side, the seam being left open there for that purpose. Finish the opening with a faced and extension hem, and have the snaps not over three-fourths of an inch apart. Sew them far enough in from the edge so they will not show at all when the skirt is fastened.

A simple, attractive looking blouse pattern, No. 1072, is shown today, that will please many, I am sure. It is about as easy to make as can be, and at the same time, if becoming colors and materials are chosen, it will be smart and pretty looking. The shoulder seams extend down the length of the short sleeves, and this can be made decorative by setting small buttons on close together, trimming with ribbon binding or embroidery. The pattern suggests the use of ribbon as a binding for the neck and sleeves, and it is a good idea. The front is gathered at the shoulders, always a good feature. The front is slashed a certain depth for an opening, and a little vest is attached on the under side.

It depends on what sort of wear the blouse is to be given as to the material chosen. Nothing is prettier than georgette, chiffon, or one of the crêpes for a dressy blouse; then there are the handkerchief linens, sheer batistes, and cambrics.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

ON WITH THE FURS.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Velvet coats are coming in! I thought some movement of that kind would start in time for the first warm spell. All of the houses are busy, of course, on them and the fur coats. Rat will be fashionable, so Mme. Wanda at the Maison Patou was telling me this afternoon, and a thing called flying squirrel—distinguished for being soft and cheap. Don't on this account throw away your silver fox and your chinchilla. The new so-called furs are coming in for the benefit of those who otherwise complete in their lives do not find it convenient to own the others. Be assured that it will be all right for you to wear your martens and your sables.

Skirts are getting longer and fuller. Mme. Wanda says that the women are getting tired of the thin silhouette, although I can see no signs of it, and I should think a person would get just as tired of being thin as of being young, and I cannot think that the slender outline will altogether die.

As for length, the skirts are getting longer in places, but there is always something about them to mark the high water line of that historic season when they were acknowledged even in Paris to be short. An underskirt will maintain the old length, and the drapery will come over it in scallops, coquetting with the ground in places, but mounting to the altitude of the foundation skirt in others.

There is an awfully delicious cartoon in La Vie Parisienne which bears the caption, "It Is True the Skirts Are Getting Longer," and promenading down the center of the cover is a girl with her skirts lowered to her knees.

Little capes will also be good form, and short wraps generally.

And with such items of general information the steady stream of models flowing forever through the arteries of the French capital shows the diversity for which the people are known. Unity in diversity—that is the definition of the French in their activities. There is nothing in art or in nature from which they will not draw for their inspiration.

The first offering shows a sash shaped like a bat's wing. It is in crêpe georgette of powder blue, made in the straight line dear to the present mode and to Americans. There is a diagonal band that cuts across the bodice like a drum major's sash, and at the point where it touches the skirt it meets the bat winged sash that acts as a panel and falls in points far below the hem. All of the weight of the dress falls on one side, and this gives what the artist calls an amusing line.

Gray taffeta cape with guinea fowl feathers in bands on lining.

Yellow velvet dress with wing sleeves and side train. By Worth.

The costume was seen on one of the smart demi-mondaines when she was dining at Ciro's, and when she went out she was clever enough to throw her mantel—of heavy silver and yellow broadcloth—over the same shoulder. It is wonderful the way the French dramatize their clothes!

Of course, you've heard of the petal movement—I've been talking about it, haven't I, for quite a time. Vionnet is the author, and petals are raging now instead of the points, the handkerchief effects, by which she made her name.

The accompanying dress is composed of petals, and the creator of this robe has gone the creator of flowers one better, for these petals are arranged on the bias—something that no flower thus far has dared to put over. They are of black, brilliant emerald green, and purple chiffon, and they go to make a gay looking frock indeed. It is worn by Mlle. Errazuris, a charming South American belle, whose father makes fine wine and patronizes art—modern art—and he evidently believes in encouraging it in his own family, for the dress is both art and modern.

About all you see at this time of year are evening clothes. The Parisians, you know, do not wear lingerie dresses in the city, even in the summer. They go round wrapped up in furs, or else they stay at home in their boudoirs until time to begin that elaborate dinner toilette of theirs. In their Rolls-Royces they ride out into the Bois, where they dine magnificently and dance under the trees in the cool of night.

Here is one of the capes seen there this week. A rather dark, oriental looking woman wore it. Her forehead was bound in a rich tiara of emeralds and beautiful pearls. The cape was of silver gray taffeta, and the trimming was on the inside. It consisted of two bands of the feathers of guinea fowls running horizontally round it, and a collar also of these. The dress under it was of black crêpe, with a simple belt and a side panel of drapery.

Maybe we might make a generalization that the wing movement is in. The long, wing shaped sleeves are the feature of this fourth garment, and this garment is the feature in the trousseau of Mme. Arbuthnot-Leslie, a bride of the springtime. The gown is by Worth, and it is of golden yellow velvet, made in perfectly straight, narrow outline, with a train falling from one side. Search a train anywhere these days excepting in the middle of the back. The entire dress is of the yellow velvet, and it is accompanied by gold slippers, fastened with brilliant rhinestone buckles.

LOVE LETTERS

THE BIRTHDAY GIRL.

DEAR LITTLE LADY BUG MINE: I have just turned over the month of May on my calendar, and I see that in three days my little girl is to have her fourth birthday. Daddy is writing this birthday letter to his two dear ones to let them know he will be there in spirit when the cake comes in blazing with its four candles. My precious little one must blow out a candle for daddy, and make a wish that he will get well fast, so that when the cake comes in with five pink candles, he will surely be there. Won't we have a merry time?

Until then, my beloved little girls—for you both are veritable little ones whom I love, and my greatest happiness is to watch over you and care for you—until then, I am fighting desperately this dread white plague, and how futile would be the battle without my two little soldiers at home.

It is because of you that I cling to this life—you, who make everything worth while and beautiful. While I am far away, I know you are praying and fighting with me. How it helps, how it helps.

But now for the birthday again. My nurse has promised to go down to the village and buy a lovely gift for my lady bug. I hope it will please you and give you as much pleasure as daddy has in sending it.

Now back to my battle I go, that I may sooner come to the two I love most in all the world.

With a million kisses and four extra hugs for my wee lady, and all the love of my heart for the birthday girl's sweet mother, I am your adoring

FATHER.

Recipe for Success.

"Dear Miss Blake: I don't know what's the matter with me. I am the same in business as in love. I do not seem to get on. I go just so far, and then I lose out somehow. What can be the matter? JAMES."

Here's a little recipe for you to try, James. Success is the name of the cake it turns out. To three parts hard work add one part ability; spice with a little luck, and cover the whole with a layer of staying power.

Let Him Explain.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am engaged to a young man, but the other night I saw him taking a walk with another girl, and I do not think it fair, as I have been true to him. I would like to tell him about it, but do not know how. Perhaps you could answer me. "X. Z."

Come straight out with it, X. Z. You may be misjudging him. Give him a chance to explain. It may have been an accidental meeting, a perfectly explainable cousin—but give him a chance first.

Mother Got His Letter.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a pretty girl, and she said she loved me. We have been sending one another letters for a month until one day her mother got my last letter, and I didn't see her for two weeks. What can I do to see her. FRANK."

What did you say in the letter, Frank? Nothing, I hope, her mother could take offense at. Can't you go to call at the girl's house? Your information is scant, so my advice is a bit limited, too.

THE VALUE OF BEAUTY CULTURE AS A PROFESSION

WE often hear it said that every woman should learn something by which she could make an independent living. This applies to the woman of means as well as to the young girl who knows full well that she must become an earner the moment her school work is finished.

How frequently we find women who have been reared in luxury thrown suddenly upon their own resources without one idea as to how they should support themselves, and possibly with more than one child dependent upon them for support and education.

To take up music teaching or fine sewing is ill-paid drudgery. To take up school teaching or trained nursing might be a little more remunerative, but the nervous strain of these professions makes them undesirable, besides the remuneration is limited to a certain fixed amount per week or month; and, while it never can go beyond that, it often falls short of it.

With the profession of Beauty Culture it is quite different. It is possible to make in one week as much as a trained nurse could earn in a month. It is possible for the well-trained Beauty Culturist to earn as much in one month as the highest paid school teacher can earn in four months. This is not an exaggerated estimate. It is a proven fact.

SINGLE COURSES

Students wishing to take a certain subject with a view of specializing in that can select from the following list. We can give entire time to one subject, but we earnestly advise at least three courses, as we then can offer a reduction and the student has three chances to earn money instead of one.

HAIRDRESSING

This course includes Shampooing, Bleaching, Dyeing, Scalp Massage for the beauty of the hair, Bang Cutting, Hair Clipping, Cutting, Singeing, etc. Also lessons in all the new fashions, as well as fancy Hairdressing for Masque Balls, Colonial Styles and Bal Poudre fetes, also Japanese Coiffures and all kinds of character Hairdressing.

FACIAL MASSAGE

Includes Complexion Beautifying, Treatment for Sagging Muscles, Treatment for Puffiness around the eyes, and Crowsfeet, Treatment for Blackheads, which also includes the Ozone "Pack" Treatment, reducing of Coarse Pores and Treatment for Wrinkles, including the Vibro-Electric Method.

SKIN BLEACHING

This course teaches the instantaneous bleaching of the Face, Neck, Arms and Bust. This can be done in one sitting and your patient is ready for any function, as by our method there is no irritating whatsoever.

ELECTROLYSIS

In this course we teach the permanent and painless removal of superfluous hair, warts and moles. This is work with the Electric Needles. It is a very important branch of Beauty Culture and one which is very remunerative.

MANICURING

Includes the care of the hands and the shaping and care of the finger nails, the removal of white spots and corrugations, the cultivation of "Crescents" and how to keep the nails lustrous and pink.

SCALP TREATMENT

For the woman who wishes to specialize in Scalp Treatment, we have a very comprehensive course which includes the Hot Oil Treatment and Hot Oil Shampoo. The lessons in Scalp Treatment teach how to improve the circulation; how to relieve dandruff and all troubles which tend to cause a loss of hair and which cause premature grayness.

MARCEL WAVING

This course is very necessary to the woman who wishes to become a perfect artist in Hairdressing. We have a special course in this subject for experienced Hairdressers who have not learned Marcel Waving. We give the pupil a special teacher who will continue with the lessons until the subject has been mastered.

HAIR CUTTING COURSE

This teaches the bobbing of hair for little girls, also shingling for boys, and the cutting of fringe for ladies and children.

SCIENTIFIC BODY MASSAGE

Scientific Body Massage is a potent factor in preserving and enhancing the beauty of women, and in our work we find that they depend largely on Swedish Movements and Scientific Body Massage to acquire symmetry and litheness of form, and the suppleness and flexibility of the muscles, as well as the erect carriage, which keeps them looking years younger than they are.

This is a very valuable course, not only for its beauty possibilities, but also for its power in maintaining a healthy, vigorous and beautiful body even to old age, and because the services of the successful Masseuse are in demand by physicians always, and because every one knows the therapeutic value of correct Body Massage.

TURKISH BATHS

This course teaches, besides body massage, the salt glow, the correct method of bathing, also the value of Hydropathy in maintaining health and vigor as well as suppleness of body.

ELECTRIC LIGHT BATHS

This is a very interesting course and teaches the toning of the system by the eliminative process.

OUR SCHOOL OF MANUFACTURING

Is under the supervision of women who are artists in their line. Every Switch, Braid, Puff, Curl, Chignon and Postiche of every kind is subjected to a rigid inspection. No coarse work is ever allowed to pass out of the work room, no matter how inexpensive the article is. It must be up to Burnham Standard. This is a splendid training for the young woman who wishes to fit herself to establish a business which will never fail her no matter where she is located or how dull times may be.

Our graduates are scattered all over this country and some of them are in Europe, all doing well and many of them on the road to fortune.

Bible School' for Children Feature of Methodist Camp

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

MANY improvements in the camp at Des Plaines will greet members of the Methodist church when they gather there Wednesday for the beginning of their sixty-second annual camp meeting.

Among the improvements are better housing accommodations for campers, a new auditorium, 600 feet of new sidewalk, a new meeting house, new parking places for automobiles, and better eating facilities.

The camp will continue until Aug. 21, although the meeting proper ends July 17. From July 18 to Aug. 21 other assemblies will hold the attention of the campers.

At least 2,500 persons are expected to attend each day, and accommodations for that many have been arranged. Sundays and holidays the number is expected to reach 5,000, it was said.

There is a new house for the benefit of one hundred preachers, and a rest room has been built for women and a house for children and babies to be cared for by appointed women.

No automobiles will be allowed in the picnic grounds, so that the lives of children will not be endangered. There will be no sports on Sunday, as that day will be observed quietly and in prayer.

A new feature of the meeting will be the Bible school for children up to 16 years of age, which will be conducted simultaneously with the meeting proper. The children will be divided into groups, according to their ages.

There will be an assembly known as the employed young people's institute. Services will be arranged so that persons working can attend such services and leave in time for work the next day.

From July 29 to Aug. 8 there will be the Des Plaines Mutual Chautauqua; the Methodist Girls' camp from Aug. 15 to Aug. 21.

The program is in charge of the Rev. Allison F. Clark, the Rev. Polemus H. Swift, and the Rev. Fred D. Stone, superintendents of the three Chicago districts.

Friday has been designated as woman's day, and among the speakers at that time will be Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Bishop Charles L. Mead of Denver, Prof. T. O. Eiselon of the Garrett Biblical institute, and others.

The Chicago Church federation, in coöperation with a number of other bodies organized under the Chicago Americanization council, is endeavoring to promote a general observance of the Independence day anniversary throughout the Chicago churches in the use of the "American Creed" and "Pledge to the Flag," at the services today. It is asked that the American flag be displayed in the church.

The American creed: "I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic, a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable, established upon these principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity, for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag; and to defend it against all enemies."

Pledge to the flag: "I pledge allegiance to the American flag and to the republic for which it stands—one nation indivisible with liberty and justice for all."

After the American colonies declared their independence and separated from England, the little American mission of the church of England organized itself as a national church, with its own constitution, adopted at its first general convention, in 1785. At the same convention the church passed a resolution in regard to the national holiday, declaring that "the Fourth of July shall be observed forever as a day of thanksgiving for the inestimable blessings of religious and civil liberty vouchsafed to the United States of America."

A carload of young fellows, eager to begin their camping trip, will entrain Tuesday for Lake Amy Bell, Wis., where they will attend Camp Houghteling, named for the late James L. Houghteling of the firm of Houghteling, Peabody & Co., prominent bankers of Chicago and founder of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. The camp is for older boys of the Episcopal church and will draw its attendance from Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa, as well as from Chicago and vicinity.

July 5 to 18 these boys will lead an ideally happy out of door life. From 6:30 o'clock in the morning—when they begin the day with setting up exercises and a swim—to 9:15 o'clock in the evening—when they leave their dying camp fire at the call of tattoo—these boys will have every minute of each day filled to the brim with interesting study or well planned, healthful amusement. The camp typifies the church's adaptation of the Pittsburgh idea. These boys will be given intensive training in leadership by a program which cleverly combines study, games, and sports in a way which means a really good time to a regular boy.

This vacation camp conference is conducted under the auspices of the national office of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, headquarters in Philadelphia.

The program of the Unitarian Laymen's league, which made possible the attendance of 101 ministers at the Harvard Summer School of Theology last year, has been extended to include Meadville Theological school in 1921, and also a Sunday school institute at the Isles of Shoals for laymen.

To every minister has gone the invitation to make his choice between Cambridge and Chicago; and to the 228 chapters of the league the request that two members be selected for the instruction and inspiration that will be furnished at Star island from June 23 to Aug. 6. The summer school for ministers at Harvard will run from Aug. 15 to Sept. 2.

The courses which will be offered will cover the fields of philosophy, systematic theology, church history, sociology, comparative religions, Old and New Testament, and kindred topics. Living quarters at Chicago will be furnished in the building of the Baptist Missionary society, about half an hour by surface cars from the university. This building is situated in a rather humble neighborhood, but has excellent facilities for fellowship and community life.

Most religious people, whether they are members of churches or not, have a great desire for Christian unity, but they despair of it because they do not know how many other people all over the world share that desire. A day in the office of the World Conference on Faith and Order, 174 Water street, Gardiner, Me., would fill them with hope.

On one day recently the secretary received letters from South Africa, Italy, Germany, the United States, Czecho-Slovakia, Madagascar, England, India, China, and Japan, all expressing interest or reporting progress. Of the printed matter received the only important papers were from Italy, Germany, and South India. While the World Conference on Faith and Order does not undertake direct efforts for reunion, but only to prepare the way for them, its daily mail, of which this day's mail is not an unusual sample, shows that its work is appreciated. If people would send for the publications explaining the movement they would find it full of encouragement.

The basis of the movement, in which all the great Trinitarian communions throughout the world except Rome have taken official part, is the growing conviction that conference affords the only means for the solution of those questions on which the churches have been, and still are, divided, and which must be squarely faced before the worldwide desire for the worldwide and visible unity of the church of Christ can ever be fulfilled. The progress already made in the world conference movement shows how well founded that conviction is, and how not only ecclesiastics and theologians, but lay people, can coöperate effectively toward that end.

The Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent is chairman and Robert H. Gardiner is secretary of the World Conference on Faith and Order.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

ONE OF THE INTRUDERS.

THAT coeducation is an excellent plan is conceded by the most eminent authorities, and I now heartily agree with them, although there were days not so long ago when I most bitterly denounced it. In fact, when I entered law school and found some three or four "females" enrolled in the same class, I was pretty much disgusted.

Finding that some of the other fellows entertained similar sentiments, we agreed to politely ignore the intruders, as we called them, and freeze 'em out. So we ignored, not so politely, I fear; but they simply wouldn't freeze, stayed on to finish the course, and passed the bar exams at the first attempt, which a good many of the polite ignorers failed to do.

After admission to the bar I went to my home town and began that painful ordeal of starting a practice. It was slow and discouraging, however, as the two older lawyers in the town had things pretty well sewed up for themselves.

Gradually little cases began coming my way, and finally I landed two big probates. They would mean great things for me. Just had my petitions filed and hopes high when along came that eventful April 6, when Uncle Sam tossed his hat in the ring and our country became a party to the world's great war.

I couldn't wait to get in, so I got busy straightening out my affairs so that I could enlist without delay. To whom could I turn over those cases? Certainly those older lawyers would be glad to handle them, but I was reluctant to throw any business their way, remembering how ungracious they had been to me.

I consulted a recent edition of our college paper and found the names of the fellows who were practicing near by. I got in touch with several of them, but they were like myself, eager to get into service and not accepting new cases.

Just then I came upon an item referring to Miss Manners, who had graduated in my class, but whom I had neither seen nor heard of in several years. She had opened an office in the next town. In my few years' struggle for a place in the business world I had lost some of my foolish boy notions regarding woman's sphere, but I must admit that my resolve to enlist the services of Miss Manners was prompted more by a selfish desire to get those cases off my hands than anything else.

I called her on the phone, made an appointment, and that evening turned things over to her. A few days later I entered the R. O. T. C., and was stationed some few miles from home.

During the months that followed I was a busy fellow working for a commission and spending my evenings sitting on a cot writing to Miss Manners or standing in line trying to get a long distance phone call through, and you may guess that those probates were not our sole topic of interest. I had fallen, and fallen hard.

At first I received little encouragement, but my persistence was finally rewarded, and before I left for overseas she had promised to become my wife, which promise she fulfilled shortly after my discharge from service. So successful had she become in her profession that we had plenty to keep us busy working together.

I'm having to manage alone nowadays, though, as our latest case, a rollicking chap of 6 months, keeps his co-ed mother pretty well occupied.

Catching a Run.

Coming back from lunch I discovered a run in my silk hose. Part of our office faces a court. I immediately went into one of these rooms and proceeded to mend my stockings. Had my foot perched comfortably on a drawer, and was sewing hurriedly. Heard voices; looking up, to my surprise and embarrassment saw that four men were enjoying the spectacle from a window across the court. I made my exit.

An Irate Young Husband.

What my mother always claimes was her most embarrassing moment was an episode which occurred in the first year of her wedded life.

Her husband was a railway postal clerk in the early days before civil service reforms were instituted. It was mother's custom to make frequent trips with father in the mail car; also to go to the station to bid him goodby and to meet him there on his return from trips.

On one such occasion she had donned her most festive raiment. It was the fashion of the moment to wear gowns of a rich crimson color in soft woolen material. With these gowns were also worn tiny hats or bonnets, trimmed in red. Of course, mother's trousseau included an especially chic outfit of this sort—bustel, flounces, and all, which father rather disapproved of.

One day dad had just carefully placed a chair upon the track beside the car to assist his brilliantly attired bride in climbing up the high steps into the car. The train was not made up, and the engine had just coupled on to the mail car when the engineer spied mother on the chair. Suddenly with a carefully regulated jerk he started the engine and raced up the yards with the mail car and the mail clerk, leaving the bride upon her pedestal, resembling in her gay plumage some new kind of human switch standard or danger signal.

My father seldom swore, but on this occasion he managed to make the air snap and crackle. The engineer, astonished and chastened, gently backed the car down to a spot exactly opposite the woman on the chair, and kept it there till she had safely ascended.

Mother said she could never quite decide which was more mortifying—her conspicuous position or the language used by her usually suave, dignified husband.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

"I am a mother of three children. Last year my husband had an operation and now he is working short hours, after having been out of work a long time. Has any kind reader some old clothes or shoes? I am badly in need of clothes for myself, husband, and children. I can wear size 38 or 40. Shoes 5½ or 6. Trousers, for my husband, 33x33, shoes 7½ or 8. My husband has only one pair of trousers he wears for work. Size 9 shoes for girl of 5; size 12½ shoes for boy of 7; size 13 or 13½ shoes for girl of 9. I am handy and can make over. I will greatly appreciate anything.

To anyone disposed to help, this letter makes its own appeal.

"My daughter and her husband died over a year ago, leaving three little girls for me to raise. The ages of the children are 11, 9, and 8. Will you remember me if any outgrown clothing is offered? I am handy at sewing and could make things over if I had a sewing machine. Please do not forget us.

GRANDMOTHER."

"I am a boy 16 years of age, and lame. My mother and father are dead. I live with a married sister. Her husband has been out of work, so it is hard for her to buy clothing for me. I wear trousers size 29 or 30, shoes size 6, and shirts size 14. I shall appreciate any help offered me. L. B."

I trust that the plea from this boy is not in vain. I'll gladly send along his address.

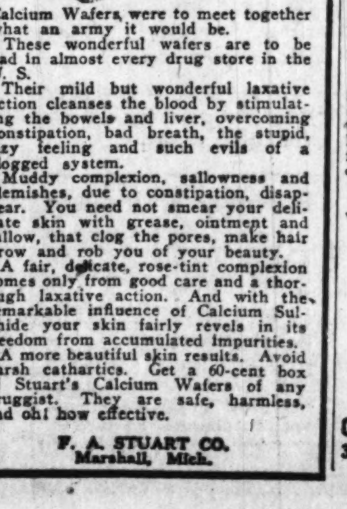
"Would you kindly print following request? Has any mother some outgrown boy's suits—size 4-5—which I could have? I would appreciate them highly. My husband has been out of work for the last four months and I can't buy anything just now.

"MRS. E. F."

I hope assistance may be given Mrs. F. and her boys. Their need is urgent.



For a Rose Tint Complexion

Bring It Out by Ridding the Face of Pimples Through the Use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers

If all those who have acquired the loveliest complexion by using Stuart's Calcium Wafers were to meet together what an army it would be.

These wonderful wafers are to be had in almost every drug store in the U. S.

Their mild but wonderful laxative action cleanses the blood by stimulating the bowels and liver, overcoming constipation, bad breath, the stupid, lazy feeling and such evils of a clogged system.

Muddy complexion, sallowness and blemishes, due to constipation, disappear. You need not smear your delicate skin with grease, ointment and tallow, that clog the pores, make hair grow and rob you of your beauty.

A fair, delicate, rose-tint complexion comes only from good care and a thorough laxative action. And with the remarkable influence of Calcium Sulphide your skin fairly revels in its freedom from accumulated impurities.

You Wouldn't Keep Your Foot in Splints---

Even when you have to wear splints for a broken bone, the doctor removes them as soon as possible. If he didn't, the muscles would eventually atrophy—just shrivel away.

When you wear a shoe with a stiff shank, it's just as if your arch were bound against a splint. But when you wear the Cantilever Shoe the flexible arch of your shoe, though it gives support, bends with the arch of your foot. The muscles are encouraged to exercise and grow strong, and flat feet are prevented and corrected.

The wonderful feeling of ease in Cantilever Shoes is partly due to the natural inner sole-line. Partly to the proper placing of the heels. But chiefly, it is because Cantilevers are made to accommodate the human foot instead of being accommodated at the expense of it.

You'll like the styles, too. Fine leathers, well-made shoes. Widths AAAAA to EE.

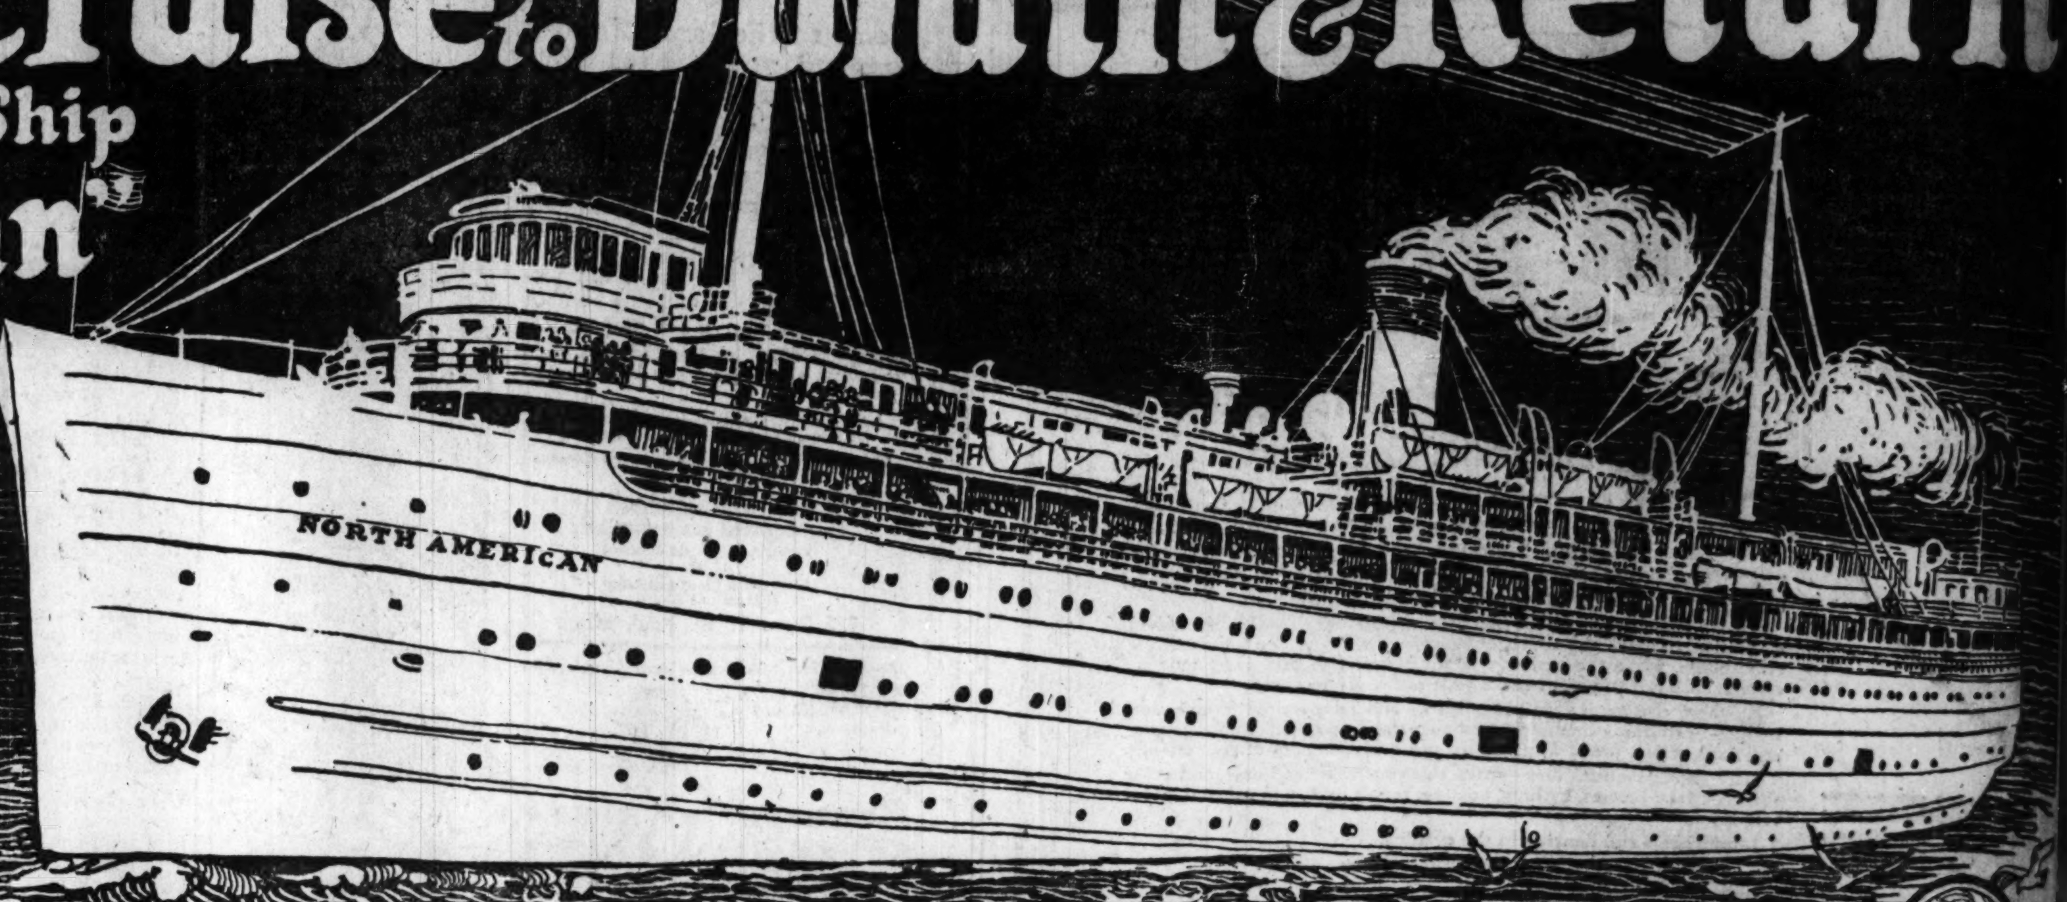
A Week's Cruise to Duluth & Return

On the Big New Cruising Ship "North American"

$72.50

Meals & Berth Included



A WEEK OF JOYFUL RECREATION AND SIGHTSEEING

Chicago to Duluth and Return Via Lake Michigan, Mackinac Island, Locks at the "Soo," Beautiful St. Mary's River, Portage Canal, Lake Superior, Lake Huron and Georgian Bay (30,000 Islands).

Think of the pleasure on a warm, sultry day of leaving the heat and cares of the city behind you and gliding out into the cool, refreshing waters for a week's cruise through four great lakes—over 2,200 miles of beautiful scenery, shoreline, islands, rivers and bays—care-free, you will give yourself up to a spell of enjoyment—you will eat well and sleep well, and after a too quickly ending week you will return home thoroughly refreshed and invigorated. If you enjoy seeing places of interest, the numerous stops and short cruising distance from the shore, during the greater part of the trip, offer sights of wonder and beauty that are sure to please you. You can be quiet and secluded, if desired, or if you enjoy a real good time, there is the continual round of deck games, cards, etc., during the day, and dancing, musicales and other entertainments in the evening.

Combined with all these pleasures, you will have conveniences and comforts on this magnificent steamer equal to those on the best Atlantic liners. The dining service and food is equal to that of the best hotels. Steamer equipped with wireless and every modern device for safety of passengers.

The "North American" leaves Chicago every Monday at 1:30 P. M. (Central Time), traveling directly to Mackinac Island, where ample time is allowed to drive around the island and visit the many historical points of interest. Leaving Mackinac Island, she enters the beautiful St. Mary's River, noted for its 50 miles of wonderful scenic features, and stops at Sault Ste. Marie. Here you pass through the big canal and see the immense ships raised and lowered through the locks, next to the largest in the world.

Leaving the "Soo," you enter Lake Superior and head via Portage-Canal for Houghton (Hancock), home of the famous copper mines; then on to Duluth.

After spending several hours in that city of beautiful parks and homes, the return is made, again through Sault Ste. Marie and into Lake Huron, then into Georgian Bay, passing close to many of the 30,000 Islands and stopping at Parry Sound. From there directly to Mackinac Island and Chicago, arriving home Monday morning—a week's vacation that brings you back rested and feeling fine.

Call or write for pamphlet and full information about this wonderful trip.

A BID FOR SALES ABILITY.

There is now open for an ace high candy salesman or a man selling a kindred line and possessing otherwise the essential qualifications a splendid Illinois territory, including such good towns as Chicago Heights, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Kankakee, Pontiac, and Streator.

For the man whose demonstrated ability in advanced salesmanship qualifies him to consideration this is the call of opportunity. The one whom we know would be the biggest success financially is by training and inclination a clever merchandiser rather than a good order getter, who always senses the larger selling chance—the opening to develop a hundred dollar buyer into a thousand dollar purchaser. And by his intelligence and compelling enthusiasm stimulates and sustains the retailer to resultful action. It demands an assertive personality, health, and vigor to get it over; besides a sound knowledge of the business, as the line is highly competitive.

Let it be clearly understood this is no sinecure. It requires ability CONTINUOUSLY APPLIED. Gauged by what other high class men are doing, the territory available will pay a man of the same caliber on a commission basis and bonus around $5,000 clear the first year. Our representatives will reside within the territory, covering it by automobile every thirty days.

Our candy line in range is complete and the quality never so perfect as today. Our prices are conspicuously lower and the demand constant; indeed, our plants are now shipping a million pounds a week. We are the largest manufacturers in the industry and dominate our market. It is for the exceptional candy salesman to decide whether his future lies with us or competing against us. Correspondence also invited from downstate men and an early interview will be accorded those applicants [only] writing us fully. Their letters will be held strictly confidential. Local men should give their telephone numbers. Photographs submitted will be safely returned. Address O G 251, Tribune.

ABLE SALESMEN FOR ESTABLISHED BUSINESS.

The addition of several specialties makes it necessary for us to enlarge our sales force; proposition has been selling with great success for the past seven years; men have made from $5,000 to $20,000 per year, and some even more, in commissions; it is a proposition that enables a conscientious, hard working man to get the very biggest possible returns on his efforts; sold to a wide field of prospects in small towns and metropolitan centers; it is a new, attractive, profit making proposition for retail merchants; neither stocks nor bonds, but a machine now used in many of the highest class retail stores in America, and we have scores of letters saying it pays more per square foot of floor space than anything else the merchants have in their stores; even without advertising this would be a big success, but we do advertise nationally, in trade papers and through the mail; our system of co-operation has been pronounced by many salesmen to be faultless; naturally this proposition is not open to everybody, but to men who can qualify we will be glad to give full particulars. If you are over 26 years of age, have a good, clean record, and willing to work, see MR. HOUGH, Hotel Brevoort, Monday and Tuesday, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. If out of town or unable to call, write.

THE TIRE BUSINESS IS BOOMING

An Income of $250 Weekly Is Ordinary.

Tires Are Wearing Out by the Million Every Day.

The greater percentage of car owners today cannot afford to buy a new tire every time they have a blowout. Therefore fortunes are being made in the Tire Repair and Rebuilding Business.

You can establish yourself in this business for less than $500, and, as we furnish you with free instruction, free tools, and turn you out a full-fledged expert Tire Repairman in three weeks, there is no logical reason why you should not take advantage of this proposition if you are the least bit interested. We are also in touch with all of the renting agencies in Chicago and vicinity and can refer you to many choice tire shop locations.

Call any time, day or evening, and let us show you one of the largest and best equipped Tire Repair Shops and Schools in the United States. You will be under no obligation whatever.

Open from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily and until 6 p. m. Sundays.

PAIGE REBUILT PRICES REDUCED

When Bird-Sykes says "rebuilt Paige" they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up" and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear — replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repainting body — refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every rebuilt Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in perfect mechanical condition, and if anything turns out unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes make it good without cost to the purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage Charge.

We do not ask our customers to pay the exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Paige on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.
